Just Room for the Derrick

By JUDSON C. WELLIVER

THE Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, widely regarded as the world's most imposing natural wonder, has suddenly taken on a new and startling interest.

A few years ago, when it was as inaccessible as the North Pole, John Wesley Powell won fame by making the first trip through it. A little later another adventurer conceived opening a trail from the canyon's rim down to the river, a mile below. It seemed grotesque, but the impossible was accomplished, and its accomplishment has made the canyon's innermost wonders accessible to thousands of tourists each year. They come from all quarters of the world every season in greater numbers to traverse the Bright Angel Trail. That trail is truly a monument to the daring and devotion of its builder. He worked at it for ten years, almost without help or financial backing, at one period spending almost half a year alone in the vast gorge. But today Ralph Cameron, builder of the Bright Angel Trail, occupying a seat in the United States Senate voted to him by the people of Arizona, has his reward.

Greatest Artificial Lake

But the conquest of the canyon had hardly been realized when the engineers discovered a new use for it. At Boulder Canyon, Arizona, the greatest dam in the world, a third of a mile high, should impound a lake which, spreading over a great area in Arizona and Utah, would be, next to Lake Michigan, the largest fresh water body entirely within the United States. Harnessed to mighty turbines, the water, falling hundreds of feet, would produce a power greater than Niagara, and irrigate an area several times that of the Nile Basin, which served for uncounted centuries as granary of the ancient world.

The Boulder Canyon dam has not yet been built, but the people of the Southwest are as confident of its construction as that the Colorado will continue to flow between its giant walls.

Now comes a new chapter in the romance of the Colorado. The intrepid "wildcatters" of the oil industry, scouting for new sources of petroleum, have brought in an oil well right in the canyon! Drilling from a narrow shelf at the gorge's bottom, they have overcome unbelievable obstacles. Perpendicular walls of rock grimly forbade construction of road or trail to transport machinery and supplies. From the river a succession of rock walls rise in gargantuan terraces to a height of 3,000 feet.

The "Great American Desert"

The little Mormon town of Moab, eighteen miles up-stream, is the nearest supply base. But Moab is not a railroad town; a drive of forty miles is still required to reach the Denver & Rio Grande railroad. Salt Lake City is 250 miles away, to the northwest.

Standing at the foot of the derrick which marks the site of the new oil well, one's back is fairly against an 800 foot cliff, which is matched by another immediately across the river. Looking up, one imagines that if he could climb one of these walls he would be "outside." But, trying this, he finds himself on a plateau or terrace, with another cliff a little way ahead. To climb this, in turn, would only bring him face to face with still another cliff, and so on till he had mounted full 3,000 feet from the river.

Not only must this succession of cliffs be mounted, but to traverse the rock terraces, gashed and torn, is only less difficult. And finally, the ascent to the outer rim accomplished, one confronts a waste of ridged, seamed and boulder-strewn desert, endless save for distant mountain peaks.

Manifestly, the oil "wildcatters" could not make roads, so they built a flat-bottomed boat and floated down from Moab. It was a daring performance, for the stream twists constantly; unseen rocks and shifting bars add to its difficulties, and the canyon's perpendicular walls threaten instant wreck.

But it was done. Materials were brought, a derrick reared, machinery placed, a camp built and drilling begun. Now, with oil flowing from a depth of 2,035 feet, the Crane Creek well is suddenly the wonder of the whole intermountain country.

A Maze of Difficulties

Just about a year from the beginning of drilling the well began to flow, with every indication that when the drill goes somewhat deeper into the producing sand it will be an important producer. For the present, drilling has been suspended, awaiting provision for taking the oil away. It is doubtful if in all the history of the 600,000 wells that have been drilled in this country, largely in regions difficult of access, any one has ever presented such a category of obstacles as this canyon well in Utah. How the oil will be transported to a refinery is still sheer guess work, but a way will be found, for the ingenuity and resources of the oil engineers have never failed.

The "bringing in" of this well illustrates the difficulty of petroleum development. Convinced that the geological structure was particularly favorable, the projectors determined to gamble $75,000 on drilling. Before they got oil they had spent more than twice that.

For years wells have been drilling in various parts of the state—fully 200 in all—at a cost of probably $5,000,000, and this canyon well is the first real producer! It is only by dint of such persistence in coping with natural obstacles and financial hazards that the country's supply of oil is maintained. The first oil well in Western Pennsylvania became a producer at the depth of 69½ feet. Nowadays wells a mile deep are not uncommon, and they have gone down as far as a mile and a half.

Every Well Is a Gamble

A large proportion of wells produce nothing whatever and represent total loss. It was recently estimated that in the last twelve and a half years $1,200,000,000 was sunk in wells which were failures. Despite every effort of science, engineering and long experience, and notwithstanding the stupendous depths now reached, 25 per cent of wells last year were dry.

The "wildcatter" is the Columbus of oil. He is to petroleum, to gasoline, to the fuel supply of the country's 20,000,000 automobiles, what the old-time gold prospector was to building the empire of the far west. He is essentially a gambler; good loser or good winner. The lure of enormous winnings keeps him tirelessly searching, and sometimes he finds his reward. But in the aggregate, offsetting all winnings against the total cost of this engrossing gamble, it is not improbable that all the oil that has been taken from the soil of this country from the beginning cost more than its producers got for it.

A World in the Big Game

But their huge gamble is the basis on which the whole industry rests. The ice-bound Arctic and [illegible] fever-festering tropic jungles al[illegible] attract the hardy "wildcatter." T[illegible]em the world owes its newest a[illegible] best in transport by land, sea and [illegible]. They help light its homes and streets, provide an astonishing share of its power, furnish an endless list of necessaries which are by-products of petroleum. The "wildcatter' is well nigh the Atlas of this modern mechanized world.

WOMAN CONQUERS FEARS

Husband Delighted and Home Happier

St. Paul, Minn.—"Here is a little advice I would like to have you put in the papers," Mrs. Jack Lorberter of 704 Dellwood Place wrote to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company. "If young women want to keep their health and strength for the next thirty years of their lives, it is best to start in right now and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have tried the Compound myself and received fine results from its use." In describing her condition before taking the Compound, she writes, "I was afraid in my own house in broad daylight, I used to lock the doors and pull down the shades so that nobody could see me." One day a booklet advertising the Vegetable Compound was left on her porch and she read it through. In so doing, she found a letter from a woman whose condition was similar to her own. "I bought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Lorberter continued, "and have had fine results. My condition made me a burden to my husband. Now I ask him, "How is housekeeping?" and he says, "It is just like being in Heaven!" Are you on the Sunlit Road to Better Health?

Old English Township Given Dignity of City

Salford, the great manufacturing township of Lancashire, England, which has benefited by the creation of the Manchester ship canal, is at last to be elevated to the dignity of a city, thus bringing it into line with its neighbor, Manchester. The two cities are divided only by the narrow and greasy waters of the River Irwell, crossed by many bridges. Victoria railway station, the most important of Manchester, really stands in Salford.

When Salford became one of the ancient hundreds (with power to administer laws, as in the case of manorial rights), Manchester was so poor, having been devastated by Danish invaders, that its territory was included in the jurisdiction of Salford. On the other hand, Manchester had ecclesiastical buildings when Salford had none, and not until 1634 did Salford own a chapel. Now it possesses a cathedral, in company with Manchester.

A Way Out

"Well, how did you and Johnny get along?" Robert, nine years old, was asked after he came in from playing ball with a small friend of his.

"Not so well," Robert answered. "He threw a rock at me, and hit me, so I hit him back. Then he told a big boy, and he came out and started fighting."

"I suppose you ran. Why didn't you fight back?"

"Oh, well, I had to come home anyway," said Robert, settling the matter.

Faultfinder Not Wanted

Tacked on the wall of his headquarters, where his horses may be racing, and over his desk at the office on his breeding farm, John E. Madden, the famous horseman, has a sign which reads: "No complaints received unless accompanied by remedies," according to an item in Liberty. Mr. Madden, in commenting on his motto, says: "I do not think anyone has the right to claim a thing is wrong unless he is ready to show how it can be corrected."

So That All May Hear

A Lutheran pastor in Emden, Germany, tired of preaching in a church whose acoustic qualities were so bad that not more than a third of his flock could hear his inspired words, has had amplifiers installed. As a result churchgoing has again become popular in the town and the attendance is two or three times greater than ever before.—Chicago News.

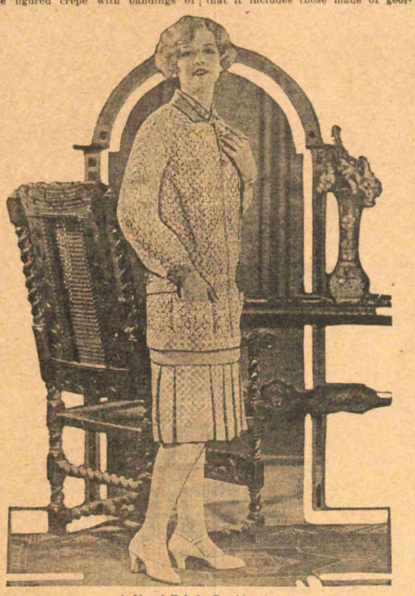
DESIGNS FOR LATE SUMMER; ALLURING CHIFFON FROCKS

THE two-piece mode—youthful and practical as it is, has taken the world of fashion by storm. It is as popular as bobbed hair and almost as varied as millinery. All that designers have to do, to maintain interest in the two-piece frock until the end of summer, is to think up new tricks of decoration or unusual and beautiful color management or novel fabric combinations.

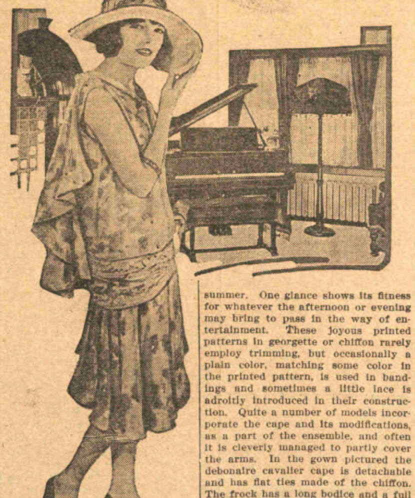


A Novel Fabric Combination.

In the altogether charming two-piece dress shown here, the note of novelty appears in the combination of printed crepe and cut-out linen, in which the dress portion is made of the figured crepe with bandings of plain crepe. The printed silk adds one more to the myriad dotted patterns, in dots that vary in shades of one color and are arranged in a plaid pattern with some of the dots centered by smaller ones. The skirt has four wide plaits across the front and two at each side, and the plain crepe banding is in the color of the dot. There are many color combinations that would be attractive in this dress, as grey, green, blue or red dots on a white ground. The banding at the top of the plaits is novel and has the effect of shortening the skirt. The linen jacket is bound at the bottom with the dotted crepe and has a belt of it across the back. The collar and cuffs combine dotted and plain crepe and the novel tie is made of cord covered with the plain crepe. Down each side of the pockets are small pearl buttons, set close together and the front of the jacket has a narrow binding of plain crepe. This pretty frock has more than novelty to recommend it for it is an elegant affair, in every way chic and dainty. This effect might be ruined by the wrong choice in footwear, but it is enhanced by white silk hose and white kid slippers of fashionable cut. They make a footwear outfit that proves unexcelled with summer frocks.

Now that midsummer is here, the fluttering type of frock grows popular, with cape backs, wings, scarfs, panels, sashes and tiers coquetting with every little vagrant breeze that blows. In colors green, white and black combinations and all white are the coolest looking, but even in red the sheer fabrics worn look cool and many chanel red frocks in georgette are shown for late summer.

When the talk is of chiffon frocks it is to be taken for granted that it includes those made of georgette, since these exquisite, twin-sister fabrics are so much alike that what is said about one is true of the other. Midsummer brings them into full-bloom in gowns that float through afternoons and evenings and are as decorative as flowers. There is a craze for delicate materials and dark, plain colors in tailored styles, or light colors in sports styles are liable to be encountered at any time of day when hot weather arrives.



A Dainty Frock of Chiffon.

Just one more of those pretty, printed chiffon frocks that prove so flattering to their wearers has had its picture made for the benefit of those who wish to liven up their wardrobes with something new for midsummer. One glance shows its fitness for whatever the afternoon or evening may bring to pass in the way of entertainment. These joyous printed patterns in georgette or chiffon rarely employ trimming, but occasionally a plain color, matching some color in the printed pattern, is used in bandings and sometimes a little lace is adroitly introduced in their construction. Quite a number of models incorporate the cape and its modifications, as a part of the ensemble, and often it is cleverly managed to partly cover the arms. In the gown pictured the debonaire cavalier cape is detachable and has flat ties made of the chiffon. The frock has a long bodice and a full rippled skirt. Its new feature is the wide, crushed girdle, also made of the chiffon and fastening at the left side.

Comparatively few frocks are short-sleeved, but wing treatments and capes that extend over the arms and terminate at the sides of the bodice are rivals of the long-sleeved modes. Many neck lines are "V" shaped and very new collars are convertible—that is, they are high at the back and form revers when open at the front. But they are edged with a narrow flat fold that is extended into long tie ends, so they may be turned up about the throat with the ties wound once about the neck.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Narrow Belt Buckles in Back

The belts used to mark the waist line of the newer frocks for daytime are usually narrow, of self material and many have buckles in the back. A buckle of silver and black enamel is one novelty exhibited, while black suede with silver buckle is popular.

Exaggerated Size

Large silk handkerchiefs are tied about the waistline of some of the smartest sport frocks, usually just below the natural waistline.

Necks Are High

The smart foulard and taffeta bathing suits, worn over wool jersey tights, are nearly all high-necked, at least in front. If they are cut away at any point it is in the back. Even the one-piece knitted suits fail to reveal any great amount of throat and shoulder epidermis.

And in All Colors

The fringed negligee, one of the loveliest of this season's offerings, comes in heavy satin or brocaded silks

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Poincare Is Called On to Save France—Doings of the Iowa Republicans.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DRIVEN on the rocks by political and financial schemers, France seems to be in a parlous condition, and the people are growing so exasperated that a revolution of sorts and a dictatorship are not beyond the bounds of possibility. Herriot, the radical Socialist leader, having upset the Briand-Caillaux ministry by a coup that aroused deep resentment, was called on to form a new cabinet. This he did, with small hope of finding sufficient support in the angry chamber of deputies. De Monzie took the finance portfolio and drafted a plan of action. Then Herriot, going to the chamber through a hostile, jeering throng of Parisians, told the deputies the treasury was empty. "The country must save itself," he said. "The money must be stabilized, but it is not admissible that it be done by foreign help alone." De Monzie asked authorization to sell the balance of the Morgan loan of $24,000,000 to pay the current expenses of the government. This the chamber granted. Briand had been greeted with such thunderous applause that Herriot knew he was doomed, so to have it over with quickly he called for a vote of confidence. By a vote of 290 to 237 the deputies upset his ministry and sent him to what is probably political oblivion.

At midnight President Doumergues called from his bed the veteran Poincare, and told him 250 deputies had signed a petition for a strong national union cabinet, and that he was the logical man to head it. Poincare agreed to do his best, and began negotiations with the chiefs of all the important political groups except the Socialists and Communists. It was expected he would himself be finance minister in addition to premier, that Briand would be foreign minister, Leygues minister of marine, Painleve war minister, and that perhaps Leon Blum, Socialist leader, would be offered a portfolio. What the financial plans of the Poincare cabinet may be cannot be predicted at this time. Possibly it will persuade the French nation that it must tax itself heavily enough to get out of its difficulties—a course of action the French have never accepted though it was found necessary by every other nation that was confronted by serious after-the-war financial problems. The franc declined during the two days the Herriot government lasted almost to the two-cent point, but reacted somewhat when that cabinet was thrown out.

The people of France are frightened and exasperated. In Paris there have been numerous attacks on foreigners, especially American tourists, for the ordinary Frenchman persists in blaming America for his country's predicament. The "smart aleck" behavior of some American trippers does a lot to aggravate the situation.

UNCLE SAM was the object of violent attacks during a debate in the British parliament over the French debt settlement. Lloyd George declared Britain's agreement to pay the United States was the mistake which plunged all of Europe "into the midst of its troubles."

"If all the war debts had been wiped out, it would have been a merciful act to the world," he continued. "If Great Britain had refused to make any agreement with America and this arrangement had not entered into all the following maneuvers for debt settlements, all the entanglements throughout Europe today would have been avoided."

Philip Snowden and others joined in assailing the government's debt agreements, which were defended by Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill. Mr. Runciman, Liberal, said of America's part in international finance: "The chancellor of the exchequer would be well advised if he faced the whole situation on a much larger international basis. The American people have a sentimental interest in the movement for disarmament. If the British government takes a strong line of military disarmament in Europe and makes it successful, the American people will soon know that what they have remitted on the debt will not be spent on armaments. I will be one of the last persons to go down on my knees to the United States and ask for revision. But payment to America might not be to her advantage, and in time the desire for revision might not all be on this side of the Atlantic."

Lord Rothermere's newspapers, which include the London Daily Mail, have been abusing the United States in vitriolic editorials, and the British government officials are worried and embarrassed by his assaults.

AS BETWEEN the Coolidge forces and the disgruntled farmers, the battle in the Iowa Republican state convention was virtually a draw. The regulars succeeded in having adopted a platform that indorses the national administration, but before the vote was taken the delegates allied with the farm organizations walked out, hooting at what they called steam roller methods.

On the other hand the farmers seemed to have gained possession of the state party machine for the central committee selected in district caucuses is favorable to Smith W. Brookhart who was read out of the party two years ago and is seeking to regain the senate seat from which he was ousted. Brookhart sat on the platform beside A. B. Cummins, whom he had defeated for the nomination in the primaries, and there was a semblance of a reunion of factions, but in his address Brookhart announced that when he returned to Washington he would again tell "the truth concerning conditions in Iowa." Dan W. Turner, permanent chairman, in his address gave the Coolidge administration some hard raps and warmly praised Frank O. Lowden.

The platform declared faith in the national Republican party, praised its economy and tax reduction and war debt programs, but the farm relief advocates forced the insertion of this demand:

"That the Republican policy of economic equality of agriculture with other industries shall be carried into effect by the enactment of legislation which will permit the establishment of an American price level for agricultural products above the world price level just as the protective tariff accomplishes that result for manufactured products."

A resolution to the same effect had just been adopted by the corn belt committee and the committee of twenty-two, representing eleven corn belt states, which met also in Des Moines. Plans were laid for renewing the fight for passage of a bill by congress that will make possible the handling of farm products under a protective system where the tariff can be made effective on farm products. A combination of Southern, Western and Middle West states is contemplated.

The corn belt committee received a report of its cost finding committee, which fixed the actual cost of production of a bushel of corn in Iowa, with an allowance for a fair profit, at $1.42. The report also set forth that in Illinois the expense of producing corn with a fair profit of 5 per cent included, is $1.43; in Nebraska, $1.40; Minnesota, $1.41, and in North Dakota and Wisconsin, $1.42.

SENATOR FESS of Ohio spent a night at White Pine camp as the guest of President Coolidge and then expressed the opinion that the administration would continue to oppose price fixing and other agricultural measures it considers unsound. The senator declared his belief that there would be no formidable reaction in the West against the protective tariff and that President Coolidge had lost none of his popularity. He attributed farm unrest to post-war deflation losses. The Republicans will control the next congress, he averred, although he admitted the party would have to depend upon insurgent votes if it lost Arizona, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri and Nevada.

SENATOR BORAH, addressing the Protestant Ministers' association in Augusta, Ga., had many harsh things to say about those who seek modification of the Volstead act and about referendums on the prohibition question such as that to be held in New York state. He asserted an attempt was being made to undermine and destroy the constitution through nullification, and he likened the wets to the Bolshevists of Russia. Senator Edwards of New Jersey came back with a red hot statement in which he said:

"To proclaim his unsound principles of constitutional government and to shoot his arrows of bigoted poison, Mr. Borah chose territory which harbors a people who have openly and flagrantly nullified two amendments to the Constitution for the past fifty years.

"For Senator Borah to place honest and sincere advocates of repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and modification of the Volstead act in the same category with Russian Bolshevists, black shirt fascists and Polish demagogic dictators is a dastardly slur on scores of minds just as genuinely American, just as unaffected with dishonest motive or intention and just as free of disguise and false pretense as his own."

THE senate slush fund committee has begun its inquiry into the expenditures of the Illinois senatorial primary campaign. Senator Reed of Missouri, the chairman, announced the investigation would be as thorough as that into the expenses of the candidates in the Pennsylvania primaries. It was understood Col. Frank L. Smith, who defeated Senator McKinley for the nomination, was to be one of the first witnesses. Mr. McKinley is ill in Washington and probably will be unable to go to Chicago for the inquiry.

Senator Reed isn't through with the Anti-Saloon league by any means. He has warned it to be prepared to make a complete statement of official expenditures in the present campaign, and demands that the names of the contributors to the league's funds be made public.

"It is a manifest absurdity to say that in any community of the United States of any size any man would suffer injury if it were known he had contributed to teaching the high moral precepts of sobriety, obedience to law, and loyalty to the government," said Senator Reed. "They know very well that their organization is engaged in political work throughout the year."

POLAND desires friendly relations with all other nations, and as evidence of her peaceable disposition Dictator Pilsudski, who is war minister, intends to dispense with military attaches at most of the Polish legations. Such is the announcement of Foreign Minister Zelewski to parliament. "Poland does not want a single foot of foreign soil, but on the other hand she will not give up a foot of her soil," he said, amid cheers.

AS ITS first move in the enforcement of the laws concerning the churches, the Mexican government cited thirty-six Roman Catholic priests to answer charges of contempt of the law and refusal to register. As the church authorities at a recent general meeting decided to refrain from registering, the fight will determine whether the government is strong enough to inspect the churches and religious societies.

Every Catholic society in every city, town and village, it is said, has pledged its members to obey the orders of the central committee and the Catholic authorities. At Catholic headquarters in Mexico City it was asserted that notwithstanding the restrictions of the law, the church would not suppress religious orders. The Catholics have started a boycott against the government, refraining from buying articles from which the government receives its greatest revenue, this including lottery tickets. Also, Catholic women are giving up all social functions.

DEATHS of the week include those of Felix Djerjinsky, the merciless and ruthless head of the soviet Russian cheka or secret police; Martin L. Lueck, Democratic nominee for governor of Wisconsin, and Henry T. Douglas, last surviving general of the Confederacy.

Leavenworth Convicts Planned Big Swindle

Leavenworth, Kan.—Efforts of a prisoner to avoid payment of a long-distance telephone toll led to the discovery of a conspiracy by convicts in the federal penitentiary here to swindle the government out of upward of $150,000.

One of the prisoners, Jesse L. Greer, committed from Colorado for robbing the mails, called a woman in St. Louis over the telephone and tried to save himself the tolls by charging the call to the warden and later altering the bill from the telephone company to make it appear that the call was a call to a St. Louis business firm.

The warden discovered the alteration and secret service men were detailed to check all of the records which Greer had kept as a clerk in the prison office.

With the help of the prison motion-picture machine and some canceled checks, which he stole from the prison safe, Greer had been able to forge the names of prison officials on fake invoices. Greer was thus able to obtain a check made out to a fictitious business firm in Denver.

George F. Ames, a prisoner, who was paroled early in the month, received the check at a Denver hotel by assuming the name of the fictitious man to whom the check was addressed, and presented it to a Colorado bank. The check, drawn for $790.91, would have been honored, prison officials say, if the fraud had not been discovered.

Ancient Flint--lock Unearthed On Old Dearborn Battlefield

Memories of old Indian days, when gaudy-coated soldiers strutted through Dearborn, were recalled when workmen excavating for a house in the old military reservation section of Dearborn, uncovered the stock of an ancient flintlock rifle.

W. D. Block, who is building the house, brought the relic to Detroit and will present it to the Detroit Museum of Arts as a relic of early Michigan life. It is probably 100 or more years old. The flint remains in the hammer and the pan which contained the powder, as well as the trigger and trigger guard, are still intact. A small brass plate on top of the stock, covered with caked earth and sand, shone brightly when the grime was removed.

There were evidences that the barrel of the rifle remains intact, too, but it had been separated from the stock by the digging machine and could not be found. The butt end of the stock was charred as if it had been burned.

Sees Detroit As Hub of World Industry In Metal Trades

Detroit may easily become the center of the metal trades industry of the world if it will add a little enterprising exertion to the store of natural facilities with which nature and chance have endowed it, says Paul G. Rohr, economist.

"Detroit now has for the first time the component elements for cheap steel—the coal accessible through the merger of the C. & O. with the Pere Marquette and Van Sweringen interests the unexcelled limestone of the Alpena and Sandusky regions and the vast ore deposits of the near north. With the waterways to favor us the dream of a great steel center added to Detroit's industrial development can easily be made a reality."

Dickinson Sheriff, Aids Indicted in Dry Charge

The federal grand jury in session at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., returned an indictment against Lloyd Cleveland, of Iron Mountain, Dickinson county's 24-year-old sheriff, charging "conspiring to corruptly, and unlawfully deter by force, intimidation and threat one Antonio Bianchetti, subpoenaed to appear as witness before a grand jury."

Indicted with Sheriff Cleveland were two of his deputies, Leonard Young and Albert Freeman, who are facing the same charge as their chief. Leonard Young is also charged with perjury and testifying falsely before Commissioner Button of Marquette in the case of Bianchetti, charged with the violation of the liquor law.

Bannister Man Named Head of Normal Club

Haldon Robinson, of Mt. Pleasant, is succeeded as president of the Administration club at Central Normal by Dale Kennedy, of Bannister. The aim of the Administration club is to aid its members to solve problems connected with the work of school administration, and it is the only club on the Mt. Pleasant Normal campus which functions only during the summer term.

Drouth Hits Crops

The yield of hay that is now being harvested, together with the prospective oat crop, has been greatly shortened by the extended drouth. Some of the most extensive huckleberry swamps in the state are located near Argentine, Mich. And they, too, have suffered greatly. The yield of raspberries and strawberries has been cut more than 50 per cent.

Frederick E. King, who is retiring as superintendent of Marshall schools after 47 years' service, says he believes he can beat any superintendent in Michigan playing golf or sawing wood.

STEALS AUTO TO SELL FORD RANCH

Somewhere in his readings about loftiest of ambitions, the phenomenal success that had come to the nation's captains of industry, stories about poor boys who had risen to the heights of industrial fame, Andrew Milincovich, who is 18 years old, had run across a simple bit of advice that had fired him with the loftiest of ambitions.

"No matter what else your aim in life," it had read, "be sure it is a worthy one and then push ahead until you have achieved it, letting no obstacles swerve you from your path."

Eking out an existence as a clerk in a Chicago hardware store did not appeal to Andrew. He would start a chicken ranch somewhere.

Andrew decided he would need only $500 to start his ranch, and since his scheme had in it the seeds of a world-beater, he would interest in it no less a person than Henry Ford.

The boy had no way of getting to Detroit, so he conceived a plan for stealing an automobile. He went to a local salesroom and asked to be shown a car. The gods seemed strangely propitious to his scheme, Andrew thought, for they sent with him a salesman whose name was Hatch.

On a lonely road outside Chicago, where the salesman had driven to demonstrate the car, Andrew stuck a gun into his ribs and told him to depart for Chicago, on foot and alone. Then he drove the car to Detroit and right up to the gates of the Ford plant.

Andrew would not tell his scheme to the gate guard and the latter just "would not let him see Mr. Ford personally," so the altercation resulted in a call to the police, who came and gathered in Andrew and his car.

Public Bath Beach In Memory of Dead Son Is Established

Jack Simeon wanted the young folks, his playmates at Corunna to have a place to swim, and so it came about that Shiawassee County has a public bathing beach, located on the Shiawassee River along side of the Simeon home in Corunna.

Jack, a favorite with all the young folks of his home city and Owosso is dead. Jack was taken ill two years ago and five days later he died. Jack's young friends mourned with the family. He had made life pleasant for them and through his coaxing and efforts W. J. Simeon, the father, had fixed up a bathing beach.

So Mr. and Mrs. Simeon decided that they would establish a public bathing beach in memory of their son. Jack was the only child. Mr. Simeon is a former mayor of Corunna and is at present a member of the board of supervisors and alderman.

16 Steel Tripods for Mine Study Erected

Under the direction of the civil and mining engineering department of the Mchigan College of Mines at Houghton, 16 large steel triangulation tripods have been erected on various points in the college triangulation system, which covers an area of approximately 10 square miles. The system is part of the scheme used for the convenient and efficient instructon of students in surveying and other civil engineering projects. It is declared to be the largest and best equipped triangulation system in use by any college in the country.

Tourists Tell of Kin Gone Quarter Century

Bert Underwood of Ionia has received word that his brother, Verne, of whom all trace had been lost for a quarter of a century, is living in Okahoma. Verne left Ionia 25 years ago and eventually setted in Shiatook, Okla. The information regarding his whereabouts was brought to Ionia by a tourist party.

Shiawassee County to Hold Picnic August 19

The annual Shiawassee county picnic will be held at McCurdy park at Owosso August 19. These picnics are attended by several thousand persons.

Shave Raise, Water System Jars Town, From Hermit Area

Utica—with its sister village, Warren—the least known of all Detroit suburbs, is apparently beginning to feel the result of Detroit's irresistible pressure against its boundaries. Two important developments of the last month indicate that the had of progress is about to disturb the peaceful equanimity which has marked it throughout its hundred and more years of life. The price of a shave has been boosted from 15 to 20 cents and the village has voted to install a water system.

Although only 21 miles from the Detroit city hall, Utica has retailed all the characteristics of the typical small town. Not a shoe shine stand is to be found in the city, horses and buggies are far from an uncommon sight. Saturday night still sees the streets blocked, business humming, and groups of farmers lining the curbs.

Wilson's War Sacretary To Be State Bar Speaker

Newton D. Baker, of Ceveland, O., secretary of war in President Wilson's cabinet, probably will be the chief speaker at the annual banquet of the Michigan Bar association at St. Joseph September 10.

Plans for the convention, which will bring the eading lawyers and judges of Michigan to the Twin Cities, were discussed at a dinner of the committees in charge.

The conventon will be held September 10 and 11.

Brook Trout Arrive

Twenty thousand brook trout, averaging seven inches in length, have arrived at the Turtle Lake club at Alpena from the Northville hatchery. The shipment was purchased last fall in New Hampshire. The trout will be used as breeders by the club for stocking streams in the vicinity.

Ludington Needs Docks

Permanent, modern warehouse and docks are seen as a necessity for Ludington as a result of continuous growth in freight shipments through the city and via seven car ferries to Milwaukee, Manitowoc and Wewaunee.

LINK ASSURED IN STATE BOULEVARD

Another link in the Michigan Grand boulevard—a planned highway which will be a unique traffic way—was assured when the Iosco County Road Commission was instructed to obtain the right-of-way between East Tawas and the Alcona County line. The Michigan Grand boulevard will start at Toledo and girdle the shore of the Lower Peninsula of Michigan, ending at Chicago. The boulevard, when completed, will be built of concrete and will be 40 feet in width.

Portions of the boulevard have been built and many surveys have been made. One stretch, between Port Austin and Caseville, near the tip of the "Thumb," which will be a Federal and State highway, will be built in 1927.

The boulevard will follow the shore of Lake Erie from Toledo through Monroe to Detroit. It will skirt the Detroit River and Lake St. Clair, passing through Mt. Clemens to Port Huron. From Port Huron, it will follow the present route of M-31 to Harbor Beach and M-27 to Port Austin. The Detroit to Port Austin highway is acknowledged to be one of the most beautiful drives in the country. From Port Austin, the highway will follow the shoreline of Saginaw Bay to Bay City. From Bay City on north, it will hug the Lake Huron shore to Mackinaw City.

The Michigan Grand boulevard when completed will offer a drive of nearly 1,500 miles to visitors and residents of the state, virtually all of which will be in sight of waters of Lakes Erie, Huron and Michigan. The boulevard will traverse areas connected with some of the most colorful incidents in the history of Michigan and the nation.

Traverse City Curbs Speed of Fire Trucks

Believing it is more important that fire-fighting equipment travel at a safe speed than that a few seconds be saved in reaching a fire, Mayor James T. Milliken of Traverse City has issued orders that the trucks slow down to a speed which does not menace safety of pedestrians and motorists.

U. S. Orders Officer in Charge of Air Squadron

Michigan's hope for an air squadron in its national guard became a certainty when the war department ordered First Lieutenant Edgar T. Selzer, of Brooks field, Texas, to take charge of the training at Detroit this summer.

Beer Buys Detroit Girl's Trousseau; Paroled to Wed

Lucille Cathart, 22 year old, of Detroit, married Saturday, and she wore a trousseau both fetching and expensive—a trousseau that was paid for from procees of the sale of beer, she admitted before Judge Christopher E. Stein.

Miss Cathart was arraigned on the prohibition charge and pleaded guilty, begging Judge Stein to postpone the xeamination, as she was to acquire a husband. The court heeded her plea and released her on her personal recognizance, setting August 4 for the examination.

Sharing Bag Is Illegal, Is Ruling in Michigan

Ruling that fishing parties cannot share their fish if all of the luck runs in the direction of one person, David R. Jones, chief conservation officer of the state, expresses merely what should but doesn't happen in the majority of cases. The same application s appled to two duck hunters; where one gets hs limit of 15 out of the blind and the two a brace or two. They are not supposed to share the bag, but who is going to stop them? The deer hunting camp is rare indeed where the hunter quits the chase after he has filled his license and his other companions are still holding their unfilled permits. Jones is right in his stand but it doesn't work out for Michigan sportsmen as a rule share their luck with their camp companions.

Dog Tax Collector Suspects Many Unpaid

Orlo Fish, deputy sheriff at Tekonsha, who was appointed dog warden by the Calhoun county board of supervisors at its June session, to collect the delinquent dog tax for the years 1925 and 1926, collected over $800 in a week in Bedford township. Fish believes there is from $7,000 to $10,000 unpaid dog tax in the county. The owners who failed to pay prior to January 10 now have to pay $4 instead of $2 under the statute. Many owners believed the dogs had to be a year old, but the statute assesses them when four months old.

Thirty Convicted to Date For Setting Forest Fires

State fire wardens have secured more than 30 convictions this year of persons accused of starting forest fires through carelessness. Others have been apprehended for violation of a statute prohibiting setting of fires unless due precautions are taken, but were released when they agreed to pay for damage done by fires in question.

An old cider press made some 80 years ago, and which was used in Stoughton, Mass., for years, has been sold to Henry Ford. The press has been taken to Wayside Inn, Sudbury.

Mr. Buick:
Your Employment Department put me on a job. Went to work at $1.65 an hour and haven't missed a day since.
I took some special jobs. One of them paid me $106.00 for 4 days and another $183.00 for 6 days.
Never laid a brick before in my life and the Detroit School of Trades did these things for me. I recommend this school to any man who wants to learn a trade.

WORTHLESS STOCK + Money for Real Estate.=Danger

The questionable real estate operator has devised a new method of disposing of his properties; Like the doubtful stock promoter he seeks to "reload" unfortunate victims of various stock schemes—that is, he pretends to take this worthless stock in part payment for his lots. If you receive an offer to accept your worthless stock at its "full face value" in part payment on real estate, move cautiously.

Worthless stock is worth no more to the dubious real estate promoter than it is to you. His offer is merely "bait" and to make you think you are getting something for nothing. Then too, it must be true in order to break even, the lots are increased in price to such an extent that the acceptance of your worthless stock causes the real estate operator no loss.

Legitimate Detroit real estate dealers do not employ the "reloading" scheme to sell their properties. Methods universally discredited in the stock field will not be employed by them in selling real estate. When you receive an offer to accept your valueless stock at "full par value"

DETROIT'S GROWTH MAKES MONEY!

Growth in population backed by basic industries is what sends real estate values upward. bringing profits to owners. Let this faster growth bring faster profits to you.

Reputable Detroit real estate can be bought on installment—indeed this is the customary way. You are thus able to purchase real estate out of income rather than capital.

Installments are usually one per cent of the value of the lot per month.

The initial down payment is 15 per cent.

Thus:

A $1500 lot will cost you $15 per month and $225 as a down payment.

Make use of the customary terms to enrollin the ranks of Detroit's profit makers by investing in property in our Golf and Country Club District.

Jerome

Talks eight minutes in length were given at the M. E. church Sunday evening by Clayton Mc Gregor, Roland Randolph, Rev. Scott and H. L. Lane. The questions dealt with various phases of boy life. Next Sunday evening Rev. Scott will commence a series of anti-war sermons.

The Jerome Homecoming Saturday was attended by a crowd of some 300 persons. The community ladies served dinner at noon after which the Jackson Citizen Patriot band entertained with several selections. At the business meeting the same officers were re-elected for the coming year as follows: Pres., Wm. Alley; Treas., Mrs. Chas McGregor; Sec., Ira Wertenberger. The base ball game between Litchfield and Liberty was won by the latter team. The evening program was well attended and consisted of the following: Address, Rev. Scott vocal, Leonard Aldridge and wife of Jackson; readings, Mrs. Howard Kies, May Anson, Carlton Richards and Wm. Alley; piano duet, Dorothy Linsday and Bessie VanAllen; address, W. C. Orr, memory expert of Detroit assisted by Mr. Elliott.

Judge Ben B. Linsday of Denver, Colorado is one of the best known boys workers in America. The judge has experienced much opposition because of his expose of conditions detrimental not only to the welfare of boys but to the welfare of the general public. In the course of his career the judge has found it necessary to resist such concerns as the Smelter Trust and in retaliation the money power has used most of the Denver papers, the state university and the republican party to contend against the judge. At the university Wm. Evans, state boss of the republicans was president of the board of trustees while most of the remaining trustees were representatives of financial interests or elsewhere were big business men themselves. The judge lost out in his campaigns which wasn't strange under the circumstances.

THE RESCUE

SYNOPSIS.—Idly fishing Hermanos creek, in California, Caleb Warner, civil engineer and a New Englander, is witness of the end of a coyote pulled down by two wolfhounds, urged on by a girl rider. Admiring the hounds, he introduces himself, and learns her name is Clinton. With western hospitality she invites him to the ranch to meet her father. At the Clinton home Warner learns his new friend's name is Betty. He is welcomed by her father, Southern Civil war veteran and owner of Hermanos valley. He tells them something of his ambitions and his feeling that he is destined to be a "Water-Bearer." In the town of Golden Warner shares an apartment with his old Columbia college chum, Ted Baxter, carefree and somewhat dissipated youth, only child of his widowed mother, who controls the family fortune. At a club luncheon Baxter introduces Caleb to Wilbur Cox, leading business man and president of the water company which supplies the needs of Golden. He gives Cox an inkling of his ambitions, and Cox, impressed, invites him to dinner that night. During dinner Cox asks Caleb to call at his office next day. He does so and Cox arranges a meeting between Caleb and Hinckley, the water company's chief engineer. Baxter tells Caleb he is in difficulties with a girl, Mary Morgan, Cox's stenographer, who insists he must marry her. With Hinckley, Caleb looks over the water company's source of supply, the Crystal springs, in Hermanos valley. Prospecting in Hermanos valley, Caleb meets a man, Evans, who boasts of his ability, through "divining rods," to locate water without boring. Caleb comes upon a picnic party, the festivities being in honor of Betty Clinton's birthday, and is welcomed.

"I don't know," he answered. "I have been given a chance to go up to Beaver lake on a new project, but I do not have to accept just yet. Meantime I am looking around. I went over the Crystal Springs property yesterday."

"Did you?" broke in the other girl. "I've been there. Isn't it an ideal place for a picnic—or a honeymoon?"

Caleb laughed.

"I am afraid I was more practical in my imagination," he said. "I suppose, being from New England, I can't help that. I was chiefly interested in the water supply. But it was beautiful."

He gave them a little description of the trip and of how the dams had withstood the earthquake. And he added what Hinckley had told him of Crystal Springs valley before it had been turned into a great artificial lake.

"I can't help feeling sorry for the farms that had to be abandoned," said Betty Clinton. "It seems a shame when you think of the fertile fields being turned to silt, the schoolhouse and the little church that had stood so long being torn down."

"Think of what the reservoir meant to Golden! It made a city possible," returned Caleb. "There is sentiment on both sides of the matter. Where a dozen families were displaced the water gave opportunity to thousands. Public utility must be the first consideration."

"I suppose so. Just the same, if I had owned a farm there, I would not have sold."

"If the rest were willing they might have compelled you to."

"You mean by condemnation proceedings? Well, they'll never do anything like that to Hermanos valley, for we own the whole of it."

"Not even for the good of the many? If it was necessary?" asked Caleb. Carmen looked at him curiously, struck by a sudden change in his voice. He took things concerning his profession very seriously, did this young engineer, she decided.

Betty Clinton shook her head determinedly in answer to Caleb's query.

"Not while my father lives. Nor while I do. We might sell a part of the valley. We have talked of doing so. We do not use much of it. And the land has advanced in value. But nothing must touch El Nido. You did not see the little cemetery in the cedar grove. There are three generations of Clintons buried there. My mother's grave among them. They must never be disturbed."

Carmen saw the muscles bunch in Caleb's jaws and wondered. For a moment he was silent. For a part of his vision had seen Hermanos valley restored to a lake, dammed and holding storm waters. Betty Clinton sat quietly and Caleb gazed at nothing through half-closed eyes. Carmen regarded them with a pout.

"You're a cheerful couple for a birthday picnic," she observed. "As for Thurston, he must be making that camera, or gone to town for a film."

She got up and stretched lithely. Then she screamed suddenly and shrilly, turning to cling to Betty Clinton.

A big bull had come into his pasture, the upland plateau that he regarded as his own, a magnificent Hereford, red of coat and white of face. He stood down-wind from the group and it was plain that he resented their presence. The great head was raised and lowered uncertainly, the wide curving horns tossed menacingly.

There was no shelter if the bull meant mischief. To run was to court disaster.

Carmen clung to her friend trembling, her eyes big with fear. Betty Clinton was pale but she faced the bull and not a muscle had quivered.

"I don't know just what we had better do," she said quietly to Caleb. "He's working himself up into a rage. If we could make Padilla hear and understand."

Caleb resented this a little. He did not realize that the girl was thinking of Padilla mounted, acting as vaquero. Perhaps the resentment quickened his wits to action. Carmen screamed again just as the bull lowered his head and charged straight for them.

Caleb snatched at Carmen's hair and grabbed the scarlet beret.

"It's your hat that bothers him," he cried. "I'll handle him. Run—both of you. I'll hold him. Run!"

He waved them off with a shout as the bull came on. He saw Carmen, her black hair streaming from his careless tug for the hat, snatch at Betty's hand and start to run swiftly toward the wall. He saw, for a split-second, Thurston's startled face appearing over the stones as he ascended, heard the girls cry out and Thurston shout. He faced the bull, the flaming beret in his hand, prepared to play toreador, unarmed.

The bull roared as his glaring eyes caught the flare of the scarlet taunt waved by the man. Blind to everything else, centered in the desire to glut his rage on the offending color, he raced over the turf, leaving a little cloud-trail of dust, shaking the ground with his weight as he pounded it with his hoofs.

Caleb waited, not quite as coolly as he had wished, warily judging distance. As the sharp horns swept up, scooping for the cloth he held out at arm's length, Caleb sprang to one side and ran forward as the baffled brute, snorting and maddened, plowed past him, front legs stiffened in the attempt to stop and wheel, the great head clumsily turned toward the red beret and Caleb, who halted twenty yards away and provokingly displayed the bait.

The girls had got safely beyond the wall. In a second or so they would be out of sight. He had now only himself to look out for. The bull turned and came racing back. Caleb knew that he could not dodge forever. He could distinguish Betty's clear, high voice calling for Padilla. The words were in Spanish. He recognized a few of them. "Toro! Riata! Cavalho!" Then the bull took up all his attention. It came on with incredible speed, the lumbering gait seemed freed by rage. As Caleb leaped aside the brute swerved so swiftly that a horn grazed Caleb's arm, ripping cloth.

This time he had to turn and run down hill, away from the trees. His foot caught in the hole of a ground squirrel and his ankle was wrenched as he stumbled and jerked it clear. It was not a bad sprain but it handicapped him and would not get better with exertion. The bull had halted more easily going up hill. It was chasing him before he had got well into his stride. He had to sprint to get the chance to dodge. And this time he ran for all he was worth. He had almost won the trees when the bull caught up the distance between them.

Caleb glanced over his shoulder. He could hear the snorts of the crazed brute. He saw the massive head shift sideways for the toss, saw the roll of the blood-rimmed eyes and he leaped sideways with the last of his energy, his lungs straining and his heart pounding. And, as he jumped, he made the sacrifice of the beret, dropping it fairly in the bull's course while he felt the sweep of air as the beast's head was flung up, backed by the force of mighty shoulders, one horn impaling the beret that clung there, driving the bull to frenzied fury while Caleb, panting, dodged among the aspens and saw Padilla, mounted, swinging his rope, top the rise and tear in at top speed, yelling as he came.

The bull got rid of the offending Tam-o'-Shanter. He ground it into the turf, stamping on it and bellowing. He tore it to rags and trampled them. And then he flung up his head to see what had become of Caleb. He heard the yell of Padilla, a vigorous "Yahoo!" that seemed to revive memories none too pleasant. He wheeled and surveyed the rider uneasily. To chase a two-legged creature was one thing, a man mounted, swinging a loop the sight of which also stirred his sluggish brain, was quite another.

Before the lariat was flung he turned and trotted off, disappearing at the far end of the plateau before Padilla reined up and offered to take Caleb back behind his saddle.

"I don' theenk, senor, that he weel come back. He has been brand'—that toro—an' he remember. Eet is bueno that he does. Eef I rope an' tie heem, I mus' let heem go again. But eet weel be better, p'raps, eef you ride, senor. Me, I like eet better for myself."

He laughed and Caleb essayed to retrieve what was left of the beret. He gave it up as a hopeless job and mounted behind Padilla.

"Senor," said the Mexican, "you hav' save la senorita's life. She an' her padre weel thank you. I thank you too. Luis Padilla weel not forget."

CHAPTER VII

The Water Mine

They were all in the patio, talking in the dusk. The conversation had become general. Caleb was a listener. He had found, to his relief, that, after the earnestly expressed thanks of Clinton, of his daughter and of Carmen, he was not regarded in the light of a hero. It seemed to be generally granted that any of them would have done—or tried to do—exactly as he had done and he was grateful for the way they took it. Carmen managed to infuse something personal into her thanks, a warmth that hinted that the exploit had been all for her sake, with Betty a more or less incidental accessory.

Caleb was a listener from preference. He wanted to analyze, if he could, something of the stirrings of these Westerners.

The talk was mainly of Brompton's historic series of panels, the subject introduced by Betty Clinton, with the idea, Caleb thought, of covering him from Carmen's sallies. It was very plain that the artist was head over heels in love with the vivacious brunette, who kept him dangling. Caleb, smoking, pondered over Betty Clinton's attitude. Did she intend to marry Thurston? he wondered. The rancher was on eminently intimate terms with the family. She called him by his first name, Wendell.

He went early the next morning, returning to Golden. There he packed a grip with clothing and some of his instruments, and left a note for Baxter, saying that he would be away for several days. He took up his quarters at a country hotel near the station in Coyote canyon and hired a rig, determined to make a thorough investigation of Caliente plain.

With his pocket instruments he managed to get, unnoticed, tolerable surveys of elevations and distances. He had proven, to his own satisfaction, that the upper end of the plain was furnished with a basin of water at uniform level, a great supply, bottomed and sided with clay and capped with the same, through which capping the artesian water spouted wherever it was bored for. The Welsh Water-Finder did not have to be a great wizard to score hits in this region, he decided. But he had a further use in mind for the man.

Caleb is evidently up against a hard alternative — water or girl. Which way will he decide.

Sheridan Supreme as Prophet of Weather

The hope to be an accurate weather prophet is one which springs eternal in the human breast. Many people who have won fame in various walks of life aspired to add to their other accomplishments that of forecasting the weather. Richard Brinsley Sheridan was no exception. Sheridan's fame as a dramatist is secure by virtue of "The Rivals" and "The School for Scandal," but not content with that Sheridan must be famed as the prophet who made the nearest best prophecy of meteorological conditions for a period of a whole year. Being a poet, Sheridan had the advantage of the scientific predictors. Prosy science may be unable to tell what the weather will be for a longer future time than twenty-four hours, but poetic fancy knows no bounds and may take its unrestricted flight a good twelve months ahead. Although Sheridan was predicting British weather, his forecast suits the Middle West and we may rely upon it in making our plans for the year. Sheridan says:

January—Snowy.
February—Flowy.
March—Blowy.
April—Showery.
May—Flowery.
June—Bowery.
July—Moppy.
August—Croppy.
September—Poppy.
October—Breezy.
November—Wheezy.
December—Freezy.—Kansas City Star.

"Magi" Buried at Cologne

The name "City of the Three Kings" is sometimes given to the city of Cologne, Germany, because it is the reputed burial place of the "Three Kings," "Magi" or "Wise Men," who came to Bethlehem to offer gifts to the infant Jesus. According to the legend, their bones were brought from Milan to Cologne by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa in 1162, and given to the archbishop of Cologne. The skulls of these "Magi," crowned with diamonds, with their names (Balthazar, Gaspar and Melchior) inscribed in rubies, are shown to visitors to the cathedral.

Spoiled the Effect

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey were entertaining friends.

"Yes, I think I must get a car this year," said the host, casually, during a lull in the conversation. "I haven't decided what make yet, but it's no use getting a cheap one; they're sometimes so unreliable. I suppose I can get a really serviceable little affair for $1,500 or so?"

While the company was still gasping at this careless mention of wealth, Bailey junior remarked: "I say, dad, will that funny-looking man call every week for the money like he did last year when you bought the bicycle?"—Exchange.

No Theaters in Java

In Java there are no theaters to speak of, and entertainments that call for an auditorium usually are given in large concert halls, the performances opening at 9:30 or 10 o'clock, because it is too warm prior to that hour to ask an audience to assemble. The concert halls are connected to clubs usually.

Freight Train Phone Latest in Railroading

By means of a telephone connecting the caboose and the cab of a freight train with 73 cars, the engineer and conductor of an Eastern line held conversation recently, saving the need for hand signals and speeding the progress of the train.

As they were pulling out of the yards, the conductor notified the engine men that a car repair man was riding in the caboose and would get off at the east end of the yard and close the switch when the train was in the main track.

This saved slowing up, and later the engineer notified the conductor that, if conditions were satisfactory with regard to the train, he would not stop for water at the next station. Permission to proceed was given, sparing another delay. The wires were strung over the tops of the cars.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Billions in Railroads

It is estimated that by the end of 1926 the total investment in railroads of the United States will reach $24,000,000,000, the largest sum put into any one industry in the world. In 1926 the improvement bill for the railroads will be $750,000,000 on conservative estimate. Railroad men are predicting the heaviest fall traffic this year in history and are preparing for it.

Get Along Without Water

Most rodents, including rats, are thirsty creatures. The only animals living in very dry places which seem able to do entirely without drink are snakes and reptiles. In the cold desert of shifting sand in Kashgar there are no reptiles, and not even a fly. But the Afghan boundary commission found swarms of lizards and a new and venomous species of adder in astonishing numbers in the awful desert of hot shifting sand at the corner where Persia, Beluchistan and Afghanistan meet.

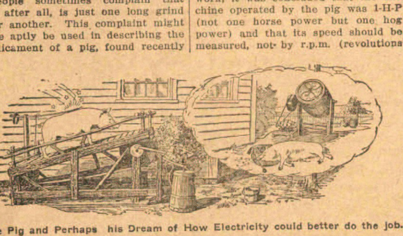
LIFE OF PIG IS JUST ONE GRIND AFTER ANOTHER

General Electric Movie Man Finds Farmer Using Porker to Operate Churn—Rate Machine's Speed at Grunts per Minute—This Method of Churning Would Tend to Make Spare Ribs Sparer, Is General Belief.

People sometimes complain that life, after all, is just one long grind after another. This complaint might more aptly be used in describing the predicament of a pig, found recently by C. F. Bateholts, of the General Electric Company.



The Pig and Perhaps his Dream of How Electricity could better do the job.

This little pig, which, it is said, holds all long-distance walking and running records among his kind, was discovered on a New York State farm by Mr. Bateholts, while he was gathering material for a motion picture showing contrasts between modern power methods and old-fashioned hand methods of farming. The pig, which was driving a churn by means of a treadmill on which he was mounted, was immediately made one of the stars of the film.

After some careful experimental work, it was concluded that the machine operated by the pig was 1-H-P (not one horse power but one hog power) and that its speed should be measured, not by r.p.m. (revolutions per minute as all electrical apparatus is rated) but by g.p.m. (grunts per minute).

Engineers who have examined the movie taken of the pig have concluded that while the motor is lubricated by lard, it is probably somewhat noisy in its operation, its hum rising at times to the pitch of a squeal.

This method of churning is, of course, a labor saver for all except the pig. It is not believed, however, that it will come into general use, since its effect on the pork market is bad. Its result, as one engineer said, would be to make spare ribs sparer.

We Must Win The Fight This Fall

Election day in November will see the wet army marshaled for a grand maneuver to bring back the saloon to the United States.

Never has there been greater interest in the wet and dry fight as far as individual candidates for office is concerned; in several states there are entering wedges prepared in the way of referenda of various sorts These are new and dangerous wet tactics. A complete analysis of the various referenda will be presented in a subsequent issue of the Union Signal; at the present time it is our desire merely to acquaint the W. C. T. U. members with the fact that the wets are forcing a fight which will require the brain and sinew of ever union and every worker.

The situation marks a crisis in the history of the United States equal in importance to any of the crises which preceded the Civil War, because if the wets are successful in all their undertakings at this time they will make considerable advance. What they want is the privilege of selling and drinking intoxicating liquor: and in some of the states where they are now forming their drives they plan even to take away the restrictions against the sale of liquor to minors

There are many arguments from the wet camp as to enforcement and personal liberty and "liquors intoxicating in fact"—but what they are all after is hard liquor. They want to take away the state enforcement codes; they want to repeal the Volstead Act; they want the saloon.

There are prominent politicians out for high office on the strength of their wet affilations, and this is easy to meet. But some of the tactics and maneuvers of the wets in regard to the referenda which are proposed or about to be proposed need close scrutiny and unceasing vigilance.

For instance in New York, where Elihu Root, who works for the brewers, writes the wording of the referendum, the people will be asked to get excited over an utterly unintelligible question, while the wets vote their candidates into office The same thing will happen in Illinois, and probably in Wisconsin. In short the Elihu Root-Brewer camouflage is a clever feint to attract the attention of the dry defense to one point, while the main wet attack is made at an unguarded point.

Another new wet maneuver is clever in that whichever they institute a light wines and beer movement they interject the phrase "liquors intoxicating in fact." This catches the eye of the uninformed, but if that phrase should be written into the laws every judge and every jury would have to decide in each case whether or not the liquors involved are intoxicating, a situation utterly impossible and indefensible and one that would give rise to a Babel confusion.

This makes the coming election one of great importance, and the dry leaders everywhere are urging their friends and followers to inform themselves of the local and state situations and be fully prepared to meet the intricate attacks of the wets.

The W. C. T. U. insists upon and carries as a slogan this year the fact that prohibition is the best method yet found of dealing with the liquor traffic. All the wet speakers who appeared in the recent widely heralded hearings before the Senate sub-committee in Washington merely brought out that fact in stronger and stronger light Whenever they painted a picture of bad conditions under prohibition, they accentuated the need for the enforcement of the national and state liquor laws. Wherever there was a lawless condition they extolled that fact and yet they ask for national anarchism as far as control of liquor is concerned.

The real wet attack in New York Illinois and Wisconsin, is cleverly concealed; for the referenda in those states, even if carried, would mean nothing.

They are trying to fool the public with these brewers' measures, while their main hope is to elect enough wets to the House and Senate to repeal or render infective the Volstead Act.

Wets seek to repeal the state enforcement laws in Missouri, California, Nevada and Montana, while in Colorado they seek to nullify the state prohibition constitutional amendment. This latter move is novel and has the merit of being legally logical from the wet viewpoint.

The wets have been working up their publicity and their propaganda with masterful cleverness for many months. They are hurt and make much noise howling. That seems to be the character of their publicity They introduced about seventy-five wet bills into congress, none of them passed, but each bill was the basis of newspaper notice. Then the famous Senate hearings in April, which were exploited by the wets, were engineered entirely by those anxious for a return of the saloon; by those openly seeking to repeal the liquor laws of the United States. There was no valid excuse for those hearings; the drys have won, have put the nation on a dry basis and are insisting that the laws be enforced. The wets seeking for a forum form which to blazen forth their attacks on the drys, threatened to filibuster the United States Senate to an extent that would prevent the transaction of important national legislation.

Fair To Be Show For All Michigan

A cross section of all Michigan, picturing graphically the life and industry of the state, will be shown through the exhibits at the State Fair this year.

From farm crops and livestock displays on through the list to the latest inventions in the world of machinery, the Fair will touch at some point the interests of practically every citizen of Michigan.

Agriculture, of course, will be covered fully, the most complete list of exhibit classes in the history of the Michigan Fair being listed this year. All standard breeds of horses, cattle, sheep and swine will be shown extensively. Poultry bees, garden products, horticulture, farm crops—all will be included.

Industrial life of the state will come in for its usual full representation. Automobiles, machinery of all kinds, electrical equipment, household conveniences, and most everything else will find place in the various exhibit buildings. Art and education also have their place

The entertainment features will be marked by a week of "big-time" light harness racing, topped off by championship automobile races on September 11, the last day of the Fair. Circus and vaudeville acts, concerts, night horse shows—the list is too long to give.

U. P. To Make First State Fair Exhibit

The great natural resources of Michigan's Upper Peninsula will be shown to the rest of the world in September during the State Fair here at Detroit. An extensive sectional exhibit, the first in the history of the Fair, will be shipped down from the U. P. for the exposition.

Lumbering and mining, outstanding among northrn Michigan industries, will receive chief emphasis in the display, while agriculture and the tourist business of the north will also be shown.

The U. P. exhibit will be housed in the new agricultural building 150 feet of wall space being given over to the "up north" show. The Michigan College of Mines, the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau, the M. S. C. extension forces, and others are cooperating in preparing the exhibit.

An entry list of 5,000 or more birds is expected in the poultry and pet stock classes at the Michigan State Fair this year, according to superintendents of this phase of the Fair. Addition of special "production" classes to the premium lists this year will attract a new list of exhibitors, it is said. Different sections in the poultry and pet stock division total 1,285, offering a range which covers the whole poultry field.

Sixty Michigan bankers forsook their booths on Thursday, July 29 to gather at the M. S. C. for the annual Banker-Farmer day, sponsored by the State Bankers Association. Problems relating directly to agriculture and the bankers together were discussed, speakers showing how much each group depended on the other. B. S. Harris and W. J. Bateman, of Dimondale won a special livestock judging contest held for the bankers.

A GOOD TIP

Now is the time to buy purebred livestock. A considerable volume of purebred stock originally intended for breeding purposes has been going to the block because prices for purebreds in many instances have declined practically to the level of those paid for slaughter animals. There is need for purebred livestock on farms and it does not seem right to slaughter animals that could be used to improve the quality of farm herds and flocks.

An exceptionally high producing cow is worth many times the price of a slaughter animal. Not only does such an individual produce more actual milk and butterfat, but the superior production characteristics of such individuals may be passed on through several succeeding generations.

The fact should not be overlooked that purebred livestock is a real necessity. Without such stock, milk and butterfat records and weights of fleeces will decline and uniformity of type and quality will be sacrificed. No improvement can be made without them. Now is the time to sell scrub stock and buy purebreds while the prices are low.—Banker-Farmer.

Why I'm going to the Greater MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

By Cousin Joe

SPEAKING OF IMPROVEMENTS!

Glenn Pape's boy and Dave Cook's daughter got home from Albion and Olivet colleges this spring and are spending their summer vacation together. Last night they both came over to the house to hear me talk. "Going to the State Fair this year, Cousin Joe," asks the young man, "I hear there's all sorts of improvements." "Sure I'm going," I says, "and as for improvements there's the new Agricultural Building, a lot of new exhibits, a big horse show and Ralph DePalma is going to be in the auto races. But speaking of improvements," I says with a wink to my wife, "seems to me one of the biggest improvements that could be made in this state would be to move those two colleges you young folks go to closer together!"

PROGRESS OF THE GREATER MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

The Boys' and Girls' Club Building houses the "Junior State Fair." This department has its own contests and prizes—is complete within itself. It is now one of the most popular features—and one of the most valuable from an educational standpoint—of the whole Fair. Above photo shows the splendid building the juniors will occupy this year.

MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

An Exposition Worth Seeing

DETROIT, MICH., — The Rev. Desiderius Nagy, D. D., pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Flint, was recently invested with the insignia of papal chamberlain with the title of Very Reverend Monsignor. The investiture was made by the Right Rev. Victor Horvath, D. D., Bishop of Kalocsz, Hungary, who has been touring the Central States with Cardinal Csernoch, Primate of Hungary. The Right Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of Detroit, attended the ceremony and delivered a sermon in which he complimented Msgr. Nagy on the work he has accomplished among the Hungarian Catholics of Flint and the vicinity.

RELIGIOUS LEADER NEAR DEATH, FOLLOWING STROKE

DETROIT, MICH.—The Rev. Fr. Francis Gzella, pastor of the St. Stanislaus Church, of this city, and a leader among Detroiters of Polish descent, is near death in St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital where he was taken following a stroke of paralysis. Father Gzella recently celebrated the thirty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the Priesthood.

3,000 DETROITERS GREET VISITING MALTESE BISHOP

More than 3,000 Detroiters of Maltese descent turned out to honor the Rt. Rev. Michele Gonzi, D. D., Can. J. U. D., Bishop of Vittoriosa, Malta, at a reception and concert held in the Knights of Columbus hall in Detroit, recently.

Bishop Gonzi is the first Maltese bishop to visit Detroit, the largest Maltese colony in America. He came to this country to attend the Eucharistic congress in Chicago and stopped off at Detroit on his way home. Carey D. Ferguson, U. S. Collector of Customs, John Cameron, British Consul, Mayor John W. Smith and Judge Joseph A. Moynihan, of the Wayne county circuit court, served on the committee of welcome.

Six hundred French-Americans, including three bishops and 207 priests, returning from the Eucharistic Congress at Chicago, were guests of the Detroit Franco-American club at lunch at the Book-Cadillac hotel, recently. The occasion was the celebration of the 225th. anniversary of the settlement of Detroit by the Chevalier Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac.

Convention Of Music Merchants

Judge Charles L. Bartlett of the Recorders' Court in this city, will be one of the principal speakers during the second annual convention of the Michigan Music Merchants Association to be held in the Book-Cadillac Hotel August 16-19 when upward of 1,000 delegates and visitors from Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan will be present. Frank J. Bayley of Detroit, president of the state organization and head of the Detroit Music Trades' association, announced today Judge Bartlett's acceptance.

Judge Bartlett who attracted the attention of the nation by his severe jail sentences handed to speeders and drunken automobile drivers, will speak on "The Deterrent Effect of Music on Crime," He believes firmly that music has a beneficial effect and if used more widely would produce startling and interesting results.

Ossip Gabrilowitch, director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, will be one of the judges at the grand finale of the Greater Detroit Piano Playing Championship contest for school children to be held in the Belle Isle "bowl" the night of August 17. Several other noted pianists are expected to be judges, it is announced by Roy A. Maypole, general convention chairman.

Among the speakers will be: E. R. Jacobson of Hammond, Inc. president, Music Industries Chamber of Commerce and president of the National Piano Manufacturers' association; Matt Kennedy, Chicago, president, National Piano Travelers' association; Charles H. Yahrling, Youngstown, Ohio, first vice president, National Association of Music Merchants, and W. Otto Miessner of Milwaukee, who will discuss group piano instruction in the schools.

The Detroit Common Council has granted permission for the holding of a public street dance to be held in the center of the downtown business and hotel section on the night of August 16. There will be demonstrations of several methods of group piano instruction during the convention.

Two hundred and fifty parochial and public school children who won school and district championships during the elimination trials of the piano playing contest will be awarded rings. Silver rings will be given the school champions and gold rings to the district winners. Diamond rings will be presented to the six contests participating in the grand finale.

If you have an electric washing machine, says the United States department of agriculture, be sure to pull out the electric plug when leaving the machine between wash days and coil the connecting cord where it will not collect moisture and dirt Do not lubricate or adjust any part of the washer while the cord is connected to the current source. Proper insulation of all wiring, cords, and electrical devices is especially important in the laundry, where the worker often touches them with wet hands and where the floors and walls are damp.

Country Poultry Meetings

Hillsdale County farmers and poultrymen will be given an opportunity to study poultry culling and management under the local leader system which has been used so successfully in some of the other counties of the state. It is planned to train leaders from eighteen or twenty communities at central training schools to be held during August.

The meetings will be held as follows: Friday August 13th., at Fred Clark's farm, three miles south of Allen—afternoon meeting; Friday August 20th, at Pierce Hatchery, one mile north and one half mile east of North Adams—afternoon meeting; Friday, August 27th at Wilson Lake—all day meeting and picnic with Professors Hanna and Stafseth as speakers.

Two leaders from each township or community will be given the opportunity to take the work. These leaders will inturn take the work back to those interested in their own communities. They will, also, become equipped to do the culling work for others in their communities.

Baby's Food And Hot Weather

August, the month of hot days and hot nights is upon us, the months when mothers of bottle fed babies have to be more than ever on guard. It is during August especially that attacks of diarrhea are likely to occur. Diarrhea if allowed to run on may be very serious. Bottle-fed babies, according to Hygeia, the health magazine of the American Medical Association are more susceptible to diarrhea than breast fed babies.

Especial care must be taken of bottles at this time. Bottles should be rinsed out immadietely after use. When washed they should be washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water and scalded thoroughly. The milk for baby should be kept very cold on ice preferrably, until the time it is to be used. Pasteurized milk is better than raw or condensed milk.

The baby should have plenty of cool water—not ice water, during the summer months it is better that this water should be boiled then cooled. A gallon or more be prepared at one time, then the water container should be tightly covered, the water cooled and kept cool till used. Mosquitos and flies should be kept away from him and his food.

Radio Gets Vital News To Fruit Men

Apple growers of Michigan are getting prompt reports on the time to spray for control of the second generation of the codling moth through bulletins which are being broadcast each noon from the M. S. C. radio station, WKAR.

The entomology department of the college is using the air this summer to supplement its regular service through the county agricultural agents, and as a result growers are getting this vital information more quickly than ever before.

Sprays must be applied at just the right time in order to control the apple pest. Thirty different observation stations are maintained over the state by Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the entomology department. The time of emergence of the winged moths of the first generation of the codling moth is determined at these stations, and then the entomologists are ready to broadcast word as to just when to spray to catch the "worms" of the moth.

The spray time varies for every section of the state, altitude, nearness to the Great Lakes, soil conditions and many other factors entering the calculations. As a result individual information must be gotten out, and the radio is proving a wonderful help in reaching fruit growers.

At noon each day, eastern time, Professor Pettit is going "on the air" over WKAR to tell each county about the spray dates as determined at the college.

Eight Thousand At M. S. C. Farmers Day

More than 8,000 Michigan farmers and their families gathered on the campus of the state college here last Friday for the annual summer Farmers Day, the meeting taking rank with the largest farm gatherings ever held in the state.

After inspection of the M. S. C. experimental plots and livestock in the morning, the visitors ate picnic lunches under the campus trees

The big afternoon meeting was featured by a horse pulling contest for the state championship. Teams entered by Allen Haskins, of Ionia and A. G. Vanderbeck, of Alma, both broke the old state record, setting up a new mark of 3,100 pounds draw bar pull on the dynomometer. Vanderbeck's team won the event on a distance basis, when both teams failed at 3,150 pounds.

Interest in the horse pulling contest reached fever heat when the great teams both exceeded the former state record of 2,875 pounds held by Vanderbeck, and rounds of applause greeted the teams and drivers after each attempt to pull the final load the full distance.

A bright future for Michigan agriculture and industry was predicted by L. Whitney Watkins, state commissioner of agriculture, in a talk on "Michigan's Agricultural Trio." John A. Doelle, secretary of the Michigan Realtors Association, delivered the main address of the afternoon, and also pointed to the greatness of the state and its wonderful future.

Bulletins of information on the National Dairy Show, to be held in Detroit in October, and the Michigan State Fair, to be held Labor Day Week, were given by Prof. O. E. Reed, of M. S. C., and by Mr. Watkins.

The President's Job

To anyone who imagines the president's job is a snap,, a few facts may serve to illustrate the fallacy of that belief. The occupant of the White House finds precious little comfort wherever he may be, and there is absolutely no place in Washington where he and his family may go for one minute in seclusion and peace, as is desired by most families in private life. From a late issue of the Dearborn Independent we clip the following relative to the daily doings at the White House where President Coolidge is supposed to be at home to literal thousands of the citizens of America, but is really a prisoner shut off from the privileges of life by the high walls of official etiquette or the double-riveted barriers of the secret service work.

Chief among the nuisances with which the officials have to deal, we might mention the "crazy cranks" who are constantly journeying to Washington on various more or less hazy errends—always waiting and watching for an opportunity to gain admission to the executive offices, and always terribly offended if denied the pleasure. Among this class are found some foreigners, a few radicals and a large majority of "nuts" or slightly demented persons, who drift about from one place to another and seldom ever run afoul of the authorities unless it should be in Washington,

A large force of detectives and secret service men are constantly on duty at the White House and in the outside reception halls besides trusted doorkeepers and others specially detailed to watch all visitors. Most of these men are old timers and have known most of the Senators and Representatives by sight, and few questions are asked, of these, but the average stranger receives a quite thorough inspection before being introduced to the President's private secretary and that is about as near as the average visitor who is unknown, ever gets to the Chief Executive, Upon occasion these detectives can impersonate either a private secretary or the president thus disposing of irksome and more or less garrulous callers. It used to be considered good timber for newspaper articles each time some poor lunatic or demented person called at the executive offices and created a disturbance if refused admission. But those days have passed and no one thinks such an occurrence worthy of mention—there are too many of them.

One superbly dressed woman came to the White House grounds along with hundreds of others, walked to a beautiful flower bed and plucked a whole armful of the handsomest blooms and started to enter the reception room when the attandant asked her who gave her permission to do this. Then it was this woman exposed her true condition. She replied that God Almighty had given her permission to pick the flowers, but after considerable diplomacy by the officials this woman was rounded up and sent home with her relatives.

Seldom a day goes by when an experience of this kind is not met by the secret service men Practically all these people are more or less mentally deranged and might do the Chief Executive harm if allowed to interview him.

Under such circumstances the strain on Mr Coolidge's nerves is terrific.

Hot Weather Suggestions for Safely Shipping Hogs

Members of cooperative livestock shipping associations when marketing hogs can profit by observing all the "hot weather hints" listed by the United States department of agriculture as necessary for best results. The list includes the following suggestions:

Haul or drive your hogs into shipping station in ample time to allow them to become rested and cool before loading.

Insist upon a clean car bedded with sand.

Wet down the bedding and interior of the car before loading.

Give only a light feeding before shipping. Heavy feed means more body heat generated.

Load not more than one hour before train is to depart.

Load slowly and carefully. Avoid excitement, and do not beat or bruise the animals.

Load not to exceed 16,000 pounds in a standard 36 foot car during warm weather.

THE BASIC TROUBLE WITH AMERICAN AGRICULTURE

Many Mythical Causes Given But the Chief Financial Problem Rises From Inflation of Capital Account Based on War Prices—Remedy Pointed Out—"Trick Legislation" Will Not Help.

By MELVIN A. TRAYLOR
First Vice President American Bankers Association.

IN recent years agriculture and the welfare of the farmer have been our most fruitful topics of conversation. Political fortunes have revolved around the unhappy situation of the farmer and the business barometer has gone up and down with varying proposals for his relief. Only a few years ago there was widespread feeling voiced by the leading agriculturists that the time was fast approaching when America would not be able to feed its rapidly increasing population unless there was improvement in soil culture, fertilization, reforestation and larger production. What is the situation now? The worry seems no longer to be for food for the hungry millions but for more millions to consume our tons of food.

M. A. Traylor

Evangelists of despair have talked so much about over-production and surplus of agricultural products since 1920 that we are warranted in calling attention to a fact or two which may be enlightening to those who have felt that there has been a crushing surplus of the staples of the farm. From 1911 to 1915 average production of cotton was 14,175,000 bales at an average price of 12.41 cents per pound, while from 1921 to 1925 production averaged 11,362,000 bales at an average price of 21.85 cents per pound. In the 1911-1915 period wheat production averaged 806,358,000 bushels at an average price of 89 cents, while in 1921-1925 the average production was 804,384,000 bushels at a $1.11½ average; in the former period corn averaged 2,754,000,000 bushels at 60.3 cents while in the latter the average was 2,873,000,000 at 69.6 cents. Cattle on farms for 1911-1915 were 37,178,000 at an average estimated price of $26.52 while in the latter period the annual average was 41,616,000 at $26.08. Hogs on farms in the first period were 63,151,000 at an average price of $9.53 per head, and in the latter 60,418,000 at $11.34.

The Surplus Production Myth

From these figures, which eliminate the period that embraced the war and the early post-war inflation, it will be observed that, with the exception of cotton and cattle, production has been almost uniform in the two periods. In no case has production anywhere approached an increase commensurate with the increase in population. So-called surplus production is largely a myth and the cause of the farmer's complaint must be looked for in some other direction. It must be admitted that all has not been and is not well with this industry. After all, what is the matter with agriculture? There are a few facts which seem obvious as a part at least of the underlying causes of the situation and which suggest something of the remedy that sooner or later must be applied.

Present difficulties had their inception largely in inflation of prices for agricultural products from 1915 to 1920 with consequent large expansion of profits. This led inevitably with the farmer as with the manufacturer to expansion of plant and equipment—the acquirement by the individual of larger acreage and modern, if not always efficient, machinery. These statements do not apply to every one because there are always some who play safely and conservatively, proved by the fact that there are millions of farmers who have gone through the recent crisis without any difficulty and are today prosperous and contented. In fact the complaints today are coming from less than 25 per cent of the farmers of the country and from the hordes of politicians who are seeking to make capital out of the situation.

Results of Inflation and Expansion

With the average and with the majority of those who were swept off their feet by the wave of prosperity through which they were passing, let us analyze the results of this inflation and expansion. The farmer operating on land that he was carrying in his capital account at a value of, say, $100 per acre, and who perhaps had a loan of $50 an acre, suddenly found that, because of the increased profits from his operations, his land had a market value of $200 per acre and that, if he had a new tractor and some new farm machinery, he could greatly increase his production. But if he did that he would need a larger barn and more warehouse facilities. The chances are that with an appraisal of $200 per acre on his land he increased his loan to $100 per acre, thereby doubling his capital account and his bonded debt—not out of earnings but because of his ability to effect a "clean write-up" of 100 per cent of his plant account.

If he did not effect the doubling of his capital account in this manner, and if his $100 acre farm was clear, he probably bought his neighbor's farm for $200 per acre and mortgaged both the new and the old for $100 per acre. In this latter case, he increased his capital account 150 per cent.

It is easy to see what this did to his net percentage of income. If he had been able to make 6 per cent on his original investment, without any allowance for the increased cost of operations which of course did take place, he cut his net income, based upon his capitalization, about one-half when he had completed his expansion program. But worse than that happened. His calculations had been made upon a price for his product which reflected wartime demand and buying power of government money which were suddenly curtailed. With demand gone and buying power withdrawn he found his gross selling price cut in two. His gross at the high figure had enabled him to make 3 per cent net on his new capitalization. This now was cut one-half by the reduction of his gross selling price and instead of making a 6 per cent return, as he was able to do perhaps on his original $100 acre farm, he has since been lucky if he has made 1½ per cent on his new capital account.

The Remedy

I am confident that something of this kind underlies 75 per cent of the present difficulty. How can it be remedied? I believe that time and intelligent hard work is the surest restorative of better conditions. No magic of trick legislation can accomplish the result. There are a few facts which must be faced and accepted before a start to better things can be made. The first and most important is recognition that farming never was, is not now, and I do not believe ever will be a so-called money-making proposition. By this I mean a business in which a man may engage with the certainty of being able over a period of years from the production and sale of farm commodities to accumulate great wealth.

There are those who will say that unless farming can be made a successful money-making proposition there is no hope for the future of the country. My argument with such people will turn on the correct definition of what is a satisfactory money-making business. I believe that if farming is intelligently and industriously followed it is a satisfactory business but I do not believe that it is sufficiently a money-making proposition to attract those who are ambitious to play for big fortunes.

There are those also who say that many men have grown rich in the past in agriculture. I do not think they have from the mere production and sale of farm commodities. The men who have grown rich in the past from agriculture have owed their success most largely to the ownership of what would now be considered very cheap lands, which over a period of years have shown quadruple and more appreciation in values.

The Advantages of Farm Life

But if agriculture does not mean great wealth, and it certainly does not involve a life of idleness, ease, or luxury, it does mean much more. It means if intelligently and industriously followed a character of independence vouchsafed to no other trade or profession. How do I know this? I know it by experience and I know it by observation. The farmers of today have more good, wholesome food than any man working on a salary of $2,500 per year can buy for his family and be able to pay his grocery bill without paying any other of his debts. The farmers who are complaining of their inability to make money enough to pay for their necessities of life are enjoying at home as a natural heritage of their business comforts and luxuries which the man in the industrial centers working for a salary is spending every dollar of his income to obtain and then is not getting anything commensurate with those enjoyed by the farmer.

It is these so-called unledgered items of the farmer's income that are too often lost sight of in the calculations made by our reformer friends who would legislate a living wage and universal prosperity to those engaged in agriculture. If the farmer as a whole would be happy again he must take stock of his blessings and thank God for them, get rid of his quack doctors of political bunkum, revalue his plant and equipment, and start over again in full knowledge of the fact that he must face keen and effective competition, that he must work hard and intelligently, that he must calculate in his income inherent and undeniable items, which are not measured in dollars and cents.

When he does this, I feel perfectly certain that over a period of years, taking the good and the bad as it comes to all classes of business, he will find that he has lived well, that he has had a fair margin for the enjoyment of all the necessities of life and a surplus for those luxuries which he has a right to claim, and above all, that he will have had a chance to be an independent individual, a real man and a self-respecting citizen.

WEIGHED ONLY 98 POUNDS

Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cleveland, Ohio.—"I have really had all kinds of trouble. After having my first baby, I lost weight, no matter what I did. Then a doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I got worse, was always sickly and went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it helped her very much, so I tried it. After taking four bottles, I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble." —Mrs. M. Riessinger, 10004 Nelson Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

If some good fairy should appear and offer to grant your heart's desire, what would you choose?

Wealth? It's a transient thing that brings it's own cares.

Happiness? It's an elusive thing which we keep by giving away.

Health? That's the best gift. Health is riches that gold cannot buy and surely health is cause enough for happiness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be the good fairy who offers you the priceless gift of better health.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Mexican Government's Conflict With the Catholic Church Reaches Crisis.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT CALLES and the Roman Catholic church in Mexico are now in the midst of one of the bitterest struggles of recent times and the outcome, not at present easy to predict, may be of vast importance to the republic below the Rio Grande. Calles and his government are determined to enforce the new religious laws, and they now have behind them the Labor and Socialist parties, which control a majority in the Mexican congress. On the other side stands all the power of the mighty Catholic church which claims the allegiance of nearly all the inhabitants of Mexico. Early in the week an episcopal letter, signed by Archbishop Mora y del Rio, the seven other archbishops and thirty bishops, was sent to churchmen throughout the country instructing them that after July 31 no religious services would be held in the churches and the priests would be withdrawn from them, though the buildings would be kept open. The letter set forth that penalties would inflict on those of Catholic faith who were in any way responsible for the religious laws or who in any way aid in their enforcement. There was a plain hint of excommunication, and immediately there were many reports that bishops and others were being arrested for sedition. These were unconfirmed, but such arrests are not unlikely.

The government's reply to the letter was a statement that all churches abandoned by the priests would be taken over by the civil authorities and entrusted to citizens' committees to be used for worship and other public purposes. The secretary of the interior said once the churches were thus taken, they never would be returned to the clergy. The church properties thus liable to seizure were estimated to be worth $300,000,000. The attorney general sent a circular to his agents throughout the country asking them for statements as to whether they support the government wholeheartedly in its determination to enforce the religious laws. It is reported that all those who do not sympathize with the government will be removed from office at once.

Catholic leaders said they would continue the fight for modification of the religious laws. One of their latest moves was an appeal by the women to Senor Natalia Calles to defend their cause before her husband, the President. They said: "Your husband will do whatever you desire because man is noble and easy to lead. . . . We demand equity, tolerance, and justice. We desire peace, union, and welfare. You are a woman, a wife and mother, and we hope that you will hear our appeal."

Directors of the League for Religious Defense—the lay Catholic organization—having been arrested on charges of sedition, the league appointed new directors but kept their names secret. All last week the churches were thronged and baptisms, confirmations and marraige ceremonies were astonishingly numerous.

Organized labor demonstrated its adherence to Calles' policy by holding great parades in Mexico City and other centers. "We are determined to fight the issue to a finish in the interest of the liberation of the working man from the trammels of centuries," said a prominent labor leader. "As we see the question, the issue is whether we workmen will be allowed to think or have our thinking done for us by the makers of creeds and preachers of superstition. We are behind the President to a finish, through peace or war."

WHAT the Illinois senatorial primaries cost, where the money came from and for just what purposes it was paid out were the objects of the investigation opened in Chicago last week by the senatorial "slush fund" committee. Chairman Reed—he is in effect the committee until the time comes to write its report—found out a lot of interesting facts, and as the inquiry goes on he probably will dig up a great many more, including those concerning the political activities of the Anti-Saloon league in the Middle West.

As had been expected, Samuel Insull, the public utilities magnate, was the leading character in the first part of the proceedings. It appeared that he was a sort of horn of plenty for both parties and for several factions of the Republican party in Cook county. The donations made by Mr. Insull, so far as made known up to the date of writing, were:

To Frank L. Smith	$125,000.00
To George Brennan	15,000.00
To Deneen county faction	10,000.00
To Barrett-Crowe county faction	10,000.00
Spent for anti-world-court propaganda	33,735.19
Total	$193,735.19

Senator W. B. McKinley, who was defeated by Smith, paid his own expenses, which reached the large total of $358,616. The total collected and spent for Smith was $287,282; that for George E. Brennan, Democrat, who had no real opposition, was $20,841. For the Deneen county ticket $129,894 was spent, of which no part was contributed by Senator Deneen. The Crowe-Barrett faction, which was generally victorious in the county, spent $150,000. Some of these figures may be changed by later testimony. Edward H. Wright, a colored political leader of Chicago, refused to answer many of the committee's questions, and so did Mr. Insull. Later they may be compelled to reply. Also Senator Reed planned to call on the Governor Small-Lundin faction for an accounting of the amount of cash they collected and for information as to what was done with it. It has often been charged that this group squeezed something like a million dollars from state employees and contractors. This was supposed to be a fund to aid Governor Small in his fight to avoid paying about $1,000,000 which the Supreme court has decided he owes the state.

GOV. MIRIAM A. FERGUSON of Texas was rather badly beaten by Dan Moody, the attorney general, in the gubernatorial primary. Dan had a majority of about 900 over his four opponents and led Mrs. Ferguson by 125,000. "Ma" had promised that she would resign if Moody beat her by so much as one vote and now he and others are calling on her to make good. But she has called a special session of the legislature for September 13 to consider certain legislation she wishes passed and therefore plans to retire from office about the first of November. Moody's nomination by the Democrats is equivalent to election.

JOHN W. DAVIS, who because he was the Democratic Presidential nominee in 1924 is considered the party's leader, has joined the movement for abolition of the two-thirds and unit rules in Democratic conventions. At least twenty Democratic national committee members favor the change. Mr. Davis believes, however, that if either rule is retained, neither should be discarded.

PREMIER POINCARE at this writing has good prospects of putting his financial program through the chamber of deputies, which already has expressed its preliminary confidence in the new ministry by a 358 to 131 vote. The veteran statesman proposes to raise 5,000,000,000 francs in new taxes, and when the financial commission of the chamber refused to approve one section which calls for a 15 per cent increase in passenger and freight rates, Poincare told it that the project could exist only as a unity and he would make the passage of every article, once the plan reached the chamber, a question of confidence. The commission naturally did not wish to contribute to another cabinet crisis so it approved the whole plan, adding to it a clause increasing the salaries of deputies from 27,000 to 45,000 francs. Communist and Socialist deputies are still opposing the premier's plan, but the necessity of adopting these new taxes on French business and industry is generally recognized. The government also has introduced a measure designed to safeguard the country's wheat supply.

DEMONSTRATIONS against Americans in Paris are decreasing but have not entirely ceased. President Coolidge, in his summer camp, has taken notice of the ugly feeling in France and through the correspondents there he urges the American people to adopt an attitude of moderation, forbearance and sympathy toward European nations struggling to repair the economic ravages of war. He especially deprecates the bumptiousness of many tourists and hopes foreign peoples will recognize that these are irresponsible individuals whose utterances do not represent the sentiments of the American people.

The President evidently has no thought of yielding to the barrage of French and British criticism of America which is believed to cover a concerted revival of the effort to force complete cancellation of the war debts. He is standing pat on the terms to France representing a cancellation of more than half the entire French borrowing and all of the portion obtained for actual prosecution of the war before the armistice. He is standing pat on the British settlement, representing a 25 per cent cancellation.

GERMAN industry is being throttled and that country's financial and material recovery is prevented by the national welfare laws forced by the Socialists, according to a statement by interallied experts. These men say the German industrial situation had improved this spring and early in the summer, but now the unemployed are increasing. Every week new plants close down because they have not enough export orders to warrant the expenses of production. The main reason for the unfavorable situation is that the German prices are so high the country cannot sell goods abroad. The chief reason for the high prices is the social welfare laws, which have forced the employers and workers to pay $631,000,000 in 1925 for alleged welfare, when the entire exports of the country for the same period amounted only to $1,518,000,000.

MANY millions of dollars of damage was wrought by a terrific hurricane that swept through the West Indies, up the Florida east coast and along the Georgia coast. While there were some deaths in Florida, the greatest loss of life was in the Dominican republic, where three vessels were wrecked and scores of passengers drowned. Property damage at Palm Beach was estimated at $1,000,000, and at Miami, Stuart and other Florida localities it was in the hundreds of thousands. At Nassau, in the Bahamas, it was said the damage might reach $5,000,000, as several of the great hotels there were heavy sufferers.

ON THE twelfth anniversary of the beginning of the World war the League of Nations office at Geneva gives out statistics showing that Great Britain, France and the United States, in the order named, are spending the most per capita on preparations for new wars. Great Britain's average annual outlay, including military, naval and aerial budgets, is $573,000,000, or $12.96 per capita. France has an average annual expenditure of $255,000,000, or $6.43 per capita. The figures for the United States are $554,000,000, or $4.94 per capita. Italy's per capita expenditure for armaments is $3.86; Japan's is $3.68; Russia's is $1.45, and Germany comes last of the nations noted with $1.70. The British house of commons was officially informed last week that Germany has failed to keep faith with her disarmament promises.

ROBERT TODD LINCOLN, last surviving son of the Emancipator, died last week at his home in Manchester, Vt. The end came peacefully in the night, death being caused by cerebral hemorrhage. The body will be placed in the Lincoln tomb at Springfield, Ill., beside that of his father. Mr. Lincoln, who would have been eighty-three years old on August 1, had a noteworthy career. He was secretary of war in the cabinets of Presidents Garfield and Arthur, and President Harrison appointed him minister to Great Britain. After the death of George M. Pullman Mr. Lincoln was made president of the Pullman company, which position he resigned in 1911.

George Inness, Jr., an eminent American painter and son of a yet more noted artist, passed away at Cragsmoor, N. Y. He spent his winters in Florida and many of his pictures were of Florida scenery.

Sweden's Crown Prince Bids America Good-by

San Francisco—America has reached a high cultural level along with its great strides in industry, Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden declared in a farewell address here, reviewing the things that impressed him most on his tour of the United States.

For himself and Princess Louise, he expressed gratitude "for the overwhelming kindness in this country."

"It is, indeed," he said, "a great satisfaction for us to have been able to see for ourselves the high cultural level of the country and to find that the cultural development goes hand in hand with the material one."

The prince dwelt on the vastness of the country, the daring and energetic spirit of enterprise, the "triumph of organization" in industry, the high standard of American railroads and the scenic grandeur of the national parks.

Stockholm, Sweden.—Prince William, second son of King Gustaf, has definitely announced his plans for an extensive lecture tour through the United States to begin in New York January 17 and to cover a period of two months.

He will give about fifty illustrated lectures in the principal cities of America as far west as Denver.

His subject will be his exploring and hunting expeditions in the interior of Africa, especially among the pigmy tribes and in parts not before visited by white men.

Insects Cause Big Grain Loss

Damage May Be Reduced by Early Harvesting and Prompt Fumigation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is best to harvest grain crops as soon as possible after maturity and to fumigate them promptly in order to kill any stored grain insects, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Farmers now suffer enormous losses from insect damage to grains. Farmers' Bulletin 1483-F, just issued, brings out many interesting facts relative to the cause and extent of insect infestation of grains.

Where Insects Develop.

The idea that insects develop from the germ of grain, although long since discredited, still persists among grain handlers and producers. The fact is, says the department, that grain often becomes infested with insects before it is harvested. The rice weevil and the Angoumois grain moth live over the winter in the grain bins, fly to the near-by fields of ripening wheat and corn as these are nearing maturity, and lay eggs upon the wheat heads or corn kernels. These eggs hatch and the young pests burrow into the immature grain.

Illustrations are given in the bulletin of corn cribs designed to permit effective fumigation and instructions are given for their construction. The most successful grain fumigations are carried on at temperatures ranging from 75 degrees to 95 degrees Fahrenheit.

Other Facts Noted.

The new publication also discusses the fumigation of grain with heavier-than-air gases, effect of fumigation on the germination of seed, heating grain, and other related topics. A copy of the bulletin may be obtained free, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

For Success With Flock Don't Let Chicks Crowd

Many troubles which beset the growing stock may be warded off by preventing the chicks from crowding, say poultry authorities at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture.

The situation becomes more and more serious as the birds increase in size. Many birds showing stunted growth and unkempt feathers fail to grow simply because of lack of room and not because of any particular disease or deficiency in the ration.

The damage is done at night. One may have a relatively small number of birds in a house and feel that they have ample room, but if these few persist in crowding on the floor the resulting damage may be as great as if the house were actually overcrowded with stock.

The thing to do is to get the birds in the habit of roosting as soon as possible. When on the roosts they must line up in single file with plenty of air circulation on all sides. Care must be taken, of course, that the stock shall not get chilled. This means that the house should be kept around 60 or 70 degrees. If one has difficulty in teaching the birds to roost it may be necessary to tack one-inch mesh wire netting under the roosts and from the front roosting stick to the floor. The birds may then be forced up the wire about dusk and in a few days will go up of their own accord. Get them on the roosts. It pays.

Study of Coöperative Live-Stock Marketing

A study of co-operative live stock marketing associations, including the organization, operating methods and problems of local shipping associations as well as terminal co-operative commission firms at central markets, is being made by the United States Department of Agriculture. Questionnaires have been sent to managers of local co-operative live stock associations and to boards of directors of the terminal co-operative live stock commission firms, and the information furnished by them is being supplemented by detailed analysis and study of the business set-up and records of the larger associations.

To date more than 600 shipping associations and many directors of co-operative sales agencies have sent much valuable information, and the various live stock marketing groups seem to be greatly interested in the investigation.

Control Currant Worms

Currant worms which have proved a pest in many communities can be controlled best by spraying the currant bushes with arsenate of lead at the rate of two pounds to fifty gallons of water. The currant bushes should be watched closely for signs of this pest for the caterpillars eat very rapidly and begin from the inside of the bush and eat outward.

Worms Are Menace

Worms in chickens are a good deal more serious than is ordinarily realized. This is particularly true when chickens have been kept on the same ground for several seasons. Worms have the same effect in chickens as they do in hogs, causing unthrifty condition and lack of vitality. The one great remedy for intestinal worms in any kind of animal is santonin, which has been used successfully for a great many years. Prevent the parasites by keeping the yards clean.

Mistake with Strawberries

A common mistake made by strawberry growers is allowing the patch to persist for too many years. A commercial patch should produce not more than two crops and a home patch not more than three or four. A patch that has reached this stage should be plowed or spaded up after the season's harvest is over and the soil put to other use for two or three years, when it can again be planted to strawberries and more profitable crops obtained.

Blind Girls Show Skill With Needle

A dress show remarkable in several ways was staged at Bush house, Strand, W. C., where the first free public exhibition in London of the handicrafts of the blind was displayed, says the Westminster Gazette.

Dainty frocks were shown, but the girls whose clever fingers made them never saw them. Some of the girls are deaf and dumb as well as blind. Their work is so good that it sells on its merits in the best salons of Paris and London.

In the Rue de la Paix, in Bond street, Regent street and Oxford street women are unknowingly buying the work of these afflicted girls and praising the perfection of the articles and the "extra finish."

Each girl is responsible for a garment throughout all its processes—from the yarn to the completed parts. The wages are higher than those paid in factories where the employees are sighted. Between 300 and 400 garments are turned out a week.

Helping the Plumber

The plumbers in session in Waterbury objected to cartoons reflecting on their calling. Some of the pictures have to do with bloated incomes and others dilate on the alleged habit of going back for tools. We can help by refraining from retelling the story of the boss plumber who telephones the hospitals as to a small job being done by the helper.

Michigan Theatre in Detroit

The "Roaring Forties" of New York's Broadway and the gleaming glamour of Chicago's "loop" are paling into insignificanoe as the date draws near for the opening in the middle of August of the Michigan Theatre, newest monarch among the wonder theatres of the world.

The theatre; which cost nearly $5,000,000 to complete, is on Bagley Avenue near Grand Circus Park and according to art-critics and builders from all over the world who have had an advance peep into its interiors, it far surpasses any theatre in the world for luxury, convenience and splendor. It has over an acre of seats, totalling nearly 5,000, and its billowing cascades of marbled or cozy nooks and retreats throughout its block-long foyers and promenades, will accomodate at least 3,000 more theatre goers who will be admitted to await their turn for vacant seats in the auditorium.

WORTHLESS CHECK +
Money for Real Estate.=Danger

The questionable real estate operator has devised a new method of disposing of his properties; Like the doubtful stock promoter he seeks to "reload" unfortunate victims of various stock schemes—that is, he pretends to take this worthless stock in part payment for his lots. If you receive an offer to accept your worthless stock at its "full face value" in part payment on real estate, move cautiously.

Worthless stock is worth no more to the dubious real estate promoter than it is to you. His offer is merely "bait" and to make you think you are getting something for nothlng. Then too, it must be true in order to break even, the lots are increased in price to such an extent that the acceptance of your worthless stock causes the real estate operator no loss.

Legitimate Detroit real estate dealers do not employ the "reloading" scheme to sell their properties. Methods universally discredited in the stock field will not be employed by them in selling real estate. When you receive an offer to occept your valueless stock at "full par value"

DETROIT'S GROWTH MAKES MONEY!

Growth in population backed by basic industries is what sends real estate values upward. bringing profits to owners. Let this faster growth bring faster profits to you.

Reputable Detroit real estate can be bought on installment—indeed this is the customary way. You are thus able to purchase real estate out of income rather than capital.

Installments are usually one per cent of the value of the lot per month.

The initial down payment is 15 per cent.

Thus:

A $1500 lot will cost you $15 per month and $225 as a down payment,

Make use of the customary terms to enrollin the ranks of Detroit's profit makers by investing in property in our Golf and Country Club District.

They claim a coal mine has been uncovered near Hudson. Well, here's hoping this is true. For the past two years coal has been so high the common people could not indulge in the luxury without impoverishing the family exchequer. Now that coal has been discovered so near we hope the situation will be relieved. Pennsylvania and Ohio coals will soon be drug on the market and the man who has been carrying coal nuggets around in his pocket as curiousities, will not be seen this winter.

Miss Ethel Clement attended the 33rd annual reunion of the Clement family held at Ransom Center on Tuesday of last week in honor of the 50th wedding anniversary of Aaron Perrin and wife of Osseo. One hundred and two guests were present on the occasion and dinner was served at the I. O. O. F. Hall which was very tastefully decorated for the occasion. Officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Ed Robins, Wheatland; vice pres., Henry Perrin of Pittsford; sec. Ethel Clement of this village; treas., Frank Culbert of Pittsford; historian, Mrs. Howard Lamb Pittsford. The history of the family will be brought up to date and re-printed.

Mud Lake School Reunion was held at the school house Tuesday, August 10th with about 125 of former pupils, teachers and patrons and present residents of the district in attendance. At the business meeting the old officers wete, re-instated as followe. Presiden; James Post; sec'y, Alice Williams treasurer, Mrs. C. N. Williams: Reunion next year will be on the third Tuesday in August

Last week, as most of our readers noticed, our second and seventh pages were blank through the entire edition and it was entirely the fault of the firm that supplies our ready print service from Detroit. It seems they supply a number of shorter 7-column country papers and through a mistake sent us the shorter page, and when we printed our forms the result reminded us of a flapper—too short for modesty, hence we did not perpetrate the obscene joke upon the public, but seized a few blank sheets and sent 'em out. We do not know whether the printer at Detroit had been studying these flappers or he had a head full of mush.

Michigan Takes Census

Last Sunday August 8th the Highway Department of Michigan took another census of the amount of traffic on M-23 which of course runs through North Adams this summer. Mrs. Robert Trumbull reports that during the 14 hours Sunday a total of 1230 conveyances were enumerated both ways. This brings the sum of travel on this line up considerably in the scale and shows what the inducement of good roads will do. When we stop to consider the average day in and day out—we often wonder that the road stands up as well as it does and this route through North Adams was not built for heavy traffic. The high average will continue the entire summer through as M-23 will not be open its entire length until late in the fall. Eventually all of these gravel pikes will become concrete pavements which will remove part of the burden of upkeep we believe, although to tell the truth, most any kind of an improved roadway is a heavy bill of expense to the taxpayer. Until the day comes when aeroplane traffic is in the majority this condition will be with us but ridicule the idea if you will, a universal use of the aeroplane in a few years is not nearly so impossible as the automobile possibility looked 25 years ago.

QUEEN VICTORIA LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Two Famous Women Born the Same Year

In the year 1819, two babies were born whose lives were destined to have a far reaching influence. One was born in a stern castle of Old England, the other in a humble farmhouse in New England.

Queen Victoria through her wisdom and kindliness during a long and prosperous reign has become enthroned in the hearts of the British people. Lydia E. Pinkham through the merit of her Vegetable Compound has made her name a household word in many American homes.

One of the many women who praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Mrs. Adolph Bratke of 4316 South 13th St., South Omaha, Nebr., who was in a rundown condition for four years before she tried the Compound. "I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound," she writes, "and I have felt my health steadily improving." Mrs. Bratke continued to take the Compound for a year and a half and at the end of that time she found herself in excellent health. "I am feeling fine now and do all my work myself," she wrote in her most recent letter. "I am the mother of six and manage an eight-room house without anybody to help."

By the Forelock

Mrs. Charles Murray, the "oil queen," said at a reception:

"Yes, it is true that I'm the only independent woman oil operator, and it's true that my company has been paying 600 per cent dividends.

"Success? Well, to succeed nowadays you must be very quick—take time and everything else by the forelock—like the young man at the seashore.

"'Darling,' the young man said to a girl with whom he was sitting out a dance, 'darling, I love you.'

"'But,' said the girl, 'my goodness me, we didn't meet till half an hour ago!'

"'Yes, I know, darling,' said the young man, 'but I'm only down here for the week-end.'"

Cummins of Iowa at Des Moines. 3—William Hale Thompson, former mayor of Chicago, as he appeared before the senate "slush fund" committee.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Senator Reed Is Defied by Two "Slush Fund" Witnesses in Chicago.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

SENATOR REED of Missouri, conducting the slush fund inquiry in Chicago, struck a snag last week—two snags, in fact. They were Samuel Insull, the Santa Claus of Candidate Smith and others, and Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney of Cook county. Both refused to answer certain of Reed's questions, and persisted in their refusal even though the senator warned them that he would report them to the senate for punishment for contempt. The questions had to do with the source of primary campaign funds that were expended in behalf of other than senatorial candidates, and the witnesses contended that the committee had no right to make such inquiries. The public utilities magnate read replies prepared by his attorney, and Mr. Crowe presumably depended on his own legal abilities.

Mr. Reed sought an admission from Mr. Insull that he had donated more than the $125,000 to Frank L. Smith, $33,000 in propaganda against the world court which he admitted benefited Candidate Smith, and $15,000 he had given George T. Brennan, Democratic candidate for senator. Mr. Insull declined time after time to say whether he had given $10,000 to the Crowe-Barrett organization and a like sum to the Deneen group. Finally Senator Reed, with a trick question, tripped Mr. Insull into admitting he had given Roy O. West $10,000 for the Deneen group.

Altogether the examination of Insull and Crowe was a pretty exhibition of cross examination and evasion, conducted politely and seemingly without rancor. Whether the two recalcitrant witnesses will ever be punished for contempt is a question. Before they were put on the stand Former Mayor William Hale Thompson told the committee he had received $25,000 from Smith's campaign manager and turned it over to the Crowe-Barrett organization. He said representatives of that faction sought his support, promising in return to aid him if he were a candidate for mayor next year. Not much was learned from Fred Lundin, one of Governor Small's chief supporters, but he put on record his opinion that Small is "a wonderful, fine, soulful man—a victim of criminal prosecutors." Ira C. Copley of Aurora, interested in utilities, told how and why he contributed $25,000 to the Smith campaign; and County Judge Edmund Jarecki painted a picture of the crookedness and corruption in the last primary with its alleged ballot box stuffing, short-pencil cheating, kidnaping and imprisoning of judges and clerks and the work of gunmen and sluggers who drove election officials from polling places.

Frank L. Smith was permitted to file with the committee a long statement in which he declared that there was a clear understanding between him and his campaign manager that he was to be put under no obligations for contributions.

PRESENT indications are that the contest in Mexico between state and church will be protracted but will not involve actual armed hostilities. At the appointed time the priests abandoned the churches and the buildings were taken in charge by civilian committees and kept open for prayer, the government having directed they should not be used for other purposes except by special order. The episcopate, while asserting the church would never approve of an armed uprising, says it will accept no settlement of the controversy except that it include recognition of the rights of Catholic priests as Mexican citizens. It is supported by a telegram from the pope condemning the Mexican religious laws. So far, President Calles has shown no smallest intention of yielding or compromising, reiterating the intention of his government "to enforce, without fearing interdicts or supernatural punishments" the constitutional provisions regarding religion. Replying to a "harmony" message from President Leguia of Peru, Calles says the clergy, as always in Mexico, seeks to prevent the social and political evolution there, and he concludes:

"If God is the supreme manifestation of good, both in individuals and nations, I do not believe in this instance He has taken sides with those who for more than a century have been responsible in Mexico for internal calamities, international invasions and intrigue, as well as unrest in the conscience of the people."

Up to this writing only one priest, in Alvarado, state of Vera Cruz, has submitted to the government regulations, and he was promptly excommunicated and suspended from the priesthood.

The development that is most threatening for the government is the economic boycott started by the League of Defense of Religious Liberty. Outside the City of Mexico this is having considerable effect, and bankers are said to be very apprehensive of general withdrawals of deposits with the purpose of converting them into gold. It was reported that a bankers' committee asked Calles to suspend the religious laws for one year and consent to a plebiscite on them, but this the government does not admit. In addition to the support of organized labor, Calles has the backing of Former President Obregon, who says the high dignitaries of the church provoked the conflict and must yield.

HAVING forced his fiscal legislation through the chamber of deputies, Premier Poincare easily put it through the senate, the vote being 250 to 13. The project is for the raising of new taxes designed to meet the 2,500,000,000 francs ($66,750,000) deficit in this year's budget and pile up 11,000,000,000 francs ($293,700,000) for next year.

Late in the week the premier asked that the chamber of deputies be muzzled and bound by emergency procedure and that it give the cabinet a vote of confidence on every item of its projects, authorizing the Bank of France to issue an unlimited number of bank notes secured by the purchase of foreign currencies and authorizing the establishment of a national tobacco corporation as a prop for the sinking fund to retire national defense bond issues.

In the matter of immediate action on the debt accords with Great Britain and the United States M. Poincare was balked by members of his cabinet. Such action was greatly desired by the premier for it is necessary to his plan for speedy stabilization of the franc through the obtaining of credits. Bankers also were urging it. But Herriot, Tardieu and Marin strenuously opposed, and Poincare gave in rather than to face a split in his cabinet.

PRIMARIES in Missouri resulted in victories for the wets, the Republicans nominating Senator George H. Williams to succeed himself, and the Democrats naming Former Congressman Harry B. Hawes.

Former Governor Jonathan M. Davis, accused and acquitted of pardon selling, was trailing Donald Muir, young attorney, for the Kansas Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Gov. Ben S. Paulen, Republican, was renominated on the face of nearly complete returns. The Kansas klan fight was reflected in the apparent decisive victory of three Supreme court judges, who handed down a decision ousting the order from the state and by large pluralities given the anti-klan candidates for attorney general and secretary of the state.

Henry M. Johnson, reputed klan candidate, maintained a 7,000-vote lead for the Oklahoma Democratic gubernatorial balloting with two-thirds of the vote counted. W. T. Otjen of Enid, Okla., led the field for the Republican nomination. Late Oklahoma returns widened the gap in the Democratic senatorial race, in which J. C. (Jack) Walton, deposed governor, trailed Congressman Elmer Thomas by more than 11,000 votes. The Oklahoma Republicans renominated Senator Harreld, and those of Kansas again named Senator Curtis, Republican floor leader.

PRESIDENT AND MRS. COOLIDGE made a little trip over into Vermont and spent some quiet, pleasant days at the old Coolidge farmhouse at Plymouth. Before leaving the Adirondacks camp the President made an address, speaking over the long-distance telephone wire to Denver, where his words were broadcast at exercises commemorating the semicentennial of Colorado's admittance to statehood. Urging again the cause of state sovereignty, Mr. Coolidge emphasized the importance of local self-government, and declared much of the strength of the federal government "lies in the fact that the states have the power to function locally and independently, subject only to the restrictions which they themselves have invoked by accepting the national Constitution."

On completing three years as chief executive, Mr. Coolidge told the correspondents at the camp that the business of the country had been better than in any other three years in our history. He did not take entire credit for this prosperity unto his administration, but shared it with the American business man's wisdom and caution. He also noted distinct progress in education and improvement in moral standards.

CONTROL of the senate by the regular Republicans is threatened as a result of the death of Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa. It is assumed in Washington that Smith W. Brookhart will seek to fill the vacancy at the short session. And anyhow it is believed there that he will be elected for the long term in November. With the death of Mr. Cummins the senate is composed of 54 Republicans, 40 Democrats and one Farmer-Laborite. But of the Republicans five—La Follette, Howell, Norris, Frazier and Nye—are usually lined up against the administration, and Brookhart is sure to flock with that group. Others who cannot always be relied on by the regular organization are Borah, McMaster, Norbeck, Couzens, Gooding, Capper and McNary. So it is evident that the administration's control of the upper house will be mighty small or nonexistent.

Senator Cummins' body lay in state in the Iowa state capitol in Des Moines and then was interred with simple ceremonies. His sudden death was sincerely mourned by men of all political faiths, for it was recognized that he had been a most able and devoted public servant of the highest type.

THERE was a threat of war last week between Bulgaria on one side and Rumania and Jugo-Slavia on the other. Raids over the frontiers by Bulgarian bands of irregulars have been so frequent and exasperating that Rumania declared a state of siege on the entire Dobrudja border, and Jugo-Slavia sent to Sofia a note of protest that was practically an ultimatum. The reply of the Bulgarian government was that it was doing all it could to compel the irregulars to cease their activities. It is presumed the matter will be taken up at the next session of the League of Nations.

Scene of Gloom When Sailor Goes to Rest

When Shelberg died we were far south of the end of Staten Island, and I was at her helm. It was a gloomy though not a too dark night, a moon breaking now and then through the masses of cloud above the sea.

"He's gone, Billy," said Clegg, the second mate, coming to my side. "Let's toll the bell."

He took the lanyard of the bell in his hand and tolled the bell, its brazen clapper striking a lonely sound that echoed round us.

It was at eight bells of the following morning, eight o'clock, when the ship staggering under her six topsails, we bore the canvas-hidden form of dead Shelberg aft to the quarter railing for his burial. I was one of those who bore the stretcher whereon he rested. Mad Kylon, his chum, of Helsingfors, walked beside me. The ship was storm beaten, the sea lashing high above her rails. We clung to the life lines, water waist deep. Those who were not burdened with the stretcher whereon Shelberg lay so fast asleep, so unconscious of the wintry seas that roared above and under him, leaped to the shrouds to escape the swamping water. The bearers bore Shelberg on.

At the quarter rail we paused, resting his feet on the railing top. The Old Man came out, bare of head, though we were one and all lashed up in oilskins, our heads half hidden in sou'westers. The mate was there, staring nervously aloft where the mizzen-topsail strained madly at its sheets, gale-bellied.

The deck was lost in smother. The mastheads reeled, lifting unsteadily against the clouds of the Horn. The wind was sleet-laden, bitter, crazed with hatred.

"Our Father which art in heaven," read the Old Man from a small book in his hand, his other hand firm to a ladder stanchion. Clegg uncovered his head. The Old Man stopped his reading, for a gray-black sea, crashing over the bulwarks to windward, swept many of us from our feet.

"Let go," said the Old Man, motioning to us; the stretcher bearers. Shelberg went to his rest.

"Take them upper topsails off her," said the Old Man.

A gloomy funeral morning upon a gloomy sea. The mate cried orders half heard in the uproar. Halyards rattled, ropes washing to and fro along the watery deck.—Bill Adams in Adventure Magazine.

Fraternity Houses Open

The Yale junior fraternities have abandoned their traditional meeting houses with their deep and impressive secrecy. No longer will trembling undergraduates be led into the inky blackness of the "tombs." The Yale campus is studded with queer-looking "tombs," which are usually fairly large buildings with iron-barred doors and no windows at all save a few tiny slits high up toward the roofs where for more than 100 years Yale societies have held their secret meetings. They are one of the great mysteries to visitors to New Haven. With the opening of the new fraternity center the century-old tradition has been abandoned. The new building will be like any other clubhouse. There will be private halls for fraternity meetings but the rest of the building will be open to nonmembers as well as members.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Huge Mosquito-Bite Bill

In your household budget, along with the items of grocery and butcher bills, have you figured on the summer expense of mosquito bites? Statisticians who have been following the trail of the buzzing pests, says Popular Science Monthly, tell us now that every man, woman and child of us paid, on the average, the sum of 91 cents last year just for the privilege of being bitten. The national mosquito-bite bill was $100,000,000! This sum represents the damage done by malaria mosquitoes in bringing on some 3,000,000 cases of chills and fever.

Gives 100-Course Dinner

Guests of General and Mrs. Crozier were treated at Peking to a 100-course Chinese dinner prepared under the direction of the former chef of the imperial household, says an exchange. Fancy dishes were prepared from birds' nests, sharks' fins, fish sounds and lips, bone marrow, ducks' tongues and livers, chickens' windpipes, bamboo shoots, seaweed and sixty-year-old rice. Hot light wine was served in tiny jade cups. The dinner lasted three hours.

Smoke Stopped Runaway

A new wrinkle in stopping a runaway horse was tried by a motorcycle policeman of Geneva, N. Y. After failing to catch the horse's bridle, the policeman got ahead of the horse and, maintaining a lead of a few feet, opened the cutout on the machine, sending continuous puffs of smoke in front of the horse. The smoke screen proved too much for the animal and it soon slowed down to a walk and a pedestrian stepped out and stopped him.

Radio Divulges Secrets

Crossed wires interfered with a sermon being relayed from London by telephone and broadcast by a Sheffield (England) radio station. In the midst of the sermon radio listeners heard the voice of an unknown telephone operator saying, "Drop your sixpence, please." Then an angry woman began to upbraid her husband for not returning home. The family quarrel crowded out the sermon and was broadcast over a wide area.

Suspicions

The man crawled from under the wrecked car and got to his feet. He had escaped miraculously with only some injury to his right ear, but they took him to a hospital to have the hurt examined.

The doctor peered into the injured member, probed and peered again. "Yes," he said at length, "you have punctured the wall of your ear."

The patient moaned.

"The very ears have walls," he said miserably.

They rushed him at once to the observation ward.

Wonderful New Alloy

Discovery of a new steel alloy is announced by Sir Robert Hadfield, head of Hadfields, Ltd., steelmasters, at Sheffield, England. So high a temperature will it withstand that a gas turbine has been constructed to run at the speed of 55,000 revolutions a minute, at a working temperature of 1,650 degrees Fahrenheit. Machines made of this steel, it is stated, can be worked at a bright-red heat.

Canada Protects Railways

The custom of American manufacturers of automobiles to drive new cars across the Canadian border has aroused the customs department at Ottawa, the officials of which maintain that this is a discrimination against the railways that should be stopped. They say it is not only unfair to railways, but if allowed to continue would cause congestion in highways at times.

FORESTS BASIS OF WORLD WEALTH

Forests enter into every business and social activity. They are essential to civilization. They are in demand more each year for recreation and the restoration of health. Woods, fresh air and exercise in the open bind up the ragged sleeve of care better than medicine. It is Nature's prescription.

The forests furnish employment for one million three hundred and fifty thousand persons. They supply wages annually amounting to approximately one billion. four hundred million dollars. These industries represent an investment of twelve billion dollars. In value of output this industry ranks third in the United States. But the forests stand second to none as an essential resource of prosperity and civilization.

This universal importance of the forest imposes upon each person the duty to conserve and protect the forests. The chief factor in forest conservation is fire prevention. Fire is the great destroyer. Forest fires are due almost entirely to human carelessness and therefore may be almost entirely prevented by the exercise of due care which means the observance of good forest manners. When we are in the forests we should not try to prove that intelligence and decent citizenship is a cloak that can be thrown off.

We do not burn our homes, our offices, our personal property. We go to the assistance of him whose home is burning.

Croswell Plans to Build up Fruit Raising in County

Few Michigan cities have in prospect the transition that is about to take place in Croswell. Croswell is to become the center of a new east Michigan fruit belt, and in time will become as famous a fruit shipping center as its sister cities across the state.

Lloyd DuMond, resident manager of one of Croswell's leading industries, a huge canning factory, is authority for the statement that a thriving fruit industry can be developed on farms along the shores of Lake Huron just as it has been developed in Michigan's famous fruit belt on Lake Michigan.

DuMond's opinion in the matter is shared by leading farmers of the district, many of whom are turning their efforts to this direction. As a result, fruit orchards are being planted on farms for miles along the east coast of Michigan. They are small now and many are too young to bear fruit. However, annual additions to the stock of trees already planted, are increasing the potential outputs of the various orchards.

Wife Asks Detroit Cops to Probe Mate's Death

An investigation into the death of Edward Murphy, 52 years old, has been begun by the Detroit homicide squad at the request of his widow, Mrs. Louise Murphy, proprietress of the Novi Hotel, Novi, Mich.

According to the coroner's office, Murphy fell from the running board of an automobile and died the following morning in a Detroit rooming house.

"Information I have received leads me to believe he was slugged in a blind pig near the rooming house," said Mrs. Murphy.

Jackson Sheriff Puts Ban on Naughty Bathing

Following an alleged "naughty" bathing party at Round lake, near Jackson, when, it was alleged, shapely feminine forms, as well as masculine shapes, silhouetted sharply against the darkness of the lake waters and showing an absence of any apparel an order was issued by Jackson County Sheriff Warren Stoddard banning such affairs and threatening court action against persons suspected of such action.

The sheriff's edict also warned against the use of public places as dressing grounds for bathers, and caused "grave" fears to petters who use cemeteries as their locale.

Gas With Wrong Kick Londs Pair in Jail

Selling gasoline in Flint with a kick is all right but the wrong kind of kick surely leads to grief. So now George Fischer, 49, and his wife, Julia, 54, proprietors of a gasoline station at the Dixie highway and Stanley road, are in the county jail on charges of violation of the prohibition law.

One of the raiders charges he bought moonshine whisky from Mrs. Fischer. The raid netted a small amount of liquor. Mrs. Fischer was charged with the sale and Fischer was charged with possession of liquor.

Hillsdale Teacher Is Killed in Thumb Blast

Miss Frances Kinch, 25 years old, daughter of Frank and Isabelle Kinch, well known Huron county family, died in Hubbard Memorial hospital at Port Austin as the result of burns suffered when a cooking range exploded as Miss Kinch was preparing supper.

The explosion was so severe that it blew out the kitchen windows, overturned furniture and craced every pane of glass in the house.

Miss Kinch was a teacher in the Hillsdale schools and was home on her vacation. She was well known as a leader among the young folk in Huron county. Her mother is a state lecturer for the Michigan agricultural department and her father is one of the Thumb's most prominent farmers.

State Starts Work on Montmorency Refuge

Under instructions from the state conservation commission a crew of men are at work on the site selected for a game refuge in Montmorency county.

The refuge is located in Albert township, about seven miles south of Atlanta, and the work is being supervised by Hugh Green, district deputy game warden.

The refuge consists of 5,120 acres of land in which is situated Avery and Sage lakes, the former being about three miles long and one mile in width, while Sage lake is somewhat smaller. Into Avery lake seven spring creeks empty, providing ample water for deer. The land is covered with second growth timber, such as maple, beech, and hemlock on the higher ground and balsam, spruce, tamarack, cedar and other timber which grow in the swamps.

$969,585 In Month From State Gas Tax

The state gasoline tax yielded $969,585 for the month of June after refunds had been made for industrial uses of gasoline, according to a statement issued by Charles J. DeLand, secretary of state.

June collections were $100,000 greater than those of June last year. The total for the last twelve months is $9,311,867. Indications are that this year's total will exceed the $10,000,000 predicted by the ways and means committee of the house.

Chicago Sportsmen Own Hunting Kingdom

A large number of Chicagoans, part of the group which bought acres of forest and hunting lands near Ishpeming last fall, are spending weekends at their private kingdom.

The club, which consists of about 200 members, owns two full townships of land, consisting of 40,000 acres of the best hunting and fishing land in the upper peninsula. A large clubhouse about 80 feet long and three stories high is completed and the entire membership plans to spend the month of August on its reserve.

Bluegill Is Too Smart For Hook But Gets Bait

The bluegill is a notorious bait stealer. Frequently it eats the worm from the bend or curve of the hook, disdaining the barb. A dozen worms may disappear before the disgruntled fisherman is able to land one bluegill from a school. Because of its pernicious habit of swallowing the hook and its small mouth, a disgorger is a handy thing to have in the bait box when bluegill fishing.

Thirty-seven years ago Aman determined to locate a tract possessing great natural beauty, and after spending his life upon it, to turn it over to the public. He searched for 10 years before he found the Sand Creek valley.

Refrigerator Plant To Cost $5,000,000 Soaring in Detroit

Another huge industry has been added this week to the magic industrial city on Detroit's west side.

Inauguration of a $5,000,000 Detroit building program, commencing with the immediate construction of a large plant was announced by A. H. Goss, president of the Electric Refrigeration corporation, which is the holding company for the Kelvinator and Nizer corporations and the Leonard Refrigerator company, of Grand Rapids.

The manufacturing operations of the Kelvinator and Nizer corporations will be consolidated in this new plant, which will be ready for occupancy on February 1, 1927.

The erection of the new plant is expected to increase the total number of employes in the Electric Refrigerating corporation to 10,000 and to make possible a yearly production of 1,000,000 refrigerating units.

Cleared on Charge of Burning Village For Insurance Money

David E. Crawford, wealthy Marinette, Wis., lumberman, was found not guilty of arson on the charge of burning the village of Cedar River, Mich., June 6, 1925, by a jury in Menominee circuit court.

Crawford was charged with setting fire to the village in order to collect the insurance of $130,000.

To warrant conviction of the defendant, the jury was told it must be satisfied on three points: That at the time of the fire at Cedar River, the buildings of the defendant were insured against loss by fire; that David E. Crawford knowingly and willfully set the fire to destroy them; that he did so with intent to injure the insurer.

Before Crawford can collect his insurance money, he must win 61 civil suits which are on the docket for the October term of court against the various insurance companies with which he carried indemnity on the village.

Car No. 14,000,000 Is Run Off Line at Ford Rouge Plant

The Ford Motor company has passed another milestone in its career with the production of car No. 14,000,000. The machine came off the assembly line at the Fordson plant a few days ago.

It was only a little more than two years ago that Ford broke all records then existing with production of car No. 10,000,000. That was June 4, 1924.

In slightly less than 26 months 4,000,000 more cars have been added.

Adrian's Oldest House Sold to Close Estate

The colonial home property on East Maumee street in Adrian's business district was disposed of for $19,500 in a sale conducted by George W. Ayers, Lenawee circuit court commissioner. The property was sold to Joseph Nopper of Adrian, its sale being made necessary for the settlement of an estate. The home is one of the oldest houses in Adrian, having been built 75 years ago, and for the last 40 years has been used as a boarding house.

The Blessedness of Misery

The following is from the pen of an unnamed author. If misery was his lot, we are gainers thereby.

Misery has wrought finer things in the lives of men and women, by a million times, than happiness ever did. People congratulate, or even envy, us if we are comfortable, prosperous and happy; but it is a shallow viewpoint and could not be generally accepted because of our cramped outlook and circumscribed horizon.

They should rather say "BE GLAD—IF YOU ARE MISERABLE" and "If the bludgeons of fate have beaten about your head and made it bloody with wounds, heavy with sorrow and furrowed with care—rejoice greatly, for the birth of a new day is at hand."

The birthpains of a new advancement in the art of living life are of more value than a whole lifetime of purring self-contentment. Nothing has ever resulted from material comforts, affluence or riches—that is, nothing of permanent value. If a rich man gives his dollars to the poor he often does more harm than good—by making poor men into dependents, beggars and surfs; and if he spends it all on himself he does but become an overstuffed, pampered, offensive degenerate. The man of very moderate means is so often totally engrossed in enjoying his little bit of transient prosperity that it entirely destroys his computation of life's values. PROSPERITY, the god that most of us bow down to and worship like a pack of whip-driven slaves, isn't what it's cracked up to be. I see hundreds and thousands of so-called "prosperous" men today, who, either from their ability or cunning, are earning, or getting, incomes that put them beyond care and worry as regards material needs; but they are hopelessly caught in the snare of riches—that is comparative riches. Their compassion towards their fellows resolves itself into a lunch at their fraternal club; their urge towards the world's betterment resolves itself into improving their own personal health by playing eighteen holes of golf on Sundays—then the spring chicken dinner tastes mighty good after that; then "Gay Paree" is very entertaining for the evening and keeps 'em from thinking or getting blue; and so another day is rounded out with a total result of nothing; with a computed progress minus nothing—in the direction of nowhere.

Give me misery—a thousand times—rather than the illusion that I am living the life when I am merely dawdling through existence. Those prosperity hounds with baggy knicks, nifty cars, expensive tastes and dollars to satisfy them are nothing more than tinkling bits of tarnished brass beside a man who is bearing sorrows, responsibilities, burdens, and heartaches. If there is one prayer I can whole-heartedly make to the God who rules our destiny, and one which stands the most chance of being granted, it is: "Oh, God, try me in the fire of misery, adversity and resistance. Let me grapple and fight my way upwards. Pound and hammer the base metal of my soul on the anvil of daily experience till it becomes pure gold."

I will be glad—when I feel miserable! for then I know that the birthpains of a new step in my soul development is at hand. I will rejoice when I am cast down; for then I know that I am only preparing to mount a higher pinnacle than ever before.

Circumstances that try the heart, stimulate the emotions of courage, compassion and faith—these lead to the making of men—real men with the divine attributes of God; but deliver us from the type of man whose prosperity gives him just enough money to take up all of his time and thought in enjoying it; men who feel that they have "arrived"; men who "have got theirs" and to-heck with the other fellow. It sounds paradoxical to speak of being lost in the mase of prosperity—but nevertheless—it is an all too prevalent condition—and it is a pitiable state for any man to fall into. The purpose of life is soul-development; and, unless this is carried out, the years are wasted. Give me misery (if necessary), for men have climbed up from its bitter depths to sublime heights of altruistic service. Give me poverty (if you will), for men have distilled from it an essence of soul-riches that has crowned their lives with splendor. Give me rank failure rather than mediocre success and prosperity—if, by it, I can attain the true end and purpose of life; but, Oh God, Father and Protector of our humanity, save me, save us all from the vitiating, entangling, soul-killing influence of a cheap, selfish, self-centered prosperity.

Medicine Woman Still Plies Trade Among Charlevoix Indians

Nahquahm, only living representative of the old-time Medicine Woman of the Ottawa tribe, lives in Charlevoix, where she still plies her trade, numbering among her clients many of the best educated and informed members of the tribe residing along Little Traverse and Grand Traverse bays.

For the last 50 years she has made annual foot journeys around the state seeking her medicines, roots and barks that grow as far south as Holland and north to the straits.

All the herbs are brewed or beaten nito a poultice. Among them are wintergreen leaves, cedar boughs and ginseng for rheumatism. Cedar is brewed and used as a sleeping couch. Red willow, elm and hemlock bark brewed, is the drink for dysentery. Fresh elm and willow bark is also chewed for its juice. Coughs and colds are cured, so she says, by wild cherry bark hot tea and another tea made from the roots of the spikenard. Ginseng and balsam are remedies for anemia and the bluee beach bark and sweet fern tea a panacea for female disorders. Blood disorders she cures with a concoction of dandelion and sarsaparilla root tea.

Kine-quay, or Charlotte Waukazoo as she was known as the daughter of old Chief Waukazoo, of Holland and Saugatuck, where a hotel now bears his name, gained fame through her cure for cancer. All knowledge was buried with her 40 years ago at Cross Village, near the straits, though one of the threee remdies was sweet fern made into a poultice.

Oil Prospector In State Asks Right to Hunt for Gold

E. T. Merritt, representing Oklahoma oil operators, who recently was given a lease to drill for oil on lands in Alpena county, has asked the state conservation commission to extend his operations to include gold. His company wishes to prospect, he said. The matter was referred to the state geologist.

The commission closed all counties south of the north lin eof Mason and Arenac counties to deer hunting for five years. It also prohibited deer hunting in Emmett county for a like period.

John Baird, director of conservation, was authorized to take the necessary legal steps to prohibit the collection of rent from "squatters" on state property along Saginaw bay. Baird claimed unscrupulous operators, who have no title to the land, are extorting rent from owners of small buildings inside the meandered line along the water line. The state probably will permit the tenants to remain without paying rent.

Copper Price Increase Seen as Boon to State

The slow but steady rise in the price of copper which now commands more than 14 cents a pound, has revived hopes for renewal of activity in many camps in the Michigan copper field. Prediction is freely made that if 15-cent copper is realized it will be the signal for a general resumption of operations.

Like ohter copper regions in the United States, the Michigan fields have been hit hard since the World War. Only five Michigan groups are operating, employing 7,500 men, compared with a peak of 17,000 in 1919.

Here's a Tasty Dish for Those Who Like to Eat Crayfish

The crayfish, more commonly known as the fresh water "crab," is considered a rare delicacy by Bernie Speece, a Three Rivers authority on fish and game, and a real epicure.

Taking the crustaceans from the beds of nearby streams, Mr. Speece prepares them for the table much in the manner that a chef in a large restaurant prepares a lobster. After plunging them into boiling water and permitting them to stew for from three to five minutes he removes them ready for the table. The meat in the claws, while it does not exist in large quantities, is very sweet and toothsome, especially when dipped in drawn butter. The breasts also afford morsels that are tasty.

The crayfish is a mudder, Mr. Speece explains, and is as high up in the genealogical tree as the lobster. Its flesh is white and its shell, although quite tough, is easy to break with an ordinary kitchen nut-cracker.

Eagles Build Nest in Old Dead Tree In Monroe County

A few steps off the road leading from Monroe to Bowles Harbor is a mighty elm. Ten years ago this was struck by lightning and killed. The following year a pair of bald eagles decided the naked crown of this tree would make an ideal home, since every year finds them returning to this aerie. The nest at present is about 6x4 feet. Throughout the tangle of sticks and refuse are a number of small muskrat traps, no doubt carried by the old birds who used as food the victim entrapped in steel jaws. This year, as in the past, two fledglings were raised and it is a common sight to see the old birds come from the sloughs of Lake Erie with a five or six-pound carp to satisfy the appetites of these growing youngsters.

State Commission to Define Fishing Waters

The conservation commission of the state of Michigan will soon define just what bodies of water shall be held as connecting with the Great Lakes, because of so many differences that have arisen during the past spring.

Disputes over early fishing is the cause of the step.

"Gentlemen:-

"Replying to yours of the 11th instant, will say that I am glad to add one more testimonial to the praise of HIMALYA. I am 44 years old and when I was 15 years of age I began to suffer with Asthma, and the paroxysms got worse and more frequent for the next ten years, until I could rest no way when an attack was on; but thanks to 'HIMALYA' I am well and I suffer no more from Asthma, and as it has been ten years since I was cured, I feel that the cure is permanent, but should it ever recur, I would send for another treatment of HIMALYA. I had used every remedy I could hear of, all to no good, but HIMALYA gave me relief from the start. HIMALYA is the one great boon for Asthma and Hay Fever sufferers, and I will always be glad to recommend it to all who suffer with same. As ever,

"Yours truly,

The Philadelphia of Our Ancestors

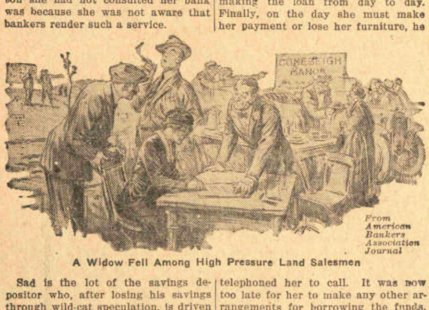
Here is shown a section of "High Street," a reproduction of Philadelphia's famous Market street in the days of 1776. It is one of the outstanding features of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition now being held in Philadelphia to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Every building has been built to actual size and in actual architectural detail. The furnishings of each building are exact reproductions of those used in the Revolutionary days. Many of the pieces on display are the originals and today are worth thousands of dollars because of their historic value. The Exposition continues until December 1.

LAND swindles are almost as common as sand on the seashore. Here is one. A widow was left alone in the world with but $6,000. She was urged to take a free ride into the country to look over a new town site. Just a pleasure ride, she was told. No obligation on her part. She accepted the invitation with no intention of parting with her precious $6,000, but she fell among high-pressure salesmen and in an unguarded moment she affixed her signature to a contract to purchase a vacant lot for the $6,000 cash she had in a savings bank.

W. R. Morehouse

Thirty days after she drew out her account for what she supposed was a business lot she received a notice that her monthly instalment of $6,000 was due, being a $1,000 payment on each of six $6,000 lots. Strange as it may seem, not until she received this notice did she read the contract she had signed. Instead of buying one $6,000 lot and paying for it, as she meant to do, she had signed a contract to buy six $6,000 business lots and the $6,000 she drew from the bank had been applied as a first payment of $1,000 each on the six lots.

Had she gone to her banker she would have saved herself the loss of her inheritance, but doubtless the reason she had not consulted her bank was because she was not aware that bankers render such a service.



From American Bankers Association Journal

A Widow Fell Among High Pressure Land Salesmen

Sad is the lot of the savings depositor who, after losing his savings through wild-cat speculation, is driven to desperation for funds and finds it necessary to borrow money to meet an emergency such as sickness or unpaid rent. Let me give the facts about two cases of the many with which I have come in contact.

The Loan Shark at Work

The principal characters in the first case are a man, who must borrow $350 to place his wife in a hospital to save her life, and a loan shark, who demands every ounce of blood. In desperation the borrower applies to this loan shark for the loan of $350.

This is what it costs him—the amount is almost unbelievable but I obtained the exact figures first hand and I can vouch for their correctness —this man was obliged to give his note for $925 for a loan of $350! The day he got the note the shark sold it to an innocent holder and it became an obligation binding upon the borrower. Think of paying $925 for a loan of $350!

Here is another. This time there is a woman in the case. The woman needed $165 to meet a payment on her furniture or lose it. She turned to this same shylock for assistance and this is how he handled the case. He led the woman to expect that he would lend her the money but kept deferring making the loan from day to day. Finally, on the day she must make her payment or lose her furniture, he telephoned her to call. It was now too late for her to make any other arrangements for borrowing the funds. The shylock had planned it so that she would be at his mercy and would have to accept his terms. He charged her $650 for a loan of $165!

How the Shark Does It

Doubtless your curiosity is aroused as to how this shylock can get away with such a deal. Here are the facts. He charged a large commission for making the loan and also included a wide range in fees such as for drawing up papers and notarial fees. On top of this he required the borrowers to buy stock in his company which was worthless. Then he required them to take out through him life insurance to about one hundred times the amount of the loan for which he received a liberal commission. In fact, he resorted to every imaginable scheme in order to bleed them of the last drop of blood they had to give. And the unfortunate thing about it all is that the borrowers in these two cases found it necessary to meet such exorbitant terms because they had already lost their savings through ill-advised investments.

And rather than be talked to death the Senate appointed a subcommittee to hear both sides.

No matter what the Wet newspapers said, those hearings contain the record of the Wets who want to flood the country with liquor by knocking down law and order; and they also contain the record of the Drys who are in a majority in this country and intend to remain in majority, and who have proved the economic and moral advantages of prohibition.

There has been no change in the strength or attitude of the decent people of America; and the policy to pursue on election day in November is to vote and to see that your neighbor votes for dry candidates-

No clearer explanation of the situation before us can be made than that given by Mrs. Boole to the state presidents in a recent letter in which she said:

"Missouri, Montana, California. Colorado, Wisconsin have real referenda initiated in accordance with their state laws, The wording is different but every one of them if adopted will greatly cripple law enforcement. The same question is submitted in New York and Illinois. Its wording is ambiguous, it is not mandatory and it is the practically unanimous opinion of the temperance leaders in these two states that the emphasis in a campaign should be placed upon the election of Dry officials and not on the referendum.

"In the other states, however, the result is mandatory and a very active campaign must be carried on. If we win the fight in these states it will stop the submission of referenda in other states; if we lose, it will give aid and comfort to our enemiea."

College Colts To Be Shown At Fair

New members of the M. S. C. show string will feature this year in the college horse exhibit to be entered at the Michigan State Fair at Detroit September 5 to 11 in a large exhibit of both Percherons and Belgians, R. S. Hudson, Superintendent of Farms, at the college expects to enter 14 head of horses.

Among the entries in the Belgian group will be four yearlings, two stallions and two mares, sired by Treviso. Treviso was sired by the famous stallion Dragon and was Grand Champion at the Ohio State Fair in 1923.

Others to be shown in the Belgian class are the grand champion mare Leila with her filly foal; Utelem, junior champion at the International Live Stock Show at Chicago last year; and a yearling colt from Marie who was one of the group of three mares shown at Chicago last year which won in the class for the best three mares.

The exhibit of Belgians will be made up largely of daughters of Range Line Phoenix, a stallion of unusual size that was twice reserve champion at Chicago.

Pervenche, a famous individual with the best record among the college horses will again be shown this year with her 17 championships and 16 first premiums. She was grand champion at Chicago two years in succession as well as at several state fairs, and last year won the mare and foal class at both Ohio and Michigan State Fairs.

Of especial interest will be two beautiful sorrels, half sisters of Pervenche. One of them resembles Pervenche very closely.

At the head of the Belgian show string will be John Dubois 11, sired by the famous stallion John Dubois. This three year old stallion was purchased recently to take the place of Range Line Phoenix, transferred to the upper peninsula at the Chatham station in the spring.

Start New Club Camp At Gaylord

Boys and girls of the upper half of the lower peninsula will have their first opportunity to attend their own club camp August 17, 18, 19 and 20 at the Otsego county fair grounds at Gaylord, the first camp to be organized in this section of the state. Two hundred boys and girls are expected to attend according to A. G. Kettunen State Club Leader.

Ten winning teams in judging and demonstration contests with their leaders will be awarded free trips to the Michigan State Fair through the courtesy of the Board of Managers. This will be an opportunity for 22 boys and girls in the contests which will be an important part of the camp program.

A complete program of recreation and instruction has been planned by the Boys' and Girls' Club Department at the college. Among the features on the camp program are Group Singing Contests, instrumental solo contests, stunt night, baseball, and track contests dairy judging and dairy demonstration contests, poultry culling contests. potato demonstration contests, and canning judging and canning demonstration contests. A program similar to the one for the Gaylord camp was prepared for the seventh annual club camp at Chatham, scheduled for August 9 to 14.

The Jackson Prison Bunch

Chaplain Willie Hopp of the Jackson State Prison, writes very interestingly of the lives of men who are doomed to spend the remainder or a good share of their days in a living tomb where the state of Michigan incarcerates her criminals that society may be protected. Chaplain Hopp says the prisoners as a rule are very pious, which is something quite surprising to most of us. We supposed that real true piety was confined to respectable peace living citizens who try to live up to the laws of this country.

But here comes Chaplain Hopp and says the murderer, the hold-up and the thug have religious tendencies. Attendance at the religious services Sunday morning in the chapel is not compulsory but a large number, in fact practically all of the prisoners are in the habit of attending these servicss and they usually show considerable interest in them. Mr. Hopp tells of a "lifer" called "Daddy Blackburn" who died the other day in prison, and the old fellow actually worried because of his illness he could not attend religious services. The result was that the old man eighty-four years of age, requested that the prisoners in the chapel sing his favorite hymn, "Leaning on the Everlasting Arms" as he could hear it in his cell. This was done and the old "Lifer" passed to his reward happy. While prison methods of the day are vastly different than twenty years ago, there is yet a terror attached to incarceration which sooner or later breaks the spirit of the inmates. There is no question but that Michigan needs capital punishment and ought to get it, but as the sentiment runs now it will be a long time befors that comes to pass. In the meantime our prison population is growing by leaps and bounds. Not so many years ago eight hundred men were confined in Jackson penitentiary, but to-day there are 207 men inside the walls who took human life maliciously and they are in all probability destined to serve out their sentences. The question naturally arises would not the state be well rid of them if they had been put into the electric chair and all earthly clay laid away. The sob squad is always on the job whenever the legislature tries to pass the capital punishment law, and you can usually tell about how the effort will succeed. Most of these men are human (the legislators) and all of them have wives or relatives of the female type who presumably take the cue from other women, and the propaganda goes on and on. But some of these days a particularly atrocious murder is going to so arouse the populace all over the state that something will have to be done and right speedily. Then we look for a right about face of the legislature and the sob sisters will be retired to the background for a few hours while the men do a necessary clean-up job.

To Prevent Chaos, Harbord Urges Broadcasters Support Department of Commerce Radio Policies.

New York.—In connection with the opinion of Attorney General Sargent holding that the Department of Commerce is without legal authority to control the radio, General James G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, issued a statement in which he characterized the opinion handed down as "unfortunate." His statement follows:

J. G. Harbord

"The decision of Attorney General Sargent with regard to the authority of the Department of Commerce to regulate radio broadcasting stations is unfortunate, in one sense, but perhaps endurable if it may serve to impress our legislators with the great need for sound radio legislation. The radio industry has knocked at the door of Congress through the Department of Commerce for constructive radio legislation for considerable time.

Will Back Commerce Policies

Failure of the Congress in the past to enact suitable laws has been met by representatives of the radio industry in meeting in four annual conferences with the Secretary of Commerce and informally agreeing among themselves to a temporary plan of wavelength allocation, station power rating, hours of operation and other pertinent considerations. I haven't the slightest doubt that the fair and responsible men who have met at these conferences at Washington will continue to stand behind the splendid emergency program which they and the Department of Commerce conceived and agreed upon.

"The Radio Corporation of America will steadfastly maintain its policy of strictly observing the present wavelength assignments and it is believed that all broadcasters who are interested in furnishing the radio public with satisfactory service will do the same.

Chaos in the Air a Possibility

"We should not overlook the fact that we are all striving to serve millions of radio listeners. To arbitrarily appropriate the wavelength of one's broadcasting neighbor will result in interference and chaos in the air, rendering reception by the listener unsatisfactory and perhaps precipitate a situation where the listener will find great difficulty in his efforts to separate programs at the receiving end. While this may not come to pass, nevertheless, the possibility of such a condition should serve to impress upon the American public the vital need of radio laws and regulations.

"Meanwhile, the industry should not take Attorney General's decision as a signal to depart from the accepted and efficient arrangements of the present. Responsible broadcasting interests will not, I am sure."

NEW BOOK SKYSCRAPER ON HISTORIC GROUND

On the site which for many years was occupied by the residence of the Roman Catholic Bishops of Detroit, the world's largest and tallest skyscraper, the proposed 81-story Book Tower, will shortly arise, according to announcement made recently.

The proposed tower will far outstrip any office building in the world, according to its sponsors, and with the Book Building and the recently completed Book Addition will occupy an entire business block in the heart of the down-town section.

For many years the property adjoining the present Book Building on Washington boulevard was the site of the "Bishop's House" as Detroit Catholics familiarly referred to it This building was vacated by the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D.D., Bishop of Detroit, in the summer of 1925, when the new Chancery Building erected by him across Washington boulevard was completed

Why I'm going to the Greater MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

By Cousin Joe

HOW FAIRS GOT STARTED.

The other day I got curious about fairs, so I got reading about them. Fairs are pretty old. Princes and magistrates used to encourage Fairs in Europe so people could trade goods at them. Donnybrook Fair was started by King John in 1204. The first agricultural fair in this country was started by Elkanah Watson, of Albany, New York, in 1819. The Michigan State Fair was founded in 1849 at Detroit. It moved later to Adrian, then to Lansing, and then back to Detroit again. Its primary purpose is educational. You can learn a lot at the State Fair. You can get a picture of what the farmers of the state are accomplishing and a lot of new ideas and inspiration for the coming year. That's why I'm going to it in September.

PROGRESS OF THE GREATER MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

The Agricultural Fair is the predominant type of Fair in this country. The Greater Michigan State Fair is primarily a Farmer's Fair but it is of equal interest to the city man. Every citizen of Michigan who takes pride in his own state should know something about its agricultural prosperity, its rich natural resources, and vast future possibilities. The throngs who attend the Fair in September will learn a great deal about their state as well as enjoy a royal good time.

…RECIAN DANCERS AT THE SESQUI

These dancers have selected for their graceful performance the keystone shaped pool in the court yard of the Pennsylvania State Building at the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia, which celebrates 150 years of American Independence. The spot is one of the most beautiful and artistic on the exposition site. The Exposition continues until December 1.

The wheat crop this season through this section of Michigan is far better than last year. Several farmers around Hudson report big yields. One man harvested 448 bushels off eight acres, which is considered very good for these years when land is not so strong as it once was. Most of the farmers this season are threshing their grain right from the shock owing to the dry weather. There seems to be no necessity of curing it in the stack or mow. The grain is being hauled from the machine to the mills or elevators, and the berries are of extra large size and good quality.

Michigan's most perfect baby will be named at the Michigan State Fair next month. From the length and breadth of the state, aspirants for the honor will be entertained by fond parents who believe in their "only ones." Youngsters between the ages of one and three years will be eligible to enter the Better Babies contest. There will be classes for babies from rural districts, from towns and cities of less than 10,000 population, and from cities over 10,000. There will also be special classes for twins and triplets, and a championship event.

What Do You Think of This?

A bunch of music experts in Detroit have it all figured out that music students in schools are much brighter than those who do not take music. The experts say that a survey in many schools of the country has revealed that music students are much farther advanced in their studies in the grades also that children of the middle and poorer classes are by far more musical. "Music hath charms to sooth the savage breast" but how about soothing the double barreled wide-awake young Americans of the present day?

We believe that the experts have begun at the tail instead of the head of the situation to explain. Much more fitting it would be to asy that from start to finish the brighter class of students always ara interested in music and they almost invaribly enter the music classes while the less intelligent and grosser natured students pay little or no attention to it, and many of them actually have no love of music or harmony in their dispositions.

We do not mean to say that al students who do not take music are dull, but as a rule all the higher class will want to engage in the exercises of musical nature. However, it is a faet, that many sf our highest educated people have absolutaly no "music in them" and they cannot even march to music correctly. To such the study of music would be an idle and worthless pursuit.

Sink-hole is Somewhat of a "Poser"

It seems the sink-hole just north of the Union church on the new stretch of road in Pittsford townshjp, has always been there bnt never broken loose and ran amuck so to speak—as it is now doing. The contractor, who by the way, is A. J. Hoffman, is finding considerable trouble in this particular hole. Thousands of tons of perfectly good dirt have been dumped into the fathomless abyss which swallows all and yawns for more.

Experts claim there is solid bottom down below if they go daep enough. The boys are now wondering just how far that means. As yet no soundings have shown the bottom of the morass, and the material continues to disappear from view with neatness and despatch. The principal result so far, is an upheaval of muck from the lower stratas and this mud from far below the surface lies in ridges.

It is comforting to think that Michigan and not the township, pays the shot. When this crater is filled, (if it ever is) several farms will have been consumed and the expense would have built several concrete bridges at $5,000 each.

In the meantime reports from Hanchow, China, indicate the mountains are erupting Michigan mud and the inhabitants are fleeing in great consternation.

Michigan's Good Roads Bring Tourists

Michigan is fast becoming a mecca for summer tourists; if you do not believe this statement, count the automobiles passing through here in the hours of daylight, to say nothing of the night hours.

On the average 30 per cent of these automobiles are packed with camping outfits. In 1925 these tourists left $200,000,000 of the coin of the realm iu Michigan. Records kept at the principal resort hotels indicate that the number of summer tourists this season will exceed those of last year.

We remember with misgivingo the days when our roads were ss bad no auto tourists ever cared to penetrate the wilds of Michigan. Sand and mud have disappeared before the onslaughts of the steam shovel and the gigantic concrete pourer. We believe we can say without fear or favor that when Alexander Groesbeck assumed the governorship of our commonwealth there was a shadowy, hazy talk of good highways in the future, but no good roads and no tourist business. Now, there is no part of the state not readily accessable over splendid gravel and cencrete highways. Public parks and thousands of inland lakes, thousands of miles of coast, make our natural advantages beyond comparison. Governor Groesbeck the master road builder, has done his task well; he has studied the theme; he knows the system as a sailor knows the sea. He took the wastcful contract system in hand, and placed several hundred idle convicts at work. We don't believe the voters want tu down him.

Recent numbers of the popular Farmers' Bulletin Series, issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, are now available. These bulletins cover a wide range of topics and are prepared in such a manner as not to be too technical. A partial list of the more recent are No. 1471, Canning Fruits and Vegetables at Home; No. 1480, Small Concrete construction on the Farm No. 1470 Care and Management of Dairy Cows; No. 1491 Breeds of Dogs; No. 1497 Methods and equipment for Home Laundering: No. 1481, Planting the Roadside. A postal card mailed to Congressman Joe Hooper, Washington, D. C., will bring any of the above bulletins without cost.

The Summer Resort Property Bubble

Michigan is rapidly getting to be a refuge for all kinds of real estate sharks and Detroit is full of them. One kind of property which too many of them deal in is lots of more or less hazy location around little summer resort lakes all over the state. A good many suckers are being caught with this bait from among those who emigrate her from other states for a summer vacation. Being somewhat unacquainted with Michigan values these people are led to believe that every foot of land surroundiug a small lake used as a summer resort, is very valuable, when this is often a flim flam. As a matter of fact there are few if any such vacant lots which will be worth any more in five or ten years than now, as the only use for them is to erect a summer cottage thereon to be occupied possibly a month each year. Big resorts like Manitou Beach and Devils Lake may show some growth and property if bought at the ground price might advance in a few years, but hardly enough to warrant an investment running up to three figures.

Florida set us a real pungent example by ousting these sharks and Michigan will undoubtedly do likewise soon. It is surely a blot on our name to be infested with such a gang. People who come here to spend the summer, are as a rule supplied with plenty of money and they should be allowed to depart with most of it, and not systematically robbed by fellows who have some land to sell.

Michigan prides herself on her resort possibilities and we are expecting she will become one of the most famous states in the Union—she surely has all the natural adventages that meke up an ideal summer resort region. These coupled with our Groesbeck good roads, are winners., but we must not allow dishonest practices to interfere with the business.

Importance Of Good Wells

Nothing is so important as a supply of pure fresh water on the farm for stock and house purposes. In this particular part of Michigan we are very fortunate in being able to obtain first class wells although the expense is considerably more than it used to be—in fact almost twice as much. Many people do not realize the importance of plenty of water for stock uses. Many a time we have seen sheep and cattle placed in a back field in dry hot weather where no water was available and seen them allowed to suffer for water on account of thoughtlessness or neglect on the part of the owner, One could hardly say this was a condition of wilful cruelty, but a case of carelessness. Milch cows especially are great consumers of water during the summer months and should have all they desire in pure supplies kept in a tank somewhere in the shade. These tanks formerly were made of wood but nowadays the cement and steel tanks are very popular—and certainly more sanitary. The supply of milk furnished by these cows is regulated largely by the amount of pure cold water they can get, and they are machines which return what is put in them with good interest. Most farmers who own sheep use the hard block salt leaving it lying in the field handy and of course constant licking of this causes an intolerable thirst among sheep. Water should be constantly at their command. Some years ago the old wooden wind mill went out and was replaced by the steel machine and later this gave way to the gas engine, but to-day we find many farmers quiting the engine and going back to the wind mill as a more dependable and cheaper way of raising water, The splendid new mills which are self oilers, are equipped to wear indefinitely with only occasional oiling, thus the wear and tear on the mechanicism is reduced to a minimum. At one time the Aeromotor Windmill company of Chicago built and put out what was thought to be a bonanza in this line—a steel tower which would tip downward to the ground and after being lubricated return to its original position. It was expected this mill would revolutionize the industry but they were never entirely practical—so we have never seen but one or two in use. At any rate no homesteader can afford to do without a good well on the farm although they cost from $300.00 up according to equipment. Nothing is as good as a tight tubular well driven to solid rock and carrying fifteen or twenty feet of water in the pipe for emergencies. In these wells there is seldom ever contamination from outside sources, and once built they are unfailing conveniences for many years. True, the water in some localities becomes irony and red, a condition which is often laid to the piping. However should an owner be so unfortunato as to live i such a locality he can console himself with the fact that iron water is one of the finest blood and health builders in the world and iron like sulphur tincture can become not unpleasant to the taste with long use. Scientists claim that southern Michigan though strong in lime and other minerals is lacking in iodine, hence the prevalence of goitre. This has led many salt manufacturers to pnt out a special brand of salt for table use impregnated with iodine, but the actual truth of the claim has never been proven, that absence of iodine is responsible for diseases. In this village most of the underlying strata is heavily charged with lime and there is no doubt but this is very harmful to the kidneys. If you do not believe this, take a look into a perfectly clean new teakettle one or two days after it has been boiled on the stove. You will find a heavy deposit of crude lime, and the question naturally arises what condition does this lime bring up on the kidneys? The action is quite the same after the water is taken into the human body. The heat is snfficient to deposit this lime on the walls of the urinary passages and cause brights disease, gravel and bladder troubles, which it might be said are very common in southern Michigan. Other minerals and chemicals are present in our wells which more or less affect the drinkers. While it is not a condition to worry us—in fact there is no use of crying over a matter we cannot prevent—yet some chemist we hope will soon be able to devise means of extracting these dangerous minerals from our drinking water.

Master Minds Behind Radio Have Speedily Pushed Industry to a Point Approximating Bedrock Stabilization

The Public's Preferences in Devices and Programs Are Better Understood and the Major Problem of the Business—Broadcasting—Is Being Solved—Excerpts From a Recent Address by David Sarnoff.

The year 1926 will, I believe, show the distinguishing marks of radio's efforts in the direction of stabilization.

David Sarnoff

Technical developments are nearer to bed-rock. The public's preference in radio programs and in radio devices is better understood. The problems of distribution are clarifying themselves and the major problem of the business—broadcasting—is now receiving attention by many capable minds. The industry no longer has a place for the mere opportunist. Those who have built constructively, with a view of safeguarding the future, will enjoy a healthier and more profitable business than heretofore. Radio has become a permanent asset to our daily life and its future prosperity is assured. While these gratifying results can already be recorded, much still remains to be done to bring about that degree of permanency which is the ultimate goal of all industry.

On the Problem of Broadcasting

Our industry has fallen heir to another problem of major magnitude, namely, the necessity of providing suitable programs to the purchasers of its merchandise. There are those who contend that the present method of supplying free entertainment to the broadcast listener will not stand the test of time, and that unless means are found for direct payment by the radio listener, the present structure will fail. I dissent from this view as I do not believe in the necessity for a direct tax upon the listener through the air.

And now, it may be asked, "How is this elaborate structure of service to be permanently supported? There is no direct tax upon the listening public, there is no governmental operation of broadcasting, as prevails in other countries." My answer is that the problem, apparently tired of waiting for a ready-made solution, has begun to solve itself.

Notwithstanding the fact that most broadcasters have found no way of obtaining direct returns from the listening public, the indirect returns are, in many cases, sufficiently impelling motives for the continuance of broadcasting. Already there is a waiting list for the privileges of the air; the problems of congestion and interference within the limited wavelengths available for radio broadcasting have become so serious that Secretary Hoover has found it necessary to suspend the further issuance of broadcasting licenses.

Support for Broadcasting

The elements of permanent support for radio broadcasting in the United States are becoming clearly defined in the following categories:

1. The Radio Industry.—Whether by voluntary or by organized group effort, the radio industry must and will continue to contribute towards the maintenance of broadcasting, for it is clear that without broadcasting there can be no radio industry.

2. Commercial Broadcasting.—Radio, by virtue of the opportunities it has opened for mass appeal, is bound to become an important economic force. Whether the technique which commerical broadcasting will develop will tend towards institutional, good-will or any other form of appeal, it has become apparent that there is a definite place in business economy for this character of service.

3. Organized Educational Support.—The day will come, I believe, when every metropolitan Board of Education will have an appropriation for radio broadcasting; when such great educational institutions as Harvard and Yale in the East, and universities and colleges in other parts of the country, will have endowments for special broadcasting services that will carry the sphere of their influence far from the lecture room.

4. Organized Social Support.—Many millions of dollars are spent annually in the United States for the promotion of important social services, the improvement of public health, child welfare work and similar causes.

5. Community Broadcasting.—Cities and states throughout the country have spent large sums in the past ten years to tell the American public about their progress, their possibilities and their needs. The Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati, I believe, already has seen the handwriting in the heavens and business men in that city only recently have contributed generously to the support of a great broadcasting program from Cincinnati, Ohio.

6. Institutional Broadcasting.—Under this heading, I include newspapers, department stores and other organizations which have found in broadcasting an important means of developing their prestige and of obtaining public good-will.

These are among the permanent bases of support upon which broadcasting service is being erected.

On the Advantages of High-Power Broadcasting to Public and Trade

The high-power broadcast station is an accomplished fact and the results obtained in the first experiments indicate that the improved service to listeners thus rendered is a valuable contribution towards the permanence of broadcasting.

It is estimated that a super-power station, such as that of the Radio Corporation at Bound Brook, N. J., which was designed for an output of fifty kilowatts, has a listening audience of approximately five million people, and when programs of outstanding merit are broadcast, the audience frequently total fifteen million. Add to this the service offered to broadcast listeners through the periodical linking of numerous broadcasting stations by wire or by radio and it is evident that good service is being rendered to a very large percentage of the Nation's population.

Inductive Interference

The importance of this subject from the standpoint of the listening public generally and the Central Stations in particular, will perhaps justify my taking this opportunity to touch briefly on the important subject of interference with radio reception.

The radio broadcast receiver is essentially a sensitive device, for in order to obtain adequate loudspeaker signals, it is required to amplify an infinitesimal amount of energy to thousands of times its original strength. It is, therefore, capable of picking up and amplifying the inductive electrical disturbance in its neighborhood. So-called inductive interference results from sparking electrical machinery, leakage on high voltage lines and from the operation of other high voltage devices. With the advent of the more modern broadcast receiver, with its ability to give further amplification than that obtainable heretofore, the problem has been somewhat increased; but lest it take on an overwhelming aspect, I desire to make clear that we in the radio industry have not found it an insuperable problem. Quite the contrary, through the very generous co-operation of the power companies, it has been found possible to suggest a solution to every case which has been brought to our attention.

The Radio Corporation investigated more than 500 cases of inductive interference in 1925 alone. It has established a special department for these investigations, and through the co-operation of its manufacturing associates, the General Electric and Westinghouse Companies, experts are available to aid the power companies at all times.

Looking Back—Review

From this meager review of recent developments in radio it will be seen that since last we met in these convention halls in 1924 the hopes then expressed have been realized. We now have super-power broadcasting rendering improved programs and better service to the listening public. Radio receiving sets and power supply devices operating directly from lighting sockets are used in the home. Improved and simplified receiving sets have been made conveniently available.

But radio has not stopped here. It also tackled vigorously the problem of improving the older arts of sound reproduction. And these efforts have produced not only improvements, but virtually created new and hitherto unattainable results in the art of phonograph recording and reproduction.

Looking Forward—a Glimpse Into the Future

In thus projecting its technique into an older but related art radio has merely taken another step in the direction of its travel, for I am hopeful that radio will repay the debt it owes the older industries from which it has borrowed much of its technique by making new contracts and contributions as it proceeds. The next application of these sound recording and reproducing devices will be to the theatre, concert hall, moving picture house and other places of entertainment.

Much work of an experimental character is also being done in exploring the possibilities of broadcasting by carrier current over electric light and power lines.

On the first of the present month a regular commercial photoradiogram service between the United States and England was inaugurated, with results already made known through the daily press.

As we learn to send pictures faster and yet faster we shall arrive at that point of speed when "radio television" will become possible, and then not only the sound of voices and instruments, but the sight of action and motion will come to us and be received in our homes from the remotest corners of the earth. When this has become an accomplished fact through the scientific use of a great natural force then truly shall we be able to say with the immortal Shakespeare, "One touch of nature makes the whole world kin."

FISHES EAT FROM PROTECTOR'S HAND

Boycotted by his former customers, snubbed by former friends, O. W. Curtis, grocer, at Colon, is continuing the fight he began years ago for fish conservation.

Curtis is known to thousands of St. Joseph County residents and to summer tourists as the man who can call fish by means of an underwater gong. Fed raw hamburger from his hands for five years, the fish come trooping at the sound of his gong like hungry hogs at the call of their keeper. Hundreds of visitors who come from nearly every state east of Mississippi have seen the fish leap out of the water to snatch the food he held tantalizingly just above the surface or even eat out of his hands.

Curtis' welfare work among the fish was interesting to the villagers until, two years ago, he conceived the plan of having the Legislature close one of the three local lakes as a fish refuge and, succeeded in putting through a bill to that effect.

Curiosity immediately turned to anger. There are two other lakes near the village, but owners of cottages on the shores of the closed lake found the law greatly depreciated the value of their property. It ceased to be attractive as a place for summer homes, and they quickly discovered that prospective tenants cared little for the once favorite body of water.

Curtis admits his business fell off, and tells how old friends and neighbors would no longer greet him on the street. But he believes the establishment of fish refuges is the only possible means of saving the angling sport to Michigan, and he is determined to carry on.

Izaak Waltons of State's 2 Sections Working Together

The Izaak Walton league in Michigan will have more than 1,800 new members before August 15, according to Dr. John W. Ruskin, national lecturer of the organization, who is on a tour of upper peninsula towns in the interest of organizing new clubs in the several towns of the district.

The Northern Michigan Sportsmen's association, after three years of earnest work, has come to the point where it has found it necessary to affiliate more closely with the lower Michigan sportsmen and fight for its desires with the assistance of the sportsmen below the straits.

The establishment of game preserves in the northern districts has come to be the desire of every district where swamp land and forests offer sufficient cover to protect game. In Menominee County a tract of 5,000 acres was set aside for the purpose. In Keweenaw an immense piece of land on the east side of the peninsula where the majority of deer yards are located has been set aside. Several additional tracts are being offered to the state for the development of wild life.

2,000,000 Ton Gain in Canal Shipments

An increase of nearly 1,500,000 tons in eastbound iron ore shipments, and over 500,000 tons increase in westbound soft and hard coal shipments were responsible for the 2,000,000 tons increase in freight tonnage passing through St. Mary's Falls canal in July, this year, compared with July, 1925, according to the statistical report of lake commerce.

The report shows that 13,607,900 tons of freight were handled by the three locks during July. The figure is considered one of he best for July in the seventy-one years of lock history. In 1925, records show, 11,668,219 tons of freight passed through the locks in July, while in the corresponding period in 1924, 11,138,939 ton were handled.

Ambulance Given by Women to Ypsilanti

The Business and Professional Women's club has presented Ypsilanti with a $3,500 ambulance, the president, Miss Russella Wardroper, making the presentation on the city hall lawn, and Mayor Hugh Vandewalker accepting in behalf of the city.

Pontiac Residents Scorn Filter Water; Stick to Deep Wells

While other Michigan cities are curtailing water supplies and permitting lawns and gardens to burn up, Pontiac has an abundant supply from deep wells.

For many years Pontiac has obtained its water supply from deep wells. Fearing the supply might be exhausted the city employed C. W. Hubbell, of Detroit, consulting engineer, to study the situation. Mr. Hubbell recommended a filtration plant, the supply of water to be taken from Dawson mill pond in the western part of the city. The city spent $600,000 for the plant, and then the citizens wouldn't drink the water.

Permanent Grid Field For Ypsilanti Normal

Michigan State Normal College at Ypsilanti will play its foot ball games this fall on what is expected to be the permanent field for the use of the school's teams. In addition to foot ball, the field affords good facilities for base ball and track events.

Seventeen acres are now ready, and when present plans are realized about 30 acres will be available for athletic enterprises of the Normal.

The foot ball field is within the oval of the track, it being the plan to use the bleachers on one side, for foot ball crowds.

Bathing Beach, Park at Alpena Dedicated

Alpena and its hundreds of summer visitors were enjoying the bathing and lake breezes at Michekewis Park after declaring a half-holiday on the occasion of the dedication of the new bathing beach and park grounds.

All public offices and business places in Alpena closed to allow the public to take part in the dedicatory services which marked the opening of the new civic bathhouse and the completion of a project which has been near the city's heart for years.

Idle Prisoners Cost Less To Feed Than Workers

That it costs more to keep a working man going than one who sits about and watches the calendar, is the deduction of Sheriff Warren Stoddard, after completing his report of expenses at the Jackson county jail.

In June, according to Stoddard, a total of 5,787 meals were served inmates at an average cost per meal of six cents plus, but in July the figure rose to $454.53 for 6,290 meals, or an average of seven cents plus each.

The increase, the sheriff reports, was due to the fact that a larger number of prisoners are engaged on road construction programs than heretofore.

Lumberjacks Name Death Dealing Tree

The lumberjack has contributed to the language of the woods. One of the least known and yet most expressive is that of "widow-maker." When a tree is felled it usually strikes against other trees on its downward journey, springing the branches down. When they fly back they either throw pieces of the bent branches or fallen tree all about with terrific force. Some of these have been known to hit the lumberjack hard enough to kill him, and for this reason are called "widow-makers."

Dearth of Whitefish In Superior Is Reported

There is a surprising lack of whitefish in Lake Superior this year, according to commercial fishermen. Very few whitefish have been caught, but otherwise the season is normal.

Due to the fact that the lake has been rather choppy this summer, forcing the fish to move around and hunt for food, the fish are striking at hooks more this year than ever before. Net fishing is reported to be a little above normal.

Marshall Sets Mark for Postal Receipts

The receipts of the Marshall postoffice for July were $12,344.19, the largest in the history of the office for that month, and Postmaster Mumaw claims the largest of any first-class office in the United States in a city of 6,000 population.

MICHIGAN'S MASTER FIDDLE MAKER

JOHN BUCHHOLZ IN HIS WORSHOP.

John L. Buchholz, of Diamondale, Mich., is the violin maker of the Michigan swamp lands. Buchholz is a master in the art of making violins and has more than enough orders to keep him busy, although his home is in the edge of the extensive "Old Maid's Swamp," four and a half miles northeast of Potterville, 10 miles from Charlotte and 10½ miles from Lansing. Far from the beaten path of travel is the Buchholz home and workshop. There, amid his glue pots and scroll saws Buchholz lives his own life, finding in his work the joy of the master craftsman.

Buchholz has his little workshop on the second floor of his home, where are numerous violins, some completed and others in the embryo stage. A workbench with numerous tools and glue pots occupies one side of the room beneath a long window through which one looks out over fields that stretch away to the horizon.

Contrary to all expectations, visitors to his home find not the hermit they might have expected, but an affable, well-spoken man of about 45 years of age. He enjoys living alone with his work far from the hustle and bustle of a city or even a village.

State Drug Firms and Theaters in Two Big Mergers

Two merger deals of interest to many Michigan towns were consumated this week. One is the merger of 45 theaters and the other acquisition by a chain drug company of 44 drug stores.

Forty-five theaters in Michigan, representing a total property value of $4,000,000, are involved in a merger completed between the Bijou Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., Famous Players-Lasky corporation, and Balaban and Katz and Publix Theaters corporation. W. S. Butterfield of Detroit is president of the new organization.

The new organization, which is to be known as "W. S. Butterfield Theaters, Inc.," will take over the present holdings of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., of which Mr. Butterfield also was president. These holding include theaters in Grand Rapids, Ann Arbor, Battle Creek, Bay City, Flint, Hillsdale, Ionia, Kalamazoo, Lansing, Owosso, Pontiac, Port Huron, Saginaw, Ypsilanti and Jackson.

Included in the merger are three large theaters now under coonstruction in Kalamazoo, Flint and Saginaw.

Negotiations for the purchase of 44 drug stores in Detroit and other Michigan cities were completed by the Louis K. Liggett company in a deal which totals more than $1,000,000.

The purchase includes the stores of the Detroit Drug and Reno Drug companies of Detroit, the Mercer Drug company of Flint, the Beacon Drug company of Grand Rapids, the Sanford Drug company of Muskegon and other stores in Port Huron, Ypsilanti, Jackson and Pontiac.

Louis K. Liggett, president of the company, was born in Detroit, and for many years was actively engaged with the Frederick Stearns company there. He later went east where he founded his first drug store which was the nucleus for the chain of stores now numbering 400.

Michigan Indians Get Craze for Picnicking

Northern Michigan Indians are acquiring another trait from the white man—the picnic habit.

This summer Indian picnics have proved quite the thing. There is no drinking of strong liquor at these picnics. The committees in charge have hauled out the war club and woe to the brave who sports a hip pocket flask.

In making weather predicions, no one should omit at least one "if" and two perhaps."

Blood Given by Son to Save His Mother May Cost Boy's Life

Because Julius Fisher, 33 years old, of Detroit, sacrificed a quantity of his blood recently to save the life of his mother, he is apt to die from minor stab wounds suffered at the hands of three men following an altercation.

Mrs. Fisher, three weeks ago, was near death in a Detroit hospital and a blood transfusion was deemed necessary by physicians. Julius offered his blood and his mother later returned home.

Physicians at the hospital say that while Fisher's wounds are serious, but in themselves they should not prove fatal except for the loss of hte blood he gave his mother three weeks ago in the same hospital.

City Markets at Grand Rapids Cater to 843,065 in Year

Grand Rapids' municipal retail markets, the first of which was established in 1917, are constantly growing in popularity and patronage, although it has seemed upon several occasions in the past that the capacity of at least two of these marts had been reached and that they could accommodate no more growers or buyers. There are now three of these markets in the city.

The statistical report on the markets for 1925 showed that the total attendance was 843,065. Each market has its own lunch room, where the traders may obtain hot coffee, hamburgers, hot dogs or cold drinks.

Farmers Round-up at Chatham Is Saturday

Plans for the annual Upper Peninsula Farmers' Round-up, to be held Saturday at the Upper Peninsula Experiment station, located at Chatham, a small farming community near Munising have been completed. Approximately 2,000 persons were present at the round-up held at Chatham in 1925.

Wife of State Guard Commander Is Killed

Mrs. Guy M. Wilson, wife of the commanding general of the Michigan National Guard, was injured fatally at Waterford when she was struck by an automobile and died in Hurley hospital, at Flint. She had accompanied her husband to Waterford from Flint to visit the camp of the 182nd Field Artillery, en route from Detroit to Grayling.

WILD ANIMAL IN CALHOUN HUNTED

Sheriff George Colby of Calhoun County has offered $25 reward for the capture or death of a large wild animal, variously described as being a timber wolf, a hyena or a lynx, that has attacked two men in the southern part of Calhoun County within the last two weeks, and has taken a heavy toll of sheep and poultry.

Harvey Inman, farmer of Athens, was bitten and clawed on the neck and ears by the strange animal after he had gone to his barn at night to quiet his horse. Inman was attacked in his farm yard. He described the beast as larger than a police dog and black.

"It moved quickly and after it attacked me it jumped over a high fence and disappeared," said Inman.

The same animal attacked William Henry, a Burlington mail carrier, while he was delivery mail upon his route. Henry beat the animal off with his horse whip, and told Sheriff Colby that it resembled a wolf.

Several posses of farmers, headed by Calhoun County deputies, pounded the brush in swamps near Burlington and Athens for several nights, but were unable to find any trace of the animal, which is believed by some to have escaped from the menagerie of a circus or traveling carnival. Several farmers told the sheriff that they saw the disturber slinking along the edge of their fields, apparently in search for prey. One farmer said it looked like a hyena.

Cowbird Is Called Outlaw of Forest; Destroys Young

Much has been written about the destrucitve habits of the common crow to nesting birds of all kinds. Yet little has ever been said pertaining to the destructive habits of the infamous cowbird, the outlaw among birds. The cowbird is far more destructive to smaller species of birds than is the crow.

The female cowbird accepts the attention of any male cowbird that happens to win her admiration. She has no maternal instinct whatsoever. They are without "moral" standards. Thye build no nests, but lay their eggs in the nests of other birds, usually birds that are smaller than they are.

It is the custom of the female, just before she is ready to lay an egg, to find the nest of a smaller bird. There she lays her eggs, while the owner is away, and leaves it to the care of the bird whose nest she chooses, having nothing to do with the egg or the young.

As far as the cowbird's food habits are concerned it is a very desirable and beneficial species. Yet it is a proven fact that for every cowbird that comes to maternity, a brood of some other species must be sacrificed.

The egg of the cowbird is usually considerably larger than the egg of the species imposed upon. For this reason, the egg recieves more warmth than the other eggs in the nest, and therfeore hatches first. The young cowbird being larger and stronger, gets an earlier start in life, monopolizes nearly all the food, and very soon the fledglings of the rightful owner are starved and crowded out of the nest to perish.

The cowbird is the smallest of the blackbird family, and is very abundant over Michigan.

New School is Rising From Charred Ruins

Out of the charred ruins of a new $190,000 consolidated school building, burned December 5, 1925, when scarcely a year old, is rising today a new Lincoln school building, fireproof and 50 per cent larger than the old capacity. The school, located seven miles south of Ypsilanti, is a joint pioneering project of the farmers of the 63 square mile district and the Michigan State Normal college, which supplies its faculty.

New Teacher Law Aid To Newaygo County

The new teachers' training law, effective September 1, has resulted in 35 school districts of Newaygo county being without teachers as yet for the coming year. The law has benefitted the county, though, by causing the reestablishment of the county normal school at Fremont, which was discontinued in 1920 on account of lack of room in the local school building.

Quarter of Century for Holland Rural Delivery

The Holland postoffice recently observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of its rural mail delivery. During the quarter century the number of rural carriers has increased from two to 18.

Irish Envoy's Son In Detroit to Learn Motor Trade Basis

While Prof. Timothy A. Smiddy is busy at Washington winning friends for the Irish Free State, of which he is the first minister to the United States, his son, Sarsfield Smiddy, 20 years old, is in Detroit on a mission he regards as of equal importance.

It is not so glorious nor so pleasant a task as that of his father. In involves exacting physical labor and long study. The youth is fitting himself to act as a leader in Irelands impending industrial program.

Quietly, without ostentation, he has been working at menial tasks in a Detroit automobile factory for the last year. His purposes are known to the executives, and they have furthered them by shifting him from one department to another, but to his fellow-workers he is not one eapart from themselves. He punches the clock, snatches hasty meals with the others, stays until the whistle blows, and between times works with even greater zest and earnestness than usual.

"We have come to realize lately that Ireland, with her resources of coal and iron, can be to a certain extent indusrial. First some of her young men must have industrial training, and thats why I am here," he xeplains.

STATE GRID TEAM KICKS OFF SEPT. 15

The thud of a youthful toe striking a pigskin will first be heard on the Michigan State College campus at Lansing, September 15, according to Ralph Young, athletic director.

The opening date is the same as that of the western conference of schools and marks another step forward in state's efforts to conduct its sports on the same basis as the Big Ten.

With the announcement of the opening date comes the list of eligibles and ineligibles. Announcement was also made of the awarding of the trophy designating excellence in scholarship for the Spring football. Ross Gordon, of Midland, was awarded the trophy this year. Gordon is a halfback and played on the freshman team last Fall.

Practically every available man will be eligible for competition this Fall. A number of the men who are close to the line are taking summer school instruction and are expected to come through with flying colors. Among the men in summer school are Drew, Fouts, Cole, Terbach and George, all of last year's squad, while McGirr, Roths, Edwards, Christenson and Fredericks are the men who were either freshmen or did not win letters who are taking the courses.

Royal Oak Considers Curfew Law Repeal

W. C. Hudson, city attorney of Royal Oak, who recently undertook to clear away the obsolete ordinances of the community, has recommended to the commission that the curfew law of 1912 be repealed. It requires that all children under 16 be off the streets by 9 p. m.

College Girls' Band Formed at Ypsilanti

The Michigan State Normal College at Ypsilanti will boast of one of the few college girls' bands in the United States, next fall, according to Professor John F. Barnhill, who has organized five bands in Ypsilanti during the last two years.

STATE'S EXPORTS GO TO 3RD PLACE

The United States this year is losing $600,000,000 in her sales in foreign markets—one-eighth of last year's total if the last nine months of 1926 register decreases under 1925 figures similar to the statistics for the first three months, given out by Washington.

New York's recapture from Texas of first place among exporting states, and Michigan's rapid increase from eighth to third place were other developments of the new tabulation.

Total exports for first quarter were $1,098,839,243, or $152,000,000 less than the same period in 1925. The total for 1925 was $4,819,041,495.

Decreased foreign takings of cotton and lower prices for this product were largely responsible for the $151,000,000 drop in Texas exports, which carried nearly three-fourth of the total loss. Her exports were $128,873,613. New York's foreign shipments dropped $8,000,000, but the total of $203,497,245 was still some $66,000,000 above that of Texas.

Michigan gained much prestige with an $18,000,000 export increase, due mostly to automobile exports, which made up $54,000,000 out of the $71,765,828 total, putting Michigan ahead of the important foreign trade states of Pennsylvania, Louisiana, New Jersey, California and Illinois in a single jump.

Loneliness Cure Costs $5,000, Says Aged Bridegroom

Peter Saint Peter, 74 years old, was a lonely old man when he was married 10 months ago in Detroit.

Now in the Wayne county circuit court he has filed a suit for divorce against Mrs. Anna Hannenberg, 35 years old, because he is lonelier than ever at a cost of some $5,000 to himself.

"I tell you, a fellow isn't safe anywhere nowadays," Mr. Saint Peter philosophized as he sat in his dismantled home—the home dismantled by Mrs. Saint Peter.

"I used to go over and watch the young folks ride on the roller coaster —the Devil's Dip—they called it. That seemed innocent enough."

Mrs. Hannenberg sold tickets on the roller coaster, and the two fell to talking. A few days later they were married.

Raisin River Church on Sale on Auction Block

The South Raisin Methodist Protestant church, located four miles west of the village of Dundee, is for sale at public auction at the church Friday at 2 p. m. The church, land and the furniture sold separately. One reserve bid is to be held by the trustees. Ministers for a time had been supplied from the Rea district. Money derived from the sale will be turned over to the Cone-Rea circuit.

FOUR YEARS AGO a young farmer, married, one child, was $6,000 in debt. His net earnings from LIFE INSURANCE the first year were $3,000. The next year he was listed on the company's Honor Roll for Production. Now he owns a beautiful home. His wife and family enjoy the luxuries of life, possible by an income which runs into five figures.

The WATER BEARER

THE POWER

SYNOPSIS.—Idly fishing Hermanos creek, in California, Caleb Warner, civil engineer and a New Englander, is witness of the end of a coyote pulled down by two wolfhounds, urged on by a girl rider. Admiring the hounds, he introduces himself, and learns her name is Clinton. With western hospitality she invites him to the ranch to meet her father. At the Clinton home Warner learns his new friend's name is Betty. He is welcomed by her father, Southern Civil war veteran and owner of Hermanos valley. He tells them something of his ambitions and his feeling that he is destined to be a "Water-Bearer." In the town of Golden Warner shares an apartment with his old Columbia college chum, Ted Baxter, carefree and somewhat dissipated youth, only child of his widowed mother, who controls the family fortune. At a club luncheon Baxter introduces Caleb to Wilbur Cox, leading business man and president of the water company which supplies the needs of Golden. He gives Cox an inkling of his ambitions, and Cox, impressed, invites him to dinner that night. During dinner Cox asks Caleb to call at his office next day. He does so and Cox arranges a meeting between Caleb and Hinckley, the water company's chief engineer. Baxter tells Caleb he is in difficulties with a girl, Mary Morgan, Cox's stenographer, who insists he must marry her. With Hinckley, Caleb looks over the water company's source of supply, the Crystal springs, in Hermanos valley. Prospecting in Hermanos valley, Caleb meets a man, Evans, who boasts of his ability, through "divining rods," to locate water without boring. Caleb comes upon a picnic party, the festivities being in honor of Betty Clinton's birthday, and is welcomed. Betty tells him Hermanos valley, containing the burial places of three generations of Clintons, is sacred for all time. Caleb, with Carmen Wilson and Betty, are threatened by a bull. Warner bravely protects the girls, and is himself rescued by Padilla, Clinton's man.

He believed that the lower end of the plain, the portion that the diviner termed the Sink, was composed of gravel, retained in clay but without the clay capping. In it was held the sunken waters of the five creeks, the same water that furnished the wells of the territory north of the creek. And this water should hold the same level, if his theory was correct. It should lie some forty feet below the surface in normal times—less during the storm-water season. It would be absolutely pure—filtered through the gravel. If this was true—and he believed it was—he had found a water mine, a mine with an inexhaustible, ever renewed commodity, that was as commercial as any mineral that, conveyed to Golden, meant the assured progress of that city.

He knew that the city of Berlin, at enormous expense, had manufactured beds of gravel for the filtering of its civic supply, but here at hand he had the filter built by nature, a cistern waiting to be tapped. And this had laid unsuspected under the very noses of Cox and his engineers, and the water experts of Oakville.

He had to proceed cautiously. It was imperative to cloak his intentions and his methods. If he made the discovery, it was his, to engineer and to sell. He could not bore in the Sink to prove out his hope that clay bottomed all the gravel and held the water. He meant to use the diviner for that, keeping him in ignorance of what the experiments might mean.

He stocked himself with cigars, and after supper crossed the bridge and walked along the creek and up the road to the pit. There was a wisp of smoke coming from the rusty pipe and a light burning back of the solitary window.

A smell of crude cookery, blent of cheap coffee and half-cured bacon, tinctured with the acrid odor of beans burned in a pot, came out through the door, which opened part way to Caleb's knock, disclosing the lean figure of the Welshman silhouetted against lamplight.

"Who's there?" asked Evans.

"The fisherman. Don't you remember? You told me about your divining the other day."

The Welshman opened the door wider and peered curiously at Caleb in the broader ray of light. Then he stepped outside.

"Kind of stuffy inside the shack," he said. "A great night. Look at them stars. Ah!"

He took the cigar Caleb proffered and puffed it to a glow, exhaling the smoke with a gratified sigh.

"I brought a few along," sad Caleb, "thinking you might like them. I've got plenty."

The other held out his hand for the brown rolls eagerly.

"That's kind of ye. If you don't mind, I'll put 'em in the shack. No pockets handy that won't mush 'em."

He disappeared in the shack and came out again bearing a bundle.

"I'd like to even up with you on them," he said. "How about an exhibishun? The power's in me."

The suggestion had come as Caleb would have wished it, spontaneously, from the man himself.

"That will be bully," he answered simply. "I should like very much to see you in action."

The Welshman led the way to the top of the gravel.

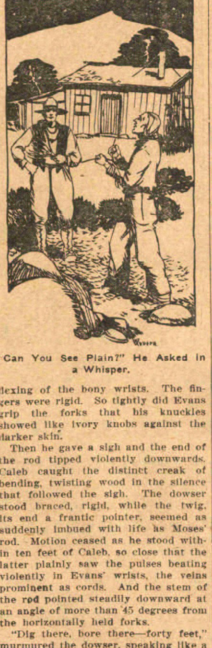
"Choose your place," he said. "I've a notion there's water most anywhere here. The rod'll prove it. Pick one of the rods," he went on, with the air of a conjurer asking for the choice of "any card in the deck." "They're hazel," he said. "Some say hazel's a magic wood, but the magic ain't in the rod, it's in me. Willer'll do, or peach, but I like hazel. Now, where d'ye say?"

Caleb chose a spot clear of sagebrush. It was almost a circle and he stood on the edge of it, a strange tingling in his veins. The spare figure of the Welshman, looking up to the stars, the rod that Caleb had chosen in his hands, breast high, a fork to each hand, the fingers uppermost; took on something of the dignity of a Druid priest about to perform a mystic rite.

"Can you see plain?" he asked in a whisper. "I'm going to walk to'ard ye. Watch the stem of the rod."

He lowered it to the full length of his arms, stalking slowly, the twig horizontal, right-angled, midway of his thighs. His eyes glittered, upturned to the sky. Suddenly he stopped and Caleb held his breath, gazing intently at the rod.

It seemed to twitch—surely. It vibrated—up and down. Caleb, watching closely, half fearing he might uncover a trick yet wishing to do so if trickery was forward, could detect no flexing of the bony wrists. The fingers were rigid. So tightly did Evans grip the forks that his knuckles showed like ivory knobs against the darker skin.



"Can You See Plain?" He Asked in a Whisper.

Then he gave a sigh and the end of the rod tipped violently downwards. Caleb caught the distinct creak of bending, twisting wood in the silence that followed the sigh. The dowser stood braced, rigid, while the twig, its end a frantic pointer, seemed as suddenly imbued with life as Moses' rod. Motion ceased as he stood within ten feet of Caleb, so close that the latter plainly saw the pulses beating violently in Evans' wrists, the veins prominent as cords. And the stem of the rod pointed steadily downward at an angle of more than 45 degrees from the horizontally held forks.

"Dig there, bore there—forty feet," murmured the dowser, speaking like a medium in trance, "and you'll find water."

He relaxed and the rod fell to the ground. He stooped and picked it up. He rubbed his eyes as one awakening from a spell.

"Them's all fresh rods in the bundle," he said. "I cut 'em the day before yesterday. Look where she forks. We'll try her ag'en. The power's strong. Then you can tackle it."

"Me?" Caleb's surprise was unforced.

"Aye, you might have the power. You're sympathetic, ennyway. Let's walk out a bit farther. Away from the crick. It don't make no difference where. There's a water table under us. This end of the valley ain't so much a sink as a cistern."

Caleb's heart pounded at this confirmation of his belief. He was in a curious state of excitation. But he said nothing. They tried again a quarter of a mile away. The same phenomenon occurred with so much greater emphasis that the forks crossed each other. No juggling with hands apart could have managed this.

"Try it," said Evans, wiping sweat from his forehead. "Twice is enough for me. That last was a twister. Did ye say you had another cigar with ye? I left all mine in the shack. Now then—choose yore twig. We know there's water here. If you've got the power it'll show. Don't be in a hurry. Don't think of nothin'. Make yore mind a blank. Hold it level—fingers up—so!"

He arranged Caleb's hands to his liking with his own bony, clammy fingers and stepped back. Caleb stood alone, fixing his eyes on the glow of the dowser's cigar in a species of hypnosis, waiting, trying to eliminate all thought.

In this he succeeded. Motionless, he waited, gazing at the spark of fire and the dark pillar of the Welshman's body. The spark seemed to grow larger—larger—and then he felt, simultaneously—a distinct tremor run up his forearms, a sinking sensation in the pit of his stomach, a quiver of diaphragmatic ganglia.

The rod twitched. He gripped the forks hard—harder. They began to vibrate. The tremor increased in his wrists. The forks strangely seemed to be a part of him, sensitive, alive. Then there seemed to be a tug at the end of the stem, like the swift strike of a fish at the lure. And the straight stem bent as he might have bent his finger, in a pointer, straight to water.

He had no doubt of it now. The thing had happened to himself. It was marvelous as it was mysterious, this sense of power. And he thrilled to it. It was an indorsement of his title as Water-Bearer, surely an augury of success. It filled him, not with pride, but with reverence for his gift.

"Glory be!" cried the dowser. "You've got it, pardner. You've got the power. By gosh, you'll be takin' my job from me," he added with a short laugh that ended in a cough.

"I'll see that you are no loser by it," said Caleb, smiling back. And he meant the promise. For now he was certain of the fulfillment of his idea, much as yet remained to be proven and accomplished. The hunch was born, for he had in his hand the key that would unlock for him the secret of the Sink. With the power—was it his birthright, a gift from Aquarius, glittering on the hilly horizon?—he could, working at night, cover the whole area of the lower valley and exploit, without boring, the extent of the water table. Under the gravel lay, he was convinced—none the less by the occult manner of its determination—water for the thousands who would make Golden mighty among cities—water for incoming families, for factories, for fields and gardens, for civic use! A mammoth cistern ready to be tapped.

Before he left him, to walk back to the hotel, exultant, Caleb got some worth-while information from Evans. He had the name of the man who owned most—if not all—of the Sink.

The land was valueless for farming. It could be acquired cheaply. That was an important factor. Even at the low price, the big acreage would mean an amount far beyond Caleb's compass. That end of it, with the other big expenses, he must leave to Cox for financing. But the secret was his.

He found a small parcel awaiting him at the hotel that had come by the evening mail. On it was the return address of Golden's best jeweler. He opened it and took from a bed of cotton wool a jade pendant. On it was engraved in intaglio the zodiac sign of Pisces. Two fishes joined by a ribbon. He had ordered it on his return from El Nido after the picnic. He intended it as a belated birthday gift to Betty Clinton.

Well, Caleb has found his water all right. Now what will he do with it?

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Methods of Ancient Builders Stand Test

The builder of six thousand years ago, like the builder of today, had his problems, and his expedients anticipated the methods of modern construction. "Brick for stone and slime for mortar" describes the method of the builders of the tower of Babel. That was the prevailing fashion even earlier.

The excavators at Ur have found a small amount of stonework also, but stone was scarce in that country. It had to be imported and was rarely used in building construction. They have also found columns and arches, inventions that associate themselves with the history of architecture throughout the ages.

The problem of decoration was not solved with materials and methods familiar enough to the building trade today. In that remote era we see the beginnings of a trade that has had six millenniums of development without changing in essentials. The first lessons embodied the principles on which cities and palaces and temples are being built today.

Civilization has since built for itself better habitations and "temples more divinely beautiful," but the later builders were not better builders than their predecessors in that remote antiquity at which the excavators have now arrived.—Kansas City Star.

Patriotic Pride

The term "God's country" is often applied to a nation or country by its sons and daughters. A recently published bulletin on Australia calls attention to the fact that among the white inhabitants poverty is practically unknown, the aged, infirm and children are adequately provided for, the labor situation is satisfactory and the territory itself offers unlimited possibility for development, exploitation and the exercise of man's ingenuity. All these things would make it seem a favored spot.

Burmese Rubies Best

The finest ruby mines are those of Mogok in Upper Burma. It is from these mines that the pigeon-blood rubies come. These are considered very valuable. There are also mines in the neighboring country of Siam. These Siamese rubies are of a brownish red. The Burmese rubies bring from two to ten times as much as the Siamese rubies. The Burma mines are now controlled by the Ruby Mines, Ltd., of London. Among the largest rubies may be mentioned two belonging to the king of Bishenpur, in India, which weighed 50¾ and 17½ carats, respectively. The largest ruby known is one from Tibet, weighing 2,000 carats, but it is not of first quality.

The Whole Family

Curtis W. Hunter, 3241 Central avenue, who recently returned from Florida, says the following story is the best example of a one-family run restaurant that he has ever seen.

"I was driving along one day in Florida," said Mr. Hunter, "when I saw a lunchroom with the following signs on it: 'Mother's Place; Daughter's Pie, and Pop on Ice.'"—Indianapolis News.

Interesting Light on Early American Tribes

Explorers sent out by the Ohio Historical and Archeological society to open the great central mound of the Seip group, near Bainbridge, Ohio, recently, revealed another page in the amazing history of the ancient race which populated the interior of the North American continent.

They discovered that, like the Egyptians, the American mound builders sometimes buried their princely dead in heavy-timbered mausoleums under canopies of exquisitely fashioned cloth, and that when these tombs were built the tribesmen carried earth in baskets and heaped it on the sepulchers until they had reared mounds 30 feet above the level of the surrounding country.

Discoveries made were centered around the disentombing of four skeletons believed to be the remains of members of a royal family. In the sepulcher was found the first bit of cloth ever seen in a North American mound.

The Impasse

Senator James Reed, opposing the World court and League of Nations, said at a Washington reception:

"When we try to investigate the broils and conflicts in the league, its champions assure us that everything will be harmonious next September, and they answer all our questions very frankly."

The senator paused, then he added with a chuckle:

"Yes, they answer all our questions, and we question all their answers."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

LIQUID VENEER

Not Alarmed by Sight of Airplane

In the jungle of southern Annam live the Mois, a primitive tribe, until recently without contact with civilized people, white or yellow. In the forests of the high plateaus they have lived for centuries, exactly as their ancestors, who came from Malaysia in unknown times, must have lived. They have no writing and hence no history; no religion but fear; not a glimmer of knowledge. Such are the primitive folk suddenly assaulted by the Twentieth century, in one breath presented with electricity, the telegraph, motor cars, airplanes, motion pictures.

The territory is being exploited by France, with the result that these primitive natives are receiving suddenly the inventions of centuries. When the first airplane flight was made, the natives were warned, so they would not be panic-stricken, but the flight caused only a little flurry. The other inventions they are accepting with the same calm. They exhibit surprise at first, but when the novelty wears off, they cease to wonder.—Asia Magazine.

Fighting Tree Pests

There is an easy way to get rid of curculios, which are the pests that spoil plums on the trees. These pests are almost dormant early in the morning, and if the trees are jarred sharply most of them will come tumbling to the ground. The jarring is done readily enough without damage to the trees by using a stout pole, one end of which is wrapped with burlap or old blankets.

A mighty power plant

IN ORDER to haul one-tenth of the rail-borne commerce of the country—and perform this great task with dependable efficiency—the New York Central Lines make use of 6300 locomotives.

This mighty power plant on wheels has a horse-power capacity equal to that of the steam engines used in all the manufacturing plants of the twelve states traversed by the New York Central Lines.

And more than a fourth of the cost of operating this railroad system is devoted to maintaining and operating these locomotives.

New York Central always has a power reserve to meet the peak demands of traffic, both in freight and passenger service.

DETROIT'S GROWTH MAKES MONEY!

Growth in population backed by basic industries is what sends real estate values upward. bringing profits to owners. Let this faster growth bring faster profits to you.

Reputable Detroit real estate can be bought on installment—indeed this is the customary way. You are thus able to purchase real estate out of income rather than capital.

Installments are usually one per cent of the value of the lot per month.

The initial down payment is 15 per cent.
Thus:
A $1500 lot will cost you $15 per month and $225 as a down payment.

Death of Mrs. Eugene Gamble

Mrs. Eugene Gamble a resident of Wheatland since 1876, passed away at her home Thursday evening August 12th, dying quite suddenly. She was a highly respected lady and will be much missed in the community.

Ellen Isabelle, youngest of 12 children of James and Esther Gregg was born September 26, 1858 in Groveland, New York and passed away at her home in Wheatland August 12, 1926.

In her early childhood she moved to Elmwood Illinois where she resided until her marriage to Eugene Gamble, of Wheatland, December 27, 1876. Had she been with us until December, we could have celebrated with them their golden anniversary in the same township where they made their first home.

To this union were born four children, Nina D. who passed away at ithe age of 7, Loretta Naomi who passed away in 1916, Zaida Merle and Marien E.

She will be greatly missed in her home as she was always so thoughtful and helpful to her family and friends.

She was a member of the Baptist Church of Wheatland, a Modern Maccabee and a member of the Eastern Star at North Adams.

There are left to mourn the loss, a husband, two daughters and six grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon August 15th at 2:00 o'clock at the home of the daughter Mrs. Glenn Baker. Rev. McLouth of Addison officiating, and burial was in the North Adams cemetery.

Eighty-three were present at the meeting after which a recess was called at six o'clock for supper which was served by Crystal Rebekah Lodge No. 9.

A short business meeting was called by the county officers at 7:30 p. m. and the following elected for the ensuing year: President Nellie Pavey, Hillsdale; vice pres. Luella Helmick, North Adams; sec., Mrs. Easterday, Cambria; treas., Mrs. Klingensmith, Pittsford.

Mrs. Laura Gillett, president of the Rebekah Assembly. Brother Fred Rogers, Grand Secretary of the I. O. O. F. and Mrs. Blakesly, of Indianapolis, Indiana, were visitors. This being the regular meeting of Crystal Rebekah lodge the work was done by the degree staff in a very lovely manner, and this is just one more of those good times long to be remembered with pleasant thoughts and profit to all. Next county meeting will be held at Litchfield in 1927, date to be determined later.

Knowles School Reunion

One of the most successful reunions of schools in this vicinity was held at the Knowles school in Moscow township when about one hundred past and present pupils, teachers and patrons gathered to talk over old times and recall the days "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." At noon a pot-luck dinner was spread and it was both bounteous and appetizing. After dinner musical selections were rendered and talks were given by Judge Walter North and Rev. Art Mumford of Lansing. Judge North spoke on "Good Citizenship and the Michigan Courts" and his experience on the bench enabled him to give a splendid and interesting address Others from away were Mrs. Lord (nee Joy Knapp) and family of Sloan, Iowa, and Mrs. Forrest Lewis of Hillsdale. The entire family of children of Mr. and Mrs. Parker B. Shepard, Sr., were present with families which recalls the days of 40 years ago when the school was taught by Mr. Buttelman, a theologue from Hillsdale College.

At the business meeting the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Susie Nutten Haight; sec., Carrie Carter Crapser; treas., Lewis Hersh. Next meeting will be the third Wednesday in August 1927.

Old Fences Made New At Slight Expense

IT DOESN'T take much time nowadays to keep fence lines stock-tight and in good repair. Not if you use these quick driven Red Top Steel Posts.

You can drive 20 or 30 Red Tops in an hour. And the fencing is attached in a jiffy so that it will never pull away. This means that you can get a lot of fence repaired even in odd moments.

It's pretty risky business letting fence lines go hang while waiting for a time when work is slack to put them in shape. The damage to stock or crops that can come from just one weak spot may be larger than the entire expense of keeping the fences in good shape. An ounce of prevention is certainly worth while here.

Keep a small stock of Red Tops on hand and get one of these One-Man Drivers. Then when you see a wood post going bad simply drive a Red Top alongside, take out the wood post and fasten the fencing to the steel post. These Red Tops will stop any farm critter you've got on your place.

We personally guarantee Red Tops and we are authorized to make adjustments promptly. Red Tops are not an experiment. They are a proved success and have been giving a good account of themselves in thousands of farm fence lines.

We picked the Red Top line because we believe it is the best value. That's the way we try to buy all lines of goods. We expect our business to grow on the basis of giving you a full dollar's worth for every dollar you spend. Come in and see us when you're in town. Get our prices on posts and the other materials you're needing. Prices are mighty reasonable now on posts and other special items.

FREAKISH DEATH WAVE EXPLAINED

In an article by George B. Catlin, historian of The Detroit News, Mr. Catlin explains the freak wave in Lake Erie which swept to their death eleven bathers near Buffalo.

"The waters of the lake rose suddenly a height of several feet and rushed shoreward like a tidal wave, says Mr. Catlin. Strong swimmers were dashed about helplessly and those who could not swim were swept away into deep water and drowned when the wave receded with a powerful undertow.

"This phenomenon was what is termed by scientists as a seiche and it is of occasional occurance on many of the great lakes of the world. Lakes Geneva, Constance and Lucerne, in Switzerland, frequently are disturbed by them and the records run back for three centuries. Usually they occur on a calm day. Somewhere out in the lake a solid wall of water rises from one to seven feet above the mean level and rushes shoreward with the speed of a railway train. Then it recedes and is repeated usually three or four times in lessening volume and force until the water is still again. They resemble a pendulum movement. In the summer of 1881 a notable seiche occurred on the beach of Cleveland, resulting in one drowning.

"Several times this summer there have been reports of a sudden and unaccountable rise of the water of the upper lakes at certain localities but nobody happened to be caught in them. They occur in practically all large bodies of fresh water and their movement sometimes is longitudinal, sometimes transverse, the former being much higher than the latter, but the oscillatory movements always are fo the same character and they have no correspondence to the rise and fall of the tides in the ocean, which are attributed to the attraction of the moon and the sun on the surface of the earth.

"A large majority of seiches are only an inch or two in height and so commonly escape observation, but Forel, a scientist of Geneva, has made a long study of them with scientific apparatus that will record seiches of a fraction of an inch. The longitudinal seiches, those moving from end to end of a lake, are more severe than those which move from side to side.

"Seiches on the Great Lakes have been studied by Napier Denison, of Toronto; Bell Dawson, chief of the Canadian Tidal Survey, and Mr. Stupart, director of the meteorological department. The common theory is that seiches are due to sudden changes in barometric pressure in the atmosphere and that the rise in the water level is accompanied by a corresponding oscillation in the pressure of the atmosphere. They are dangerous and treacherous, because they move so swiftly and silently that they commonly escape observation until near shore. They move like a flood such as is produced by the breaking of a dam and not like an ordinary wave which moves along with a well difined crest and a perceptible hollow before and behind it."

Michigan Potatoes On Market Hit by Old Crop

Arrival of the first Michigan potatoes on the market has sent prices crashing and completely annihilated the demand for the old crop, all within the last few days. Michigan is still getting many potatoes from Virginia, but the local crop will be coming fast in another week, and already Indiana and southern Ohio are finding a market here.

The tomato situation this year is unusual in that the hothouse product is finding a readier market than the field-grown variety. The fact is due to a strange disease which causes green spots to appear on the ripe fruit. Though the quality of the tomato is not affected by the color, the appearance is such as to make the hot house product, which is seemingly immune, referable to the buyer.

To clean black satin boil three pounds of potatoes in one quart of water to a pulp, strain through a sieve and brush the satin with it on board or table. Don't wring out. Fold and lay in cloth for three hours and iron on wrong side.

'CHECK' CASHIER'S CAREER ROMANTIC

A weight has been lifted off the shoulders of the nation's bankers by the reported capture in Norfolk, Va., of John B. Sawey, debounaire globe trotter and casher of "rubber" checks. He is wanted in Detroit on a $400 check charge.

Known from coast to coast as the most genial and generous of hosts—with other people's money—Sawey is the possessor of a dozen aliases.

The capture of Sawey, whose famous aliases include Buck Hamer of the Texas Rangers," the name of a philanthrophist, a famous dentist, a moving picture director and a man high in the councils of the "Big Four" brotherhoods, ends months of search by defectives employed by the American Bankers' Association.

On May 12, Sawey met N. C. Oviatt, of Detroit, on a Pullman car, returning from New York City. Sawey wore the same lodge emblem as did Oviatt. They breakfasted together and by the time they reached Detroit, were quite friendly.

Oviatt, impressed by the brilliance and charm of Sawey, who was using the name of "Capt. Buck Hamer," entertained the "Captain" at his home. Later the "Captain" presented Oviatt with a bill fold on which was engraved the emblem of "their" lodge; Mrs. Oviatt was given a box of candy and their small son was the recipient of a thrilling book of Wild West tales. The generous "Captain" even went so far as to take Oviatt's son down to a local bank and open a $50 account for him.

The next day he called on Oviatt and said he had received word that made it necessary for him to leave immediately, "and would Mr. Oviatt be so kind as to endorse a $400 check on a Georgia bank," inasmuch as the "Captain" was not known in Detroit. Surely, Mr. Oviatt would endorse the check for such a charming gentleman. He did.

Pals in Civil War Parted Since 1864 Meet Aboard Train

Comrades again after a separation of 61 years, James McGinnis and Jesse Thompson are swapping yarns in Grand Rapids about the stirring days when they served under the Union flag as campmates of the Thirteenth Indiana Infantry.

Mr. McGinnis fell in the battle at Fort Pierce, Fla., on Christmas day, 1864, when a landing force of Union troops was repulsed by the Confederates.

Wounded, Mr. McGinnis was taken to Hampton hospital, and as he never again heard of Thompson, he surmised his pal had been killed.

A few days ago, Mr. McGinnis, now 83, boarded a Pennsylvania train at Grand Rapids, to visit friends in Indianapolis. He has been living at the home of a daughter, Mrs. M. C. Schoenlein.

By coincidenc,e Mr. Thompson, a resident at the Michigan Soldiers' Home, boarded the same train, en route to visit his boyhood home in Indiana.

River Frontage Sold For $300,000 to St. Clair Man

The last large tract of undeveloped river frontage between Port Huron and Detroit was sold by George B. Smith, owner, to E. W. Leitch, of St. Clair, formerly connected with a Detroit investment house, for $300,000.

The land lies directly south of the C. H. Wills' home in Marysville, at the south limits of the City of Marysville and extends 3,500 feet south along the river bank.

Babe Ruth Pays $50 As Fine For Illegal Fishing

Babe Ruth paid $50 in fines because he and Paddy Sexton, Detroit real estate dealer, broke the Michigan game and fish laws last June, and because it was all his fault, and it was all Paddy's fault, and it was only a sporting proposition, and because Babe didn't catch any fish.

In outline, that is the story of what happened at Brighton before Caleb K. Collett, justice of the peace, when the Yankee home run manufacturer and Mr. Sexton appeared to answer charges of fishing without a license and fishing out of season.

$1,000 An Acre Cleared By Strawberry Grower

Strawberries were a valuable crop in western Michigan this season. Louis W. Perrin of Cooperville, realized $1,000 from one acre of berries. He sold them on the market throughout the season. From a patch of 12 acres the Roach Canning Co. harvested 3,026 crates.

MOTORS ISTITUTE PLANNED AT FLINT

Establishment at Flint of the General Motors Institute of Technology involving an investment of approximately $500,000 which will include a new building to accommodate 2,000 students, is scheduled for completion early in 1927. The plans mark the corporation's first venture in the scientific education field and the practical endowment of what will be an automotive university in which young men will be given the opportunity to train for high executive positions in the world's greatest industry. As chief sponsor for the project acting for General Motors, H. H. Bassett, president of the Buick Motor company, outlined the program to be followed.

It provides that the present Flint Institute of Technology building erected and operated for similar purposes by the Industrial Mutual association seven years ago, be replaced by a new three-story edifice with floor space of 65,000 square feet, to be located on a campus of about ten acres.

The campus and building will be available to the community of Flint and the employes of Flint industries to give them the facilities to obtain the technical instruction and training needed for advancement in modern industry, and also to provide trained employes needed by the industries.

Milling and Deep Mine Practices Are Studied

Exhaustive surveys of milling and deep mine practice have been started in the Michigan copper districts by experts of the United States bureau of mines, in co-operation with the mine operators and the Michigan College of Mines, at Houghton.

The survey of deep mining methods will be directed by W. R. Crane, mining engineer, who has devoted much time to that phase of mining. W. H. Coghill, a specialist in concentration, will direct the milling survey.

Old-Time Kiln Brings Memory of Britisher Who Sought Riches

The fleeting glimpse one catches of an old-time kiln built beside the railroad tracks near Bellevue, when traveling through on a Grand Trunk train, carries the mind back nearly a century, to the time when the pioneers of that part of the state burned a great deal of lime in this fashion, a fair state of preservation and show The ruins of the railside kiln are in three large circular openings. This is the famous kiln built by George F. Holden, which became known as the first perpetual lime kiln in Michigan, and to the day is known as the Holden kiln. It is located about two miles west of Bellevue, and it was here that the lime used in the construction of the present capitol building in Lansing was burned.

Holden was an Englishman. Coming to this country he lived for a time in New York state, then came to Michigan, locating in Bellevue. He became interested in the manufacture of lime and built his kiln about seventy years ago, with the idea that he could become wealthy in the business.

In laundering waists with frills the pleats may be kept looking new if basted onto a piece of cheesecloth. This holds the pleats in position. Do not remove the cheesecloth until the frill is thoroughly dry.

Vigilantes Form In Muskegon to War On Chicken Thieves

The vigilantes of fifty years ago, when horse stealing was one of the outsanding crimes of the day, were reorganized as a semi-official branch of the law enforcement machinery in Muskegon county. Modern vigilantes are being organized, but not for the purpose of running down horse thieves. This is a different age. The automobile long ago made the business of horse stealing unprofitable.

The new vigilantes of Muskegon county are to protect the hen roosts.

While the vigilantes of fifty years age rushed forth to pursue the organized bands of horse thieves, the vigilantes of today will specialize on chicken thieves. Organized theives are stealing chickens on a wholesale

The modern vigilantes are being or- scale. ganized by the Muskegon county Farm Bureau under the direction of Carl H. Knopf, county farm agent.

With officers busy on other problems, county law enforcement machinery has been unable to break up the gangs of henroost raiders.

Mr. Knopf estimates from reports he has received that $15,000 worth of chickens were stolen in Muskegon county last year. Entire flocks have been stolen and it is not unusual for a farmer to discover in the morning that from 100 to 500 of his chickens have disappeared during the night.

Potato Bakers to Vie At Greenville Show

A potato baking contest to determine the best varieties of Michigan tubers for baking will be held at Greenville in conjunction with the Western Michigan Potato Show, October 28 to 30. Awards will be made on the basis of baking quantities, uniformity of size and freedom from follow heart and other defects. Each exhibit is to consist of ten potatoes of one variety. The contest is open to all farmers in the Lower Peninsula.

RESTAURANT MEN COMPLAIN OF PIGS

Hotel and restaurant men who once said prohibition sounded their deathknell because of shutting off the sale of liquor, now complain that prohibition also has cut into their sales of food.

So many blind pigs in Detroit have resorted to serving meals and lunches that their competition is crippling the restaurant business, according to complaints made to the police by officials of the Detroit Restaurant Men's Association.

According to the restaurant association officials, who have made a survey of the situation, there are "a large number" of blind pigs serving meals to their patrons. Because of the intense competition among the blind pig operators, many of them are now serving meals at less than cost to increase their loquor patronage.

Although the blind pig operators lose money on the meals, they more than make it up by the increased sale of intoxicants, and this unfair competition has cut deeply into the earnings of the legitimate restaurants, according to the association officials.

Vacancies at Albion In Faculty Are Filled

Five vacancies in the Albion College faculty, made by as many resignations last June, have been filled, according to the announcement of President John L. Seaton.

The positions include director of the conservatory of music, head of the journalism department, instructor in physics, and professors of violin and voice.

Louis Upton Rowland, graduate of Oberlin, is the new conservatory head, succeeding Prof. G. Calvin Ringgenberg. Rowland has been the pupil of Godowsky and other celebrated teachers, professor of piano and organ in Baker University for twelve years, and dean of the conservatory for six years.

Mr. Rhodes Stabley, A. B., Lebanon College, and A. M., Columbia University, has accepted the position in the journalism department left vacant by James V. Clarke. Stabley has been teaching in the University of Minnesota.

Two remaining positions in the conservatory of music have been filled as follows: Professor of violin, Miss Valborg Leland of the Institute of Musical Arts, New York city; professor of voice, Miss Harriet Sperry, Conservatory of Cincinnati, Miss Charlotte Ruegger and Miss Ella Mae Minert formerly held these two posts.

Survey Prelude To Sanitarium at Flint

Several tuberculosis sanitariums in Michigan and Wisconsin will be visited by members of the Genesee County Board of Supervisors in their effort to determine the plan to be followed in construction of a similar institution at Flint.

The trips will be made in time for detailed reports at the October session of the supervisors, at which the project is to come up for final discussion. The plans will probably be ordreed immediately after the October session, instructions to the architects being based on the findings of the visiting committee.

The first trip, cheduled to start Wednesday, includes Lansing, Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Milwaukee, Green Bay, Sheboygan and Powers. The second trip, planned for September, may take the supervisors into Ohio, where there are several important institutions of the sort.

Sportsmen Lacking Wasteful Habits Are Seen In Future

Education work being done by the department of conservation among Michigan's fisherman promises to bring a generation of sportsmen having none of the wasteful habits of present day fishermen, Dan O'Leary, deputy state game warden, believes.

Already, says O'Leary, the fish are beginning to respond to the state's conservation effort. It seems probable, he said, that a few years will see most of the state's streams fully replenished with game varieties.

"Fishermen are being taught by the state to take care of the fish as well as the forests," said O'Leary. "They are learning to take undersized catches off the hook carefully, so as not to injure them permanently. Though each individual act of the sort is insignificant in itself, the aggregate is imposing, and the result is going to be still more imposing."

Watermelon Feast Given Aug. 22 for Every Michigander

Glover Watson of Detroit, for six years one of the leading developers of Dearborn property and for the last five months developer of properties at Ypsilanti, across from the site of Henry Ford's dam and textile mills, will return to Dearborn August 22. And to celebrate his reopening of Dearborn properties will give an old fashioned watermelon feast that day for every resident of Michigan.

Mr. Watson has arranged for the purchase of 1,000 watermelons and the first one will be cut at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. He urges that everyone with families bring their children.

Tuesday night, the Glover Watson Organization set a precedent in Detroit real estate circles by giving a moonlight excursion free of charge on the steamer Tashmoo. This excursion was in lieu of the regular Tuesday night meeting in the auditorium and will be followed by Tuesday night moonlights August 24 and 31.

At the conclusion of ten months in operation as a corporation, the Glover Watson concern issued its financial statement showing a surplus of $473,- porated May 1, 1925, with a capital 993.53. The organization was in[illegible] of $1,000,000 and began business as a corporation October 1, 1925. Of this stock, $903,550 has been issued.

U. S. Port Authorities Curb Speed of Boats

Federal port authorities throughout western Michigan resort towns have been ordered by Carey D. Ferguson to enforce the rule against boat speeds in bors along the coast.

The frequent accidents due to waves kicked up by rushing speed boats was the cause of Grayson's order, he explained. Every year several persons have been drowned when their rowboats or canoes were swamped by speed-boat rollers.

The main thing in trying to do something is to combine plenty of intelligence with the effort.

CHAPTER VIII

—11—

Prospects

Caleb secured an amiable, steady-gaited saddle horse for his trip the next morning.

He carried his creel, an awkward thing to a rider of his lack of experience. In it he packed his lunch and a survey instrument or two with notebook and drawing materials. In his rod case, another cumbersome thing for him to carry, he included besides the joints of his pole a steel rod that he had secured at a blacksmith's in the upper valley, a tempered probe to be used for investigating depths of deposits. He had a geologist's hammer in one pocket, in another pipe and tobacco. His camera was tied to the saddle.

Leisurely he rode down the valley, diverging sometimes and climbing a ridge, probing with his steel rod, taking photographs, making a contour sketch where the camera would not serve his purpose, marking closely the lip of strata, the character of rock formations, the general lie of the country. Finally, close to noon, he rode down a wash, the sides of which were clothed in buckeye and oak, and lunched by the side of Boca creek, where the two sycamores made an archway for its waters.

He took the pendant from its packing and laid it in the palm of his hands. The artificer had done well. The tiny fishes, united by the ribbon, were delicately yet sharply cut.

Two fish united. A symbol of two living things that lived and moved in the same medium—water. Joined by a ribbon. Pisces and Aquarius. A swift suggestion came to him that the symbol might indicate more than he had intended when he ordered the trinket. He flushed a little as he wondered whether the girl might devise some intimate intention in the design. Then he laughed at his own presumption. It was her sign. Its connection with that on his own seal was fanciful, far-fetched.

He put the pendant back, got up, rolled his blanket, saddled and rode out into Caliente Sink, turning south along the creek, on through the canyon to the suspension bridge. There he dismounted and led his horse down the bank to the edge of the creek. He took off his roll and thrust the blanket and raincoat into the hollow of a tree that was masked with ferns, together with his creel and rod case. Unencumbered, he loped on to El Nido.

"This is my party call," he announced to Betty, who came to meet him, after Padilla, with a smile of greeting, had led away his mount for a grain feed and a promised rub-down and Maria had shown him into the patio.

The girl looked grave, seemed quiet, he fancied. But she brightened at the gift and accepted it without reserve.

"Is this really my sign?" she asked. "One would think that I was a twin.

"It was very thoughtful and original of you to choose this. I shall like it best of all my gifts. Something made for me, something that belongs, if we are to credit the astrologers. Do you know, we have an old volume that treats of such nonsense. Father will be pleased, too." Her own pleasure was so open and earnest that Caleb felt his satisfaction growing. He was glad she appreciated his taste.

They discussed the picnic and her friends, in friendly fashion. Thurston had returned to his Fresno vineyards. The Vedders, it seemed, had liked Caleb and wanted to see more of him. Carmen had reiterated her determination to insist upon a new beret from him. "If it was only a souvenir of the occasion," she had said. Betty appeared inclined to tease him a little about the impression he had made on Carmen.

"I am afraid I shall not see much of Miss Wilson," he said. "I expect to be very busy shortly."

She did not inquire specifically what he meant and he did not volunteer it. He did not mean to discuss his discovery with anyone until it was an accomplished fact—unless it became necessary in the order of business. Later he might have to broach the subject to Betty and her father.

At the end of an hour he rose to go and the girl ordered his horse saddled.

She gave him her hand, cool and slim but with the grip that told of efficiency, and he rode off. He left the direct trail to the canyon and mounted to a low rolling ridge that paralleled the stream. His eyes roved the valley, looking again for the beachmarks he had noted on his first visit.

And then he saw from the height what his previous trails had hidden from him—the grove of cedars about a low white railing and, within the fence, some white headstones—the three-generations cemetery of the Clintons.

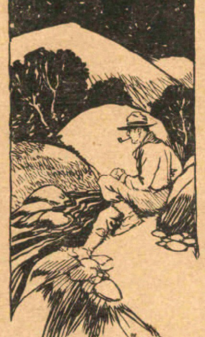
He frowned a little at the sight, remembering the girl's declaration. But he did not forego his present purpose. He was firm in his belief that public service was greater than private sentiment and he hoped that he could overcome the feelings of the father and daughter when the time came. If this obstacle had to be surmounted, it should be. He was strong in his conviction that he would overcome all hindrances to his great project, that already promised too much to be abandoned.

It was nearing twilight when he came to the gorge. He considered it best not to risk a fire. He did not want his operations observed until he had come to a conclusion concerning them. He believed himself outside the bounds of the Clinton property, but he was not certain. If he was trespassing, he felt that Clinton and his daughter, in their present moods of resolution regarding any disposition of Hermanos valley, might resent what he was about, if they guessed its import, as a breach of hospitality.

He felt a little uneasy about his ethics. What he was about was for the public weal; it outweighed private considerations, he told himself, hammering home the argument. Hermanos valley was a private holding, yet, if public necessity demanded it for a dam site, public pressure, leading perhaps to legislative procedure, might insist upon condemnation proceedings.

But, if Clinton did not yield gracefully, the affair would create quite a stir, and Caleb would appear to Betty and her father in the light of a treacherous guest who had taken advantage of their hospitality to spy out the land. They would hold him responsible for ultimate condemnation and the desecration of the little graveyard.

The face of Betty Clinton, hurt, indignant, scornful, rose up before him. Perhaps he might be able to argue them to his standpoint, though he knew that idea was hardly tenable. He wanted her good will. Some instinct, entirely foreign to what he would have described as good Yankee common sense, whispered that his sentiment toward her was deeper-rooted than he imagined. That it might ripen into love. A love that might be reciprocated and that would be well worth while.



"I Am Not in Love With Her," Caleb Said Half Aloud.

"I am not in love with her," Caleb said, half aloud. And, as he said it, he knew that the girl could not be dropped out of his life without leaving a wound that would ache long after it had become a scar. He was in the grip of complex emotions. Brain pointed out the importance of the project, born of his own talents, made possible by his talents. And the sex instinct, the desire of one woman, wrestled with the offspring of his intellect. Brain and heart were at odds.

But two things had come plainly out of the muddle. He wanted to carry out the work. That was a thing that should be done—if he did not someone else would, sooner or later, make the same discovery. And he wanted Betty Clinton. It was not that he merely did not want to lose her respect and friendship—he wanted her. The desire of her continually inhibited concentration on his project.

He woke before dawn, moved his horse to a better patch for browsing, took his probe and geologist's hammer and started to work, resolutely dismissing any aftermath of the night's problem. He had not brought wading boots with him and he took off shoes and socks and puttees, turned up the laced ends of his riding breeches and waded out into the gut where the pent-up waters of Hermanos, when the valley was a lake, had broken through.

The sun was two hours high before he came out of the creek, his pockets filled with rock samples, wet, tired, his purpose accomplished. He had still to refer to certain geological reports, to analyze his samples, but he was sure of the result.

His jaw was set and his face grave from concentration, but it shone with a certain satisfaction.

"That problem is solved," he said aloud as he mounted his horse at last and rode the willing steed down canyon toward the breakfast that both craved. He did not notice the man who came out on the suspension bridge and watched him until the foliage shut him from view.

It was Padilla. The Mexican's face was puzzled, suspicious. He could not understand why el senor should have stayed the night at the head of the canyon. He descended to the creek bed, readily finding evidence of what Caleb had been doing, evidence that a day or so would have erased. He saw where Caleb had gone down into the stream and his quick eyes noted where the rocks had been chipped. A convulsion came over his face with the sudden conviction that the guest had been up to no good.

"The dam' Gringo, Yankee spy!" he muttered. But his thoughts were twisted. He remembered Caleb's gallant action with the bull. He could not justify the two affairs. And he could not comprehend what Caleb had been up to. Unless it was mining. And there was no gold on Gabilan, no silver or cinnabar. Save that, whatever he had done, he had accomplished secretly, deliberately giving out the impression that he had gone down the canyon the night before. He decided to talk the matter over with Maria.

For four days Caleb worked day and night, almost unceasingly. Every night he practiced his qualities as Water Diviner. He cut his own hazel twigs and, as soon as the moon was up, he went out on the desolate surface of the Sink, with results that justified his first impressions. There was water everywhere. It backed up to the southern border and the presence of the water proved that clay lay under it. This he verified by finding clay on the side hills with his boring probe. His cistern had walls as well as bottom, a lining that was impervious. It was a giant clay saucer holding water for the population of a whole city.

At the end of the time he was worn lean and tired in body. Sleep had been snatched in catnaps through the day, before the moon came up and in the early hours of dawn. He returned to the hotel, gave up his horse and slept luxuriously for thirty hours. But, before he went to bed, he dispatched a telegram. It was to his lawyer in the East, to whom he had given certain powers-of-attorney concerning the possible sale of his house. In the message he urged an instant sale, even at some slight sacrifice, and asked for the wired remittance of the price through his Golden bank.

Quick with enthusiasm, he went back to Golden, fully rested, to complete plans for submission to Cox. The latter, he found, was out of town and not expected for two weeks. This suited Caleb, who had much to do. He hired a small office and equipped it with drafting table, desk, a small filing cabinet and two stools.

He had to set his plans on paper, to make drawings, put together rough estimates, and he resolved to make a working model of the whole project. He did not anticipate being able to do more than suggest the magnitude of the affair and its cost. What he mainly hoped for was to prove its practicability, and the model would go far toward that.

Woman Decries Value of Ancient Precept

"Sometimes I think precepts do more harm than good," said the woman, as, with flushed cheeks she threw down a dress she had been working on all day. "For instance, I had it drilled into me in my youth, 'Never put off until tomorrow what you can do today,' and I actually suffer for it.

"Many times it would be much better to put things off until tomorrow, but I feel that old precept driving me. In illustration: it would have been much better if I had put by this dress until tomorrow, for I've worked on it too long already. But no, I kept plugging along, and now I've made a bad blunder on it.

"Again and again I am overtired or overnervous for a certain task, but that old precept keeps dinging in my ears, and I attempt today what would be much better attempted tomorrow. In the case of important decisions, too, I think it is much better generally to sleep on the problem, but somehow I feel as if putting off until tomorrow was a sin and I often decide with hasty judgment.

"I know that lazy people often put off until tomorrow, believing someone will do the task for them, and of course they're very negligent and slack—but sometimes their system is best to follow."—Springfield Union.

Muffling Oars

Oars are muffled by wrapping something around them where they come in contact with the oarlocks. This is to deaden the noise. When Paul Revere started on his famous midnight ride to Lexington a petticoat was used to muffle the oars of the boat in which he crossed the Charles river. It is referred to in the following unique sentence in "The Battle of April 19, 1775," written by Frank Coburn: "Fear that the noise of the oars in the oarlocks might alarm the sentry, Revere dispatched one of his companions for something to muffle them with, who soon returned with a petticoat, yet warm from the body of a fair daughter of liberty."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Point of View of Sexes

Three great women, George Eliot, Emily Browning and George Sand, said the principal genius of woman lies in the depth of her affection. A woman is no more superior to a man than a man is to a woman, says the lecturer, Miss Sime. What is strong in man is weak in woman and vice versa, but in Miss Sime's opinion civilization had and was undergoing three phases. The first, before feminism came in, was the age of chivalry when men treated women as spiritual beings and desired to shield and protect them. The second was an appreciation of woman and her desire for equality. The third would be the chivalry of woman toward man in an attempt to understand his point of view. . . . Perhaps that will have to be the way of it. Man hasn't been able to get hers.—Capper's Weekly.

Secret Service

"What's this?" asked the boss as his stenog laid a box on his desk.

"Why, they're the envelopes you told me to get while I was in the department store," replied his stenog.

"Great Scott!" exclaimed the boss, "I meant for you to get them in the stationery department."

"Oh," giggled the stenog, "I thought your wife had asked you to make a purchase and you were too bashful to go yourself."

DURING the first six months of 1926 one in every four buyers of new automobiles bought a General Motors car. During 1925 the proportion was about one in five. During 1924 it was one in six. This steady addition of new friends for the products of General Motors has a double significance.

1. It is proof that the grouping of strong companies in one big family is economically sound. Large scale operations do make possible important economies; and these economies do benefit the buyer, in greater value. The public has recognized this principle and profited by it.

2. Increased public patronage involves increased obligation. General Motors is directly responsible for the welfare of its 152,000 employees and their families, its 20,000 dealers, and indirectly for the six thousand companies which furnish it with supplies and materials — at least a million men, women and children to whom its public good is a very personal concern.

As the volume of production increases there must be a corresponding increase in the values offered. The new series of cars just presented does embody larger values; it is a direct reflection of the fact that more than 1,075,000 General Motors cars were sold at retail during the year just closed. The added quality has been built in where its presence counts most in comfort and safety and long life.

With great pride we invite you to inspect these new General Motors cars.

Sweden's Trade Grows

The volume of Swedish export trade has steadily increased in the last three years. The value of the 1925 harvest is placed at 1,242,000,000 kroner—a 45,000,000 kroner advance over the harvest of 1924.

Afraid of Old Wine

There are several gallons of wine in the city of Speyer, in the Rhine, so old and rare that nobody wants to run the risk of taking a drink of it. The oldest vintage in the world is on exhibition in the Speyer "wine museum," which contains everything pertaining to the wine industry. The wine is in an old Roman flask, which was dug up recently. It is 1,600 years old.

A spray a day - Keeps skeets away

DON'T let mosquitoes ruin your summer. Keep your bed rooms free from all insects. Spray Flit.

Flit spray clears your home in a few minutes of disease-bearing flies and mosquitoes. It is clean, safe and easy to use.

Kills All Household Insects

Flit spray also destroys bed bugs, roaches and ants. It searches out the cracks and crevices where they hide and breed, and destroys insects and their eggs. Spray Flit on your garments. Flit kills moths and their larvae which eat holes. Extensive tests showed that Flit spray did not stain the most delicate fabrics.

Flit is the result of exhaustive research by expert entomologists and chemists. It is harmless to mankind. Flit has replaced the old methods because it kills all the insects—and does it quickly.

A New Heavy-Duty Power Tube Released

The Demand for Still Greater Loud-Speaker Volume Without Overloaded-Tube Distortion Is Met With a Tube of Ample Electrical Proportions.

New York.—In order to provide still greater power from the storage-battery receiver, yet without the need for alternating-current-supply, there is now introduced the new UX-171 Radiotron. This tube, although no larger than the UX-112 type which has met with such wide favor in storage-battery receivers, is capable of supplying an amazingly large volume of undistorted output to the loud-speaker; and as is the case with other types of power tubes, it is intended for use only in the last stage of an audio-frequency amplifier. The announcement of the new tube was made by Elmer E. Bucher, of the Radio Corporation of America today.

LAST AUDIO STAGE ONLY
RADIOTRON
UX-171

New Heavy-Duty Tube

The new UX-171 tube may be operated from a 6-volt storage battery through a 5 or 6 ohm rheostat or if preferred, it may be operated from a 5-volt source of alternating current supply, according to Mr. Bucher.

The maximum plate potential of this new tube is 180 volts. The negative grid bias or "C" battery should be 40.5 volts for the full 180 volt plate potential, with correspondingly less grid potential for lower plate potentials. The following table gives the recommended values and also shows the approximate DC plate current for each value of plate and grid voltages:

Plate Voltage	Negative Grid Voltage	Approximate Plate Current in Milliamperes
180	40.5	20
157.5	33.0	18
135	27.0	16
90	16.5	10

So powerful is the output from the new UX-171 when operating at its full capacity that it is imperative that a transformer or choke and bypass be placed between the tube and the loud-speaker. Accordingly, it is recommended that the plate current, or output from this power tube, be delivered to an audio-frequency choke of from 10 to 30 henries, shunted across the output, together with a 2 to 6 microfarad bypass condenser in one lead to the loud-speaker and a direct connection for the other lead, an arrangement already in extensive use. Again, if preferred, the output may be delivered to the primary of a 1-1 output transformer the secondary of which is connected with the loud-speaker. In either event, the direct current from the tube will not flow through the loud-speaker. The purpose of the transformer is to insulate the loud-speaker from the high voltage used on the plate of the tube and thus keep the high potential within the cabinet which houses the set. Only the desirable AC component will be passed. This operates the loud-speaker.

The new power tube is provided with the RCA large standard "UX" base which fits all standard Navy bayonet type sockets, as well as the new push type or universal sockets.

ON THE SESQUI LAGOONS

Here are Americans, visitors to the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia which celebrates the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, riding about the lagoons in an Italian craft, a gondola, from which they view the buildings and displays from many lands. In the distance can be seen the mammoth Sesqui Stadium; to the right is the signal tower of the United States Coast Guard building and exhibit, and to the left is one of the Japanese pagodas which dot the exposition grounds. The Grecian pavilion is one of the permanent structures on the site before the city government decided to build the Sesqui at the front door of the great Philadelphia Navy Yard. The Exposition continues until December 1.

The Fine Art Of Christian Citizenship

As voters we should be active and politically informed. We should seek constantly to raise the law enforcement standard in the local, state and national councils of the various political parties, always working and voting for dry candidates who will stand on dry platforms and exalt our dry principles. Nothing will be gained for our cause, or for our characters, if in functioning as we must in the political parties of our choice, we allow our political differences of opinion to becloud our faith in one another. We need calmness of manner coupled with steadiness of purpose. We need self control in action and considerateness for the opinions of others. We need abounding charity in place of microscopic criticism. We need steadier courage and an increase of faith in the motives of comrade members. The close and constant study and practice of this fine art of Christian citizenship is essential to the stability and growth of our local unions and will give us added power for our greater task ahead.

Anna A. Gordon.

Let The Blank Register Your Protest Against The Wet Candidate

Prohibition is in politics "up to the hilt". Its enemies are responsible for this warfare with its encouragement of defiance of law. Liquor folk, sellers and users, are determined to elect eventually a Congress to repeal prohibition legislation. Through the press, imperfect law enforcement, bribery of officials, "straw votes," misstatements concerning causes of crime the referendum, every possible propaganda, efforts are being made to change the dry codes, state and Federal.

Liquor folks, USERS especially say the National Prohibition Act cannot be enforced and is the cause of crime. Organized womanhood and the church say lack of enforcement is caused not by the law, but by the personal example and dereliction of not a few officials of government sworn and paid to enforce it impartially. So-called "first citizens", "social leaders", "the smart set" would soon cease the use of liquor, a pernicious example to youth and profit to bootleggers, if their names, offenses and convictions appeared on court dockets with resulting publicity in the press of the community. It would certainly be "news".

Congress is now dry. But all Congressmen—435, and one-third of the United States Senators are to be elected in November. Legislators in many states are also to be elected this year. Wet candidates are announced. In the state primaries—to date twelve—many wets have been defeated for local, state and Congressional offices, notably a dry, but in a public place once last year disgraced himself and his state by "getting drunk." Much depends upon the state primaries yet to be held—seventeen in August, twelve in September, six with dates not fixed by law. Federal and state legislative candidates, who are personally as well as officially dry, must be nominated, and every effort made for their election in November. Organized womanhood is facing its first serious nation-wide electoral test. Law enforcement is the issue, awaited more or less by the entire world.

As intelligent and stimulating preparation for this test, and as aid to the courts, the women of America's three largest organizations, interested in its homes, its schools and its children, are urged by their officers to visit courts, see and hear court procedure—what is said and done, and why—in a criminal court trial, any kind in any court, municipal, county, state or Federal. Some trials take but a few minutes. Courts in the United States at the present time need the presence of women, who need just as much to know that courts are final in government. In the next three months women, if they do their duty, must pray, Go To Court sacrifice and Vote.

We live under a government by political parties. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, as an organization, is not partisan, but omni-partisan. Its primary object is the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. For this purpose, every member should seek party enrollment in order to vote on primary and election days "Members are free to support any party, but the name of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union should not be used except in the promotion of the principles for which it stands dry planks in party platforms and the nomination and election of dry candidates for public office."

Hog lice, which are generally prevalent wherever hogs are raised cause considerable loss to the swine industry. This loss takes the form of increased quantity of feed consumed per pound of gain, arrested growth of young pigs, and shrinkage in weight of fattening hogs. Only one species of lice commonly affects hogs, and this parasite obtains its food by puncturing the skin of the animal and sucking its blood. The lice can be eradicated by hand applications, spraying, and dipping. Dipping is the best method of applying treatment. Crude petroleum and coal-tar-cresote dips are effective remedies.

Oats are one of the best grains for horses. Compared with corn, oats have more protein and less carbohydrates. They may be fed either whole or ground. For very young animals they should be rolled or ground. In the case of horses that eat too rapidly, it is advisable to place a little chopped clover hay or some whole corn cobs in the feed box with the oats to prevent the danger of choking. Where corn is used instead of oats it is a good plan to provide leguminous hay for the animals, since corn is somewhat low in protein. Alfalfa and corn are receiving much favor when fed together to horses. In the absence of legumes a little linseed meal or other protein concentrate may be included in the ration. Any changes in the horse diet should be made gradually.

Cow Testing Associations Numbers 1 and 2 of Hillsdale County will hold a joint picnic and field day for their members and friends on Wednesday, August 25th. A judging demonstration will be held at the farm of Jim Post, 3 miles north of Osseo, starting at 9:30 a. m. After inspecting Mr. Post's Holstein Herd of cattle the tour will continue to Pullen and Son's peach orchard where Mr. Pullen has invited the Association to hold their Picnic dinner. G. Girrbach, Dairy Extension Specialist from M. S. C., will be present and give a talk along dairy improvement lines. Special stunts are being planned for the day. All members and those interested in cow testing work are invited to this picnic.

Lynn Darling of near Allen was drowned in Duck Lake on Saturday last while out in a boat in a drunken condition, trying to set a fish net. Somehow the boat was upset, throwing the occupants into deep water. Darling could and did swim but failed te reach shore All means of raising the corpse failed and it was not until Monday it was discovered eight feet below the surface tangled in some weeds. One man in the boat swam to shore and ran away, to return later in a dazed condition.

Plan Quality Show for State Fair

A story of quality production and better farming in general will be told by agricultural departments of the Michigan State College in a big educational exhibit at the State Fair next month. The College exhibit will be housed in the new Agricultural Building on the Fair Grounds, and is being built around general theme "quality" in all agricultural practices. The idea that it is not more crops so much as better crops, and more efficient production methods will be brought out.

More than 100 feet of wall space in the Agricultural building will be given over to the College show which will consist of a series of individual display booths so built as to bring out the stories to be told, in a most effective way. Nine different departments of the M. S. C. agricultural division are to have "booths" each making up a separate exhibit, except that all will be tied together by the central theme of quality. Farm crops, soils, horticulture, home economics, dairy, animal husbandry, poultry, marketing and agricultural engineering will be included.

Live chicks from the incubator, will form an active center for the poultry section, while pictures and other features will add interest to the other groups.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

On How to Lose Your Inheritance

"It is so hard for me to get along on what John left me," complained Mrs. Norris to Aunt Emmy. "Junior wants to get a job, but I always wanted him to go to college—"

"Yes, yes, I know," interrupted Aunt Emmy, "but what about this mining stock?"

"I'm coming to that. You see I thought I could invest some of those bonds John left, they yield such a tiny income, in something that would bring real money. I needed more money, so when the telephone rang that day and a man, he had the nicest voice, said he had been referred to me by a friend and wanted to talk over some gilt-edged investments, I told him to come right up.

"His name was Mr. Stanhope. He was so nice. He told me all about the big money people are making in platinum mines. Platinum jewelry is so fashionable now. He said he could let me have some stock in a wonderful mine, and that the company would buy the stock back if I ever wanted my money."

"Have you a statement signed by one of the officers of the mining company to the effect that the company will repurchase your stock?" asked Aunt Emmy.

"Why no—"

"Well, you will have trouble getting your money back. A company cannot be compelled to buy its own stock back."

"Oh, I don't know. Anyhow, I got out my bonds and showed them to him—"

"What, you keep your bonds in the house instead of at the bank!" exclaimed Aunt Emmy.

"Why, yes, but in a box that locks—

$100 on the first payment, if you are sure you can save regularly enough to meet the other payments."

"Why not use the $200 and then begin all over again, Aunty?" queried Hilda.

"Because you ought to have some money on hand. You don't want to wipe out your whole savings, even for the best sort of investment."

"But how can we know what to invest in?" asked Hilda.

"Your bank will help you in that, my dear. Bankers are always glad to advise their customers concerning sound investments."—Anne B. Aymes.

SYRIAN ARCHBISHOP VISITS COUNTRYMEN

DETROIT, MICH.—The only representative of Oriental Catholicism to visit the Eucharistic Congress at the direct request of the Pope, the Right Rev. Elias Schedid, titular Archbishop of Cyrus and vicar of the Maronite Patriarch, visited Detroit recently. The Archbishop inspected St. Maron's Church which was established 10 years ago by Detroit Syrians of the Maronite Rite. The Maronites take their name from the Monks of St. Maron, near Mt. Lebanon, who retained their unity with the Roman pontiffs when other Oriental peoples drifted into schism. Archbishop Schedid will sail soon from New York to Rome before returning to Syria.

NEW BOOK SKYSCRAPER ON HISTORIC GROUND

On the site which for many years was occupied by the residence of the Roman Catholic Bishops of Detroit, the world's largest and tallest skyscraper, the proposed 81-story Book Tower, will shortly arise, according to announcement made recently.

The proposed tower will far outstrip any office building in the world, according to its sponsors, and with the Book Building and the recently completed Book Addition will occupy an entire business block in the heart of the down-town section.

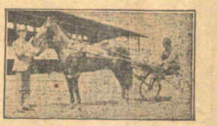
For many years the property adjoining the present Book Building on Washington boulevard was the site of the "Bishop's House" as Detroit Catholics familiarly referred to it This building was vacated by the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D.D., Bishop of Detroit, in the summer of 1925, when the new Chancery Building erected by him across Washington boulevard, was completed

Why I'm going to the Greater MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

By Cousin Joe

"HE HASN'T SEEN NOTHIN' YET!"

The other day a fellow from out west was telling me what a wonderful state he hailed from. "The rabbits are so thick where I live," he says, "that we keep a kettle always boiling in the fireplace. The rabbits running over our roof collide with each other, drop down the chimney onto a knife blade that skins and dresses 'em and we always have rabbit stew ready in the kettle." "Well," I says, "you ain't seen nothin' yet, as Al Jolson puts it. Michigan's such a great state it takes a lot 160 acres big and a whole heap of buildings just to display our prize-winning agricultural products. If you want to see something really worth while—exhibits of mineral resources, game and bird life, live stock, fruit, flowers, crops, poultry, etc., and have the time of your life in the bargain, just be on hand at the Michigan State Fair in September."



PROGRESS OF THE GREATER MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

Here is a "skin you love to touch". This photo was taken on the track at the Fair Grounds. The man at the left is Walter Palmer, Director of Live Stock and Exhibits of the State Fair and the driver is Jeff Cunningham who has a large stable of horses in training at the Fair Grounds. The horse show and races this year will be one of the big attractions of the Fair.

They Built Better Than They Knew

Ninety-four years ago Walker's Tavern was erected in the wilds of Southern Michigan miles from any human habitation, but to-day it stands much the same as then. A visit to this old hostelry reveals many interesting facts concerning early days in Lenawee county. The famous old building stands upon a slight elevation on the north side of the Detroit-Chicago turnpike which was one of the first roads built in the state. Following as it does the trail of centuries used by the Pottawattomie Indians, through the woods the road is very crooked and winding, delving into deep ravines where in the early days giant whitewoods and oaks hid the earth from sunlight and whispered among themselves at every slight breeze or roared to winter's shivering blasts. Rev. Frederick Hewitt who owns the Walker farm of 180 acres is very versatile and loves to give information at his command to the visitors who pass that way by thousands during the summer resort season. He has at considerable expense filled the old Walker Tavern and its twin on the opposite side of the road with priceless curios and much of the interior remains as it was almost a century ago when the Red man roamed the forests and warred on the white man From Somerset in Hillsdale county the turnpike known as M-23 is completely paved to Detroit and to travel on this concrete highway is an inspiration—also a view of the surrounding lands will not soon be forgotten. Among the relics housed in the hotels at Cambridge might be mentioned the identical four poster bed in which James Fenimore Cooper famous American novelist reposed while a guest at the tavern; the room, on the second floor remains much the same as it was at the time, with antique articles of furniture. Further back is the small room where Cooper's Indian guide is said to have lodged On the southeast corner of the building up-stairs is the room where America's greatest orator Daniel Webster, was assigned when touring through Michigan on political quests. The original small window panes are in the windows but of course the view must be vastly different than in the days of 1832.

Here traders and hunters, trappers and courier-de-bois were wont to while away the long winter evenings while gathered around the ancient brick fireplace in the tap-room. On the walls of the entire house can be seen the very rarest of early prints and oil paintings many of them 100 years of age. The old-fashioned idea of painting upon a planed board is here demonstrated with many portraits and landscapes of high art. Some of the landscape work is so dark with age it is hard to come at the real subject. Ancient kitchen utensils such as the candle mould, the sausage grinder, the goose, the candlestick, the iron bake kettle, the long handle frying pan are in evidence, several common spinning wheels and a flax wheel are on exhibition, wooden shovels, crude carpenter tools, a square churn, old tall clocks etc.

In the northwest room up-stairs it is claimed a murder was perpetrated and blood-stains are yet on the floor where a rich cattle buyer was shot by a card opponent in a drunken frenzy. The legend runs that this cattle buyer came through the country on horseback and hitching his mount to a tree back in the woods, came to the tavern and put up for the night. Cards and whiskey were flowing freely and a quarrel was engaged in. After the man was slain it is claimed the participants carried his lifeless body out of the room and disposed of it somewhere—the exact location of which is not known. It was reported the corpse was buried deep in the cellar but search has so far failed to reveal any traces of it. It is far more likely the body was interred in the Indian cemetery not far from this point. At any rate nine bodies were disinterred by the steam shovel while excavating for the new concrete road. These were pronounced by experts to be Pottawatomie Indians possibly buried one hundred years ago. The nine skeletons were carefully re-interred in one grave just west of the old hotel and a stone cairn built over the spot. If the famous old building could talk it might tell interesting tales of pioneer days when William Henry Harrison was nominated for the Presidency and "Old Hickory" Jackson ran the gauntlet of political controversy Just west of the hotel stands the same weather-beaten aged tree where the limbs were trimmed and a flag pole erected from its top to display the flag on gala days of territorial history. The panorama of these ancient days passes in review to one who may be familiar with the history of Michigan Territory. The coming of the first prairie schooners or covered heavy wagons down the rough uneven road, the camp in the dense woods, the fitful firelight, the skulking Indians far outside its glimmer—ready to pounce upon the white man's family, the howling wolves by night and the lonesome call of the hoot owl from some dead tree trunk, all blend into one scene before our eyes. Later we see the arrival of the stage coach with its different characters of the day. The tall "stove pipe" hatted politician and the dainty frocked poked bonnet daughter of the family. The soldier with his shining stripes and high hat. The rough courier-de-bois with their deerskin suits and fur caps. The tap room with its barrel of cider and keg of raw liquor on the bar—all hurry past and we awake to find it is only a dream after all! Yet it must have been like this.

The funeral of Scott VanAllen was held at St. Anthony's Catholic church in Hillsdale on Monday at 8:30 a. m. He was 61 years of age and had lived almost his entire life in Fayette township. He was a member of Adrian Knights of Columbus. It will be remembered Mr. VanAllen was killed by a bolt of lightning while stacking grain.

$250,000 Art Treasures In New Detroit Theatre

The "last word" in wonderful theatres "The Michigan" on Bagley Avenue near Grand Circus Park, opens its doors on August 23—an event which is holding the eyes of the entire musical, theatrical, art and scientific world. The new theatre represents an investment of over $5,000,000, and is an art museum containing over 250 thousand dollars' worth of precious sculpture and paintings, a symphony hall, an art building and a theatre. In addition, it has over thirty new scientific principles contained in its construction, designed for greater convenience, luxury, comfort and enjoyment to the patron. One of these having to do with acoustics, comprises floating girders equipped with radio principle that "grounds" extraneous noises such as coughing and whispering, and intensifies music and speech from the stage. Another idea is the "resonator" equipment which amplifies the music nearly 50 percent, This is the invention of R. D. Gallagher, aged 82, and will be adopted next year by the Detroit Symphony orchestra according to Jerome Remick, one of its backers.

The theatre accommodates five thousand patrons at each performance which lasts two hours; Elevators will carry people to and from the balcony, and seats are large enough for two persons.

The largest and finest unendowed symphony orchestra in the world, conducted by Edourd Werner will play a concert at each performance and two huge stage productions with from ten to fifty artists in each, will provide the stage show. The pipe organ is the first five manual double touch instrument ever made, and a famous soloist will play it. Screen dramas will complete the program.

According to theatre experts "The Michigan" gives to Detroit leadership of the world in the theatrical field, an honor unlikely to be challenged for the next ten years at least, due to the fact that all other large cities are already over-supplied with huge theatres of less importance than "The Michigan."

Marl In Need of Weathering

Marl taken from some Michigan deposits may prove injurious for a short time at least, when applied directly to the soil before seeding o clover or alfalfa, but it is satisfactory after passing through a weathering or curing period of a few months. This fact is indicated by the recent tests which have been conducted at the M. S. C. soils laboratories.

Tests in the laboratories have shown the presence of sulphides which are injurious to plants but are oxodized and destroyed during the weathering process. At the present time. tests are being made to determine the time required for the destruction of such compounds

"In the light of these conditions says the Professor, it is prudent for the farmer either to allow the marl to be exposed to the elements for some time before adding it to the soil or to delay seeding for a season, as is the case where it is applied in the fall for the spring seeding.

Potato Growers To Tour The State

A potato tour for the northern counties of the lower peninsula through the heart of the certified seed district will be conducted August 24 and 25 under the auspices of the Michigan Potato Producers Association, according to H. C. Moore, of the Agricultural College Arrangements are being made for growers from the southern counties to attend the northern tour.

There will also be a potato tour in Oakland Co. August 26 and 27, in which the Ookland County Farm Bureau, Boys' and Girls' Clubs, and Kiwanis Club of Pontiac will participate. A special feature of this tour will be a visit to the Percy King farm where nearly 200 sources of strains of seed potatoes are under observation.

Our citizens are considerably interested in the mammoth Detroit-Chicago yellow buses which pass through North Adams each day both ways. It seems as if the millenium had come in overland travel to-day and the steam railroads must take a back seat. Of course we need and must have the steam railroad but under no circumstances could we do without these motor conveyances, These big yellow cars carrying fully as many passengers as an old-style railroad coach are wonders of mechanical perfection and travel at high speed. We presume that a passenger leaves Detroit in the morning and arrives in Chicago in the afternoon As to whether they pick up passengers on the route at all little towns and villages we have not learned. Fares are approximately the same as on the railroad.

Great Reception Given Governor

Political observers declare that the reception being accorded Governor Groesbeck on his various tours of the state is something never before experienced in the history of the state. "Stumping" campaigns originated in Michigan when Moses Wisner first ran for Governor. He carried his message direct to the people, just as Governor Groesbeck is doing in this campaign.

That the voters appreciate it is evident from the great turnouts the Governor is having. In some of the northern and eastern counties of the state visited by him, local residents say the crowds were the greatest they have ever had at political meetings.

The Governor terms this campaign a battle against politicians who are determined to undermine all the constructive things that have been done in recent years—and the vast crowds attracted to his meetings indicates the keen interest of Michigan taxpayers in his fight to keep politicans from again securing control of public business

First Model Radio Home

Broadcasting Service Made Available to Family, Guest and Cook Without Interfering With Routine of Domestic Life.

ONE by one the many comforts and pleasures of modern civilization have become indispensable features of the present-day home; and so it was to be expected that radio, sooner or later, would become an integral feature of home construction.

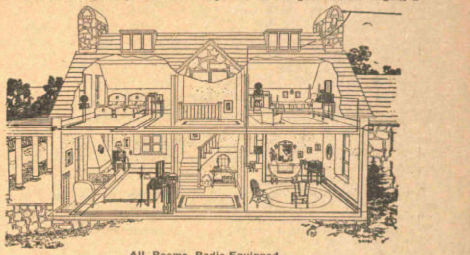
The Model Radio House, sponsored by the Radio Corporation of America and situated at Grymes Hill, Staten Island, overlooking busy New York Harbor, is more than an effort to utilize radio service to the utmost. It marks a new and still brighter day for radio broadcasting, with the home end developed to the same high standards as the studio end. It has long since outgrown the evening entertainment stage, and taken radio service out of the narrow confines of the living room and extended it to all parts of the household, making it available to family and guests alike without interfering with the comfort and routine of home life.

Beginning with the living room we find an eight-tube super-heterodyne receiver in one corner, operating the cabinet-type power speaker diametrically opposite. In the dining room, across the small reception hall, is another power speaker connected with the master receiver in the living room. A complete system of concealed wiring together with convenient switches in each room permits of operating and controlling either loudspeaker at will, as well as supplying alternating current for the operation of all tubes in receiver and power amplifiers alike, thus dispensing with batteries.

In the kitchen, is a full-battery-operating five-tube radio-frequency receiving set at work, with its antenna and ground connections available from neat wall outlets. The set and speaker are mounted in a small wall cabinet. Thus there is provided radio entertainment and practical talks for the housewife independent of the installations in the living room and dining room.

Upstairs a six-tube super-heterodyne, in the master bedroom, operates a power speaker in a similar loudspeaker in the guest room. Again a system of wiring and control switches in each room permits of turning the radio service on and off. To add the final touch, there is a time clock which may be set for a predetermined hour in the morning, so that the cheery voice of the physical training instructor may awake the sleepers and start the day well with setting-up exercises.

The wiring for the radio receivers and radio speakers, as well as for power supply and remote control switches, is of the standard BX or flexible armored cabinet kind. The switches, fittings and face plates are standard. The radio equipment is standard. In brief, the radio wiring was handled by the electrical contractor charged with the usual electric light installation while the radio equipment was installed by radio service men.



All Rooms Radio-Equipped.

A TOUCH OF OLD SPAIN

These entertainers have been brought to the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia where 150 years of American Independence is being celebrated, by the Los Angeles County, California, Chamber of Commerce. The westerners have built a fine old Spanish mission in the Palace of Foreign, Civic, Fashion and Agriculture Display and there show the resources and advantages of their native heath. The musicians and dancers entertain all visitors who enter the patio to rest a bit after "doing the exposition." The Exposition continues until December 1.

BEFORE HER BABY CAME

Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Adkins, Texas.—"Before my baby came I was so weak I had to stay in bed most of the time until I began taking Lydia E. Pinkhams Vegetable Compound. My mother-in-law, who is a midwife, told me it was all foolishness for me to stay in bed. She told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it would help me. She handed me one of your little books and I read it and was interested in it. I went to a drug-store that night and got a bottle of your wonderful medicine. I took it until the baby was born and was able to be up and do my work. Baby is 4½ months old now and weighs 14 pounds. I have plenty of milk for her and she gains steadily. I recommend it. Acres of Wild Geese

The slight protection the laws have given migratory wild geese are not without result. Recently Capper's Weekly told how thousands of these birds on their northward flight had stopped in Oregon's fields of new wheat to browse on them. John Hirus, driving a bus to a town in Manitoba, was forced to stop his car for several minutes a recent morning by a dense flock of wild geese. Several birds struck his windshield. Fifty acres of wheat stubble that he passed was a moving mass of geese which made no effort to get out of the way as people passed among them. As geese are the original honkers, perhaps they should be entitled to the right of way.

Magnetism

Faraday demonstrated in 1845 that all substances, even the gases, are either attracted or repelled by a sufficiently powerful magnetic pole. Practically, however, the metals responsive to magnetism are the three which, with their alloys, comprise the ferromagnetic group. These are iron, nickel and cobalt. Certain other combinations of metals will respond to the magnet. Thus there was discovered in 1902 an alloy—Heusler's alloy—which is comprised of copper, aluminum and manganese, and which is said to be not greatly inferior to iron in its capacity for being magnetized.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Ohio Democrats Name Pomerene, Wet, to Oppose Senator Willis, Dry.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

OHIO'S primaries were the most interesting and important of those held last week, for the state will be one of the chief battlegrounds of the November election, and in the opinion of competent political observers the fate of one of the nominees will have a determining influence on the Democratic presidential nomination in 1928.

Atlee Pomerene, long a leader of Ohio Democrats and a former United States senator, was nominated for the senate, defeating Supreme Court Judge Florence E. Allen by a comfortable majority. Pomerene is listed as a decided wet and opposed the Eighteenth amendment when serving in the upper house. Judge Allen is an ardent dry and was supported by the Anti-Saloon league. On the Republican side is Senator Willis, who easily won a renomination. He is one of the chief supporters of prohibition in the senate and it is assumed the Ohio drys will concentrate on him. But there is a complication in the fact that the Democrats renominated Gov. Vic Donahey for a third term, and as he is a dry, the Democrats believe many drys will be held in line for their entire ticket. Pomerene's admirers, who are many, think that if he can beat Senator Willis he will stand a good chance for the Presidential nomination, and there can be little doubt that he would be formidable as a compromise candidate if there were some such deadlock as in the 1924 convention. Donahey's Republican opponent for the governorship is Myers Y. Cooper, a business man of Cincinnati.

In Nebraska the Republicans renominated Governor McMullen, and Charles W. Bryan received the Democratic nomination without opposition. Incomplete returns from Alabama indicate that Hugo Black won the Democratic nomination for senator, equivalent to election, and that Bibb Graves was named for governor. In Arkansas Gov. Tom J. Terral seems to have been defeated by John Martineau.

Dodging her promise to resign if Dan Moody defeated her in the primary, Gov. Miriam Ferguson of Texas has declared that she will contest with Moody for the nomination in the run-off primary set for August 28, and has raised the anti-Klan banner, so the fight is on again there.

THREE Circuit court judges sitting en banc at Dixon, Ill., held unconstitutional the Illinois primary election laws on the ground that equal representation in county conventions, and consequently in state and judicial conventions, is impossible under the existing laws. The case will go up to the Supreme court in October on appeal, and if the decision is sustained the entire system of making party nominations in Illinois will be wiped out and the old party delegate convention system will automatically return. Senator Deneen and others believe the nominations made last April will be unaffected because the November election will be over before the Supreme court acts on the appeal.

FOR the first time since 1884 the national assembly of France, consisting of the deputies and senators sitting in Versailles, was convoked last week for the purpose of incorporating in the constitution Premier Poincare's plans for saving the republic from financial disaster. By a vote of 671 to 144 the assembly wrote into the constitution a law creating a sinking fund for the redemption of the floating debt which will be autonomous and will be provided from fixed definite sources with a sure income. Such dignity as might be expected of the occasion was destroyed by the 144 recalcitrants, mostly Socialist extremists. They fought the measure in every way, sang the "Carmagnole," shouted and hooted, and one of their number, known as an agent of Moscow, had to be removed from the palace by the guard, which was commanded by General Pelletier, the one-armed war hero.

This action by the assembly completed the victory of the Poincare cabinet and both the assembly and the parliament were adjourned. There was no attempt to obtain ratification of the debt accords with the United States and Great Britain, and the sub-commission of parliament named to study them will do nothing until September. The chairman of one of these commissions says the Mellon-Berenger agreement cannot possibly be ratified in its present form. Ambassador Herrick sailed at once for America for the especial purpose of acquainting President Coolidge and members of the cabinet with the financial situation in France and the attitude of the French government toward the debt. The Paris newspapers think he has come home to support the French aims and viewpoint. It is likely he will urge that American credits be extended to France immediately.

Prospects for acceptance of the Mellon-Berenger accord by the American senate were not enhanced by the action of Georges Clemenceau, the veteran French statesman. From the seclusion of his retirement he wrote to President Coolidge an open letter concerning war debts that was so sarcastic and covertly threatening as to be insulting.

SENATOR BORAH, addressing a gathering in Idaho, predicted that the next fifty years would mark the most severe economic war history had ever recorded and declared that in view of this impending struggle there was no just reason for the United States to give up World war debt collection.

Depicting the generosity of the United States toward foreign governments during the war as having "no parallel," Mr. Borah declared the attitude of debtor nations would cause the senate to reverse its decision and reject the world court if it were voted on today.

SO FAR as the government will admit, the religious struggle in Mexico is only a war of words. But from others come stories that give the contest a more sanguinary aspect. Correspondents of American papers have told of bloody riots and of summary executions, and now Archbishop Ruiz of the state of Michoacan has carried to the archbishopric in Mexico City a report that is the most serious yet heard. He asserts that two priests and between 27 and 37 Catholic citizens were executed after an all-day battle between troops and Catholics in Zahuayo, and estimates that fifty persons were killed in the battle. The prelate also said that at Acambaro, state of Guanajuato, disorders arising from the religious laws controversy led to other executions, and he related further instances of violence in various places.

The government has started its campaign for the nationalization of all churches and church property, and its secret agents are turning up many private chapels that are being used for public worship, contrary to the spirit of the law. Mayor Arturo Saracho of Mexico City, in the first concession of any kind made to Catholics since the religious conflict began, has decreed that the committees placed in charge of Catholic churches in the capital may be composed of five Catholics and five municipally appointed citizens for each church. Hitherto the committeemen have been municipal appointees. Under the new plan the Catholic committeemen are to have charge of the management of each church, but the municipal committees will assume responsibility for the property. It is believed this action of the mayor may somewhat appease the Catholics.

Archbishop Mora y del Rio gave a long interview to the correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, again denying the charges of President Calles against the church but really saying nothing new. The minister of the interior held the primate had thus violated the clause in the constitution prohibiting clergymen from criticizing the laws or government of Mexico, and said the matter had been "cited to the attorney general for investigation." So there is a chance that the venerable primate may be arrested and tried.

A self-constituted "good will mission from the United States," numbering thirty-two Americans, including ten Protestant clergymen from the Middle West, has concluded its inquiry into the Mexican troubles and summarizes its findings in this resolution:

"We believe that a program of education and social reform is necessary for the rehabilitation of Mexico. We believe the Calles administration is engaged in a great program of social reform and that all truly interested in the welfare of Mexico will co-operate in its essential undertakings."

Declaring the Mexican anti-clerical measures were injurious to American persons and property, the Knights of Columbus asked President Coolidge to intervene with force to compel their modification; but the President naturally has declined. Officials of the American Federation of Labor also say that body will take no sides in the controversy. Ambassador Sheffield has started home with a lot to report, but presumably about the alleged violations of treaty rights in the land and oil laws.

GEN. LINCOLN C. ANDREWS, chief of prohibition enforcement, has returned from his trip to Europe and says the agreement he made with the British authorities dooms rum row to extinction. He declines to go into details but says the basis of the plan is exchange of information and evidence and that it will tend to stop illegal shipping operations. Andrews repeated his recent statement to the effect that imported liquor was only 20 per cent of the total sold in the United States, and added: "Every time a story is published that 100 cases of liquor have been smuggled in or have mysteriously disappeared from some warehouse you can bet that these 100 cases will be sold 10,000 times. Every bootlegger in town promises to get his clients some of the good stuff and the result is that a lot of home-made is sold at increased prices."

DIPLOMATIC representatives of Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Greece in Sofia delivered to the Bulgarian government a joint note from their governments asking that Bulgaria suppress the Macedonian revolutionary societies and prevent further violence along the frontiers. The note was firm but couched in friendly phrase, and the Bulgarian foreign minister said it would be answered within a week. So far, Bulgaria has refused to accept responsibility for the comitadjis and their border raids.

GERMANY celebrated the seventh anniversary of the republic with parades that, in Berlin at least, were interrupted by rioting on the part of the communists in which scores of persons were injured. President Coolidge sent a cablegram of congratulation to President von Hindenburg.

The German government is still pressing the allies for reduction of their garrisons in the Rhineland, and it is said the German ambassador to Paris has been conferring with M. Briand and has received the promise of further withdrawals in the near future.

IN A conference with Director of the Budget Lord at White Pine camp, President Coolidge cut the departmental estimates of expenditures for the fiscal year 1928 by about $100,000,000. Mr. Coolidge found that the appropriations requested for 1928 totaled $3,369,000,000, an increase of $154,000,000 over the total voted for. This the President said would not do, and he set to work with General Lord to meet the estimates. When they had finished they had reduced the total to $3,270,000,000.

Government officials saw a possibility of further reduction of taxes in 1928, this depending mainly on the continuation of prosperity and business expansion meantime, and on the extent to which retirement of the public debt decreases the annual interest charge on Liberty bonds.

Congress Session to Be Brief but Busy

Washington.—Although congress has hardly rested from seven months work at the capitol, attention already is being called to the formidable array of legislative problems to be tackled in the brief ninety-day session beginning in December.

Just where time will be found for the work to be done is expected to cause leaders more than a passing worry, as several committees have been given authority to meet early in the fall to draft more bills to be added to the large number now listed.

As usual at short sessions, the senate faces the most acute situation, as this body has yet to dispose of a number of measures already passed by the house and sent there for action.

Of this group, too, the omnibus rivers and harbors bill and the French war debt settlement, promise considerable trouble.

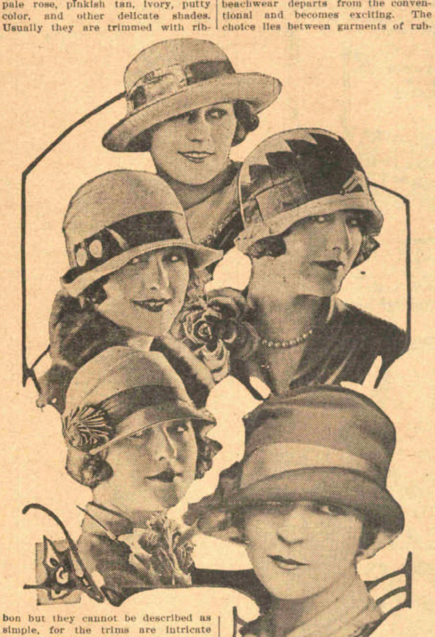
Preceding the convening of the session, the senate will meet on November 10, as a court to hear impeachment charges brought by the house against Federal Judge George W. English of the eastern Illinois district. No time is set for conclusion of the trial which, if extended into the regular session, will add to the congestion.

Both senate and house also will have before them the long standing question of disposing of the government properties at Muscles Shoals, Ala., with little indication that speedy action can be obtained.

DEBONAIR VAGABOND FELTS; BEACH WEAR IS PRACTICAL

THAT something new in millinery, always due to appear for late summer, has arrived this year in force. Shop windows and promenades are full of gay emigrants from Paris—newly arrived and very captivating, light felt hats, to be worn with the airiest day dresses and sports clothes and probably destined to reappear in darker colors, or brighter ones, for fall. These are the "vagabond" hats with which summer is ringing down the curtain on the best performance in millinery for several years. They are only successful in fine qualities and are made with narrow or medium-wide, floppy brims in light tans, gray, pale rose, pinkish tan, ivory, putty color, and other delicate shades. Usually they are trimmed with ribbon but they cannot be described as simple, for the trims are intricate and the ribbon sometimes a bit gorgeous, when gold or silver metallic patterns are used.

The group of late summer hats shown here includes four felts of the vagabond type and one French sailor in straw. Both the smooth, creamy felts and the rougher "scratch" varieties are shown in the new shapes. The group leads off with a narrow-brimmed model that flares upward across the front and left side. The crown is draped with ribbon collar and ornament which is placed at the right side. The French sailor, in natural straw color, has its brim edge bound with narrow gilt braid, and this binding is repeated on the ribbon collar and buckle made of ribbon. A small shape that hints of the vagabond type has a handsome collar about the crown, made of overlapping lengths of velvet ribbon and is finished with a small ornament at the front, but very vagabondish is its neighbor with dented crown, brim widened and turned up at the back. A ribbon collar and a rosette, made with irregular plaits, trim it.

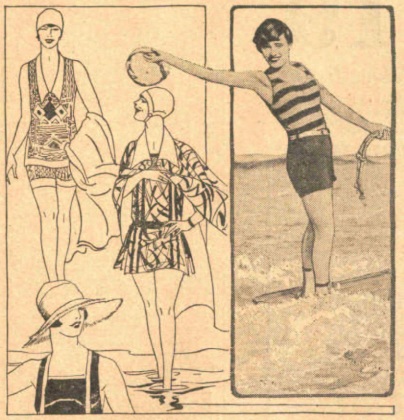


Some Emigrants From Paris.

A similar shape with two ridges in the crown is content with a flat ribbon collar finished with groups of plaits at the side where two small cabochons made of strips of felt are placed.

It does not take long to tell the story of that most essential article of beach wear—the bathing suit. It is brief in every particular. Apparently all the world that goes to the beaches in any sort of bathing suit is bent on swimming in the most practical and unhampered fashion. The demand is for knitted one and two-piece suits; some of them in dark colors and mannish styles and many others in strong shades of red, green, blue and orange. Solid colors predominate but there is some diversity supplied by polka dots and stripes, usually in colors, and a smart, individual touch appears in the monograms worked on diamond-shaped or oblong patches.

Having determined upon a bathing suit, the next thing is the business of choosing a cape or robe to wear over it, and here is where the story of beachwear departs from the conventional and becomes exciting. The choice lies between garments of rubberized silk (including rubberized moire) or those of cretonne or terry cloth. The silks are shown in gay colors or quiet ones, and in many novel, futuristic designs. Gray is the favored solid color but there is far more demand for bright-figured patterns. Whatever the cape or robe may be made of, fashion approves a choice of colors that will harmonize with the bathing suit and show some relation to it. A new idea is a beach blanket of terry cloth that does double duty, serving as a wrap as well as a blanket. Capes are the most popular wraps for beach wear and all of them may be passed up for the "slicker." Even the cap must follow the lead of the suit and wrap in color, if it is to register smartness. There is considerable variety in this water millinery, with the helmet-shaped affair a great favorite. Rubber slippers or satin shoes dispose of the footwear question.



Practical Wear for the Beach.

Boxes that look like undersized hat boxes, with rubberized lining, serve to carry beachward all bathing needs, but amusing bags of rubberized silk that simulate queer dolls and conventional bags of cretonne outnumber them. Very pretty beach pillows are made of colored oilcloth.

Hats of Milan Straw

Each week emphasizes the importance of the large hat of milan straw. It is perhaps most effective in black but dark blue, beige and a shade of burgundy red are unusually attractive.

Sophisticated Touch

Chiffon frocks for evening are given a substantial weight by being quite covered with embroidery in jewels or strass.

Decorative Sleeves

Very wide sleeves of lace or chiffon or very much embroidered or decorated materials are frequently the only attempt at trimming on the new black satin gowns.

Shades of Chintz

A different version of the chintz shade is not plaited but is made of pieces cut to make a perfectly smooth straight shade bound with colored linen tape.

$60,000,000 TO DEVELOP WATER

Michigan electric service companies plan to spend $60,000,000 in 1927 to increase their facilities for distribution to a point where the rapidly expanding industrial areas of the state may be supplied with light and power.

The statement was made by Detroit Edison company, representatives following a survey of projects contemplated or already in course of construction. The Edison company itself will spend $35,000,000 next year for new generating units, transmission lines, substations and distribution systems. Plans call for the installation of two 50,000-kilowatt steam turbines in the Trenton Channel plant, in addition to three more boilers. At the company's Marysville plant a 30,000-kilowatt turbine and three new boilers are being placed. The cost of the new equipment, with necessary buildings, is estimated at $10,000,000.

By Oct. 1 the northern and western portion of the lower peninsula will be joined by a high voltage transmission line between Ludington and Traverse City. This line, said to cost $400,000, is being built by the Michigan United Light & Power company, which recently merged with the Michigan Public Service company, the White River Power company, the Boyne City Electric company, the Boyne City River Power company, the Elk Electric company and the Grayling Electric company.

Five dams for the production of electricity will be constructed in the Pere Marquette River within the next five years, according to plans of the Pere Marquette River company, in addition to the energy made available for the state's industries, a series of artificial lakes totaling thirty-two miles in length will be created by the dams. The first dam is to be built near Scottville and will cost $1,208,000.

Ford Loses Plea To Have Two Roads Merged With D. & I.

Rejection of the proposal of the Detroit & Ironton railroad to acquire control of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad and the Toledo-Detroit roads, all of them owned by Henry Ford, was recommended to the Interstate Commerce Commission by a commission examiner.

Following a refusal of a minority interest in the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad to sell its holdings to Henry Ford, the Detroit & Ironton railroad was organized by the Ford interests.

It was argued that the commission was without authority to permit such a consolidation and that even if the commission had jurisdiction, the applicant had not shown the necessity for the consolidation.

Minority stockholders of the D. T. & I. have contended that the proposed merger was a "tail wagging the dog" proposition, since their line is 460 miles long compared with eleven miles of the Detroit & Ironton.

The Ford interests countered with the assertion the plan was offered in good faith.

Sportsmen Must Co-operate Where State Puts Fish

Hereafter it will be the policy of the fish division of the conservation department to plant fish not only in the streams best suited for the various species, but in territories where sportsmen have shown an interest in this branch of the service and have cooperated with the department. So long as the fish planters play ball with the department's fish culturists, fish will be supplied their favorite waters. If, on the other hand, no great interest in shown to help the cause the plantings will go some other place.

State Grape Crop Equals 1924 With 4,600 Car Loads

The state's grape crop will equal the yield of 1924, when 4,600 cars were shipped from Michigan L. C. Carey, secretary of the Michigan Package Information bureau of Grand Rapids, stated.

The peach crop, according to present indications will be on a par with the crop of 1920, the last heavy yield in Michigan when 2,000 cars were shipped from the state.

Carey has had no information during the last few days on pears and plums, but believes that the crops will be close to average. Prices for early small fruits have been above the average.

Carey stated that the summer apple crop is heavy and the disposal of the crop, consisting largely of Duchess apples, depends to some extent on the crop in Illinois and other middle western states where, it is reported, the yield is large. An outlet, however, may be found in Canada.

Vegetables for canning, such as tomatoes, corn and lima beans, have made rapid gains during the last two weeks, growing conditions having improved greatly in that time, according to W. P. Hartman, of Grand Rapids, secretary of the Michigan Canners' association.

Salt Lake Coach In Deal to Go With Flint

LeRoy Edward Warthman, for four years athletic director and football coach at East High, Salt Lake City, has been offered that position at Flint Central. He may take the place, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Charles "Chuch" Bassett, producer of two state championship teams.

Warhtman was suggested by Fielding H. Yost, of Michigan. The westerner studied at Yost's summer school a year ago, and came back this summer to "sit in" as well as to take up special academic and health subjects. He was a four-letter man at Salt Lake High, starred in athletics, especially football, at Salt Laek University, and took post graduate work at Pennsylvania and Carnegie Tech.

Destroying Vegetable Growth in Lakes Held Detrimental to Spawn

The practice being pursued in a number of lakes in destroying vegetable growth in the water is seriously detrimental to the propagation of practically every member of the pike family.

Members of this fish family require vegetable growth over and around which they deposit their eggs in long strings, measuring from five to seven feet in length. The eggs are embedded in a jelly-like substance. Both the eggs and the jelly-like substance begin, immediately after being deposited, to absorb water, latter unfolding in a long ribbon-like band from two to four inches in width, and at this time will weigh considerable more than the mother fish that deposited the eggs.

The sunfish family, to which the bas sbelong, prepare a nest wherein the eggs are deposited, the parents remaining in the vicinity for a period of guardianship over the eggs and resultant young.

The pike, however, leave the eggs soon as they are deposited and the newly hatched fish of this family are largely at the mercy of the elements; and without any vegetable growth wherein they can conceal themselves they are quickly gobbled up by the voracious members of their own family as well as other carnivorous members of the pisces family.

Indian Chief Puts 'Oldest Town' Brand On Middle Village

Middle Village, near Harbor Springs, is the oldest incorporated community in Michigan, according to Indian Chief Do-Na-Tus. This was brought out when the chief entertained Michigan's probate judges at his home on the old settlement, during their annual convention.

"Middle Village is the oldest town in Michigan," he told the visitors in his address of welcome. "Indian wigwam was here long time before white man ever come. Many, many years ago our forefathers, great Indian chiefs, own all this land and all this water, extending from the rising sun to the setting sun. They hunt in the tall pine forests and fish in the great waters and running streams. Everybody hunt and fish, and have good time all the time. Squaw do all the work."

Indian Superstitions Fail to Halt March Of North Tourists

On the historic grounds bordering the Straits of Mackinaw, superstition reigns supreme among the pioneers, the native blood Indians, and their descendants, the French-Indian people. These people are still caught within the grasp of the spirits of those who were massacred there in the great Pontiac war upon the English garrison in 1763.

With the advent of tourists and resorters, however, a change has taken place. That the tourist is not superstitious is shown by a survey of the use of Michilimackinac State park. The state park daily receives its quota of cars from a nation-wide field, pouring forth into the shelter of nature's resort.

Man 103 Wants to Die Before Next Birthday

"My most fervent wish today, my 103rd birthday, is that I never reach 104," said Jeremiah King, Port Huron patriarch. King has been a resident of Port Huron since 1850, when he came from Canada, a husky young man of 28 years. His mind and body are active and he works at chores around his son's house, despite failing sight.

The only thing that can hold any man back is his own limitations.

MONROE EAGLES BRANDED TRAMPS

Anthony Jeanette, farmer of Monroe township, has given voice to the final indictment of the much press-agented bald eagle. Jeanette declares the bird is not only entirely lacking in the gallant qualities which have long were credited to him, but that he is actually afraid of ghosts.

In addition to superstitution the agriculturalist charges the great American bird with being sloppy, shiftless, insanitary and unable to support his family.

The onslaught is founded on the conduct of a pair of eagles that have made their eerie in a great elm tree on the Jeanette farm for five years. They got on all right for a time, Jeanette says, and he was quite proud of his neighbors, but disillusionment came three years ago.

"They raised two offsprings each of the first two seasons," said Jeanette, "and got away with it fine. I thought they were thrifty and competent then, but I soon discovered their prosperity was due to good luck. There was plenty of rabbits in the surrounding fields, and it was easy to pick up a defenseless living. Most of this soft picking has disappeared, and the eagles are on the way to the poorhouse.

"The rabbits have been dying off, and as a consequence, the eagles, too lazy or too tmid to hunt bolder game, are going supperless to bed. The third year the two young eagles they hatched out starved to death. Last year one met the same fate, and one died this year. The old birds seem to be in want and lack pep and aggressiveness. They pick up dead rats in the fields, and generally are acting like tramps."

Mother Collapses As Alimony Check Stolen

Mrs. William H. Johnson, mother of two small children, who is suing her husband for divorce, collapsed in the corridor of the Port Huron city hall from lack of food. She had come to the county clerk's office to report that her alimony check for $12, which had been mailed to her, had been taken by some person from her mail box. She said she and her two children had but a pint of milk for breakfast. Arrangements were made to improve her living conditions.

220,162 Miles of Paved Roads Now In Monroe County

Monroe county has 220,162 miles of good roads, of which 3,763 are constructed from gravel, 63,156 from concrete, 35,452 concrete base and asphalt top, and 117,791 macadam. There are 14 trunk lines with a mileage of 99,833, of which 60,619 miles are improved with concrete, 27,750 with concrete base and asphalt top and 11,353 with macadam. There are 42 county roads with 120 miles, of which 3-753 are built from gravel, 2.753 from concrete, 7.762 concrete base with asphalt top and 106.438 from macadam. These roads cost approximately $25,000 a mile. Road building was started in 1915.

Eighteen miles of good roads will be completed this year by the county road commission at a cost of about $420,000. Next year the board plans to construct 23 miles, mostly in the townships where there are no good roads.

And President Frank of the U of Wisconsin said something similar during one of his speeches a few months ago. While Prof. Cattell who taught 26 years at Columbia and is also editor of four scientific journals also agrees as follows the average university club in America could more easily dispense with its library than with its bar."

North Adams Orchestra Entertains Shutins

On Sunday August 15th the music class of which Mrs. Eugene Rogers is teacher and the North Adams Orchestra went to Howell with Mrs. Rogers and gave a concert at the Howell State Tuberculosis Sanitarium which was highly appreciated by the inmates. The orchestra consists of Clark Pierce piano; Marion Pierce violin; Fay Stevens saxaphone; Arthur Holcomb cornet and we want to remark here that they are rendering some very meritous musical work wherever they appear. They have been drilled by Mrs. Rogers and certainly are a credit to the musical circles of the village. Following is the program:

DETROIT'S GROWTH MAKES MONEY!

Growth in population backed by basic industries is what sends real estate values upward, bringing profits to owners. Let this faster growth bring faster profits to you.

Reputable Detroit real estate can be bought on installment—indeed this is the customary way. You are thus able to purchase real estate out of income rather than capital.

Installments are usually one per cent of the value of the lot per month.

The initial down payment is 15 per cent.

Thus:

A $1500 lot will cost you $15 per month and $225 as a down payment.

Make use of the customary terms to enrollin the ranks of Detroit's profit makers by investing in property in our Golf and Country Club District.

Sharp & Son are building an extension on the rear of their shop 40 feet in length. This will give them a building 80 feet in length and will considerably augment their capacity for handling cars. The new addition will have a cement floor and be especially equipped for garage and repair work. Bert Trumbull is the head carpenter.

Graves and Ford Lumber Co. finding their storage capacity altogether too small for growing needs are erecting a shed east of the office eighty feet in length adjacent to the siding. Here will be stored considerable new material which the company plan on stocking from time to time to supply the trade. Taken all around we believe that there has never been a better patronage of North Adams yards for lumber and coal than at this time. Coming to North Adams with a large experience in the business Mr. Lester Ford manager, finds here a good field for supplying the building trades. Customers come here from distances away because they are morally certain Graves & Ford can furnish a large assortment of all the best lumber and other necessary material.

Notice

In accordance with work that is being done by temperance organizations in our own and foreign lands at this most critical time in the history of the temperance movement the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of North Adams will conduct an intensive drive for new members during the two weeks beginning September 1. Every adult in the town and vicinity will be called upon by some member of our local Union and asked to contribute $1.00 which will make him or her a member of the Union for one year and entitle the member to our State Temperance paper, "The Michigan Union" published monthly. The men foin as honorary members and all dues from them remain at the disposal of the local Union while ten per cent of the woman's dues goes to the National work, the remainder being used in the state.

Be ready and meet the lady who will call upon you and add your dollar to the cause and your name to the list which will be published at the end of the drive.

Rural Fire Protection Sought Here

Farmers living in the vicinity of North Adams will soon have an opportunity of joining with the village in acquiring a special chemical fire truck. Howard C. Reed of Howell representing the Boyer Fire Apparatus Company, started this week in the canvass of the surrounding territory after receiving a definite proposition from the village council. The plan is to buy an outfit costing $4,400, of which $1,400 is to be paid by the village, and $3,000 by farmers who pay $25.00 each for the membership.

The truck will be equipped with four 35 gallon tanks, each of which is capable of throwing a 70-foot stream of chemical for 15 minutes. Additional chemicals will be carried in order to re fill the tanks, thus enabling the firemen to fight the flames for an indefinite length of time. With hose, ladders and other fire fighting equipment, this outfit could easily speed to the scene of the fire within seven to ten miles of North Adams in a short time and aid materially in saving property. In case the fire had too great a start to extinguish, then other buildings coudd be protected and saved.

Such an equipment has already been installed in a large number of Michigan cities and villages with great success and in many cases have paid for themselves in property saved in a few months.

The truck will be operated and maintained by North Adams and will also be used in the village if needed, when not on country calls. The arrangement would thus give the village additional equipment and at the same time take care of the increasing demand for rural fire protection.

Get the Big Value in the Fence Post Field

STEEL fence posts are no longer all alike. The RED TOP Double Strength Studded Tee has set a new standard. It is a stronger post of longer life, easier and cheaper to set and easier and cheaper to fasten fencing to.

Greater Strength—due to adding more metal in a reinforcing rib (see illustration) and also due to the fact that there isn't a single hole punched in the post either for staples or anchor plate. No rivets required to attach anchor plate. (See illustration.)

Firmer in Ground—the RED TOP Anchor Plate is heavier and stronger than ever.

Longer Service—the new aluminum metallic finish and solid post make it longer lived.

Better looking fences—the aluminum metallic finish gives the post a neat, trim appearance.

Easier, cheaper setting—with the One Man RED TOP Driver one man without a helper can set 200 to 300 posts per day.

More efficient fence fastening—RED TOP Handy Fasteners makes it possible for one man to attach fencing to posts. And fastener holds fencing tighter.

Come in and see this better post. Handle it. Inspect it. See how the new One Man Post Driver works. Don't buy a fence post until you do this.

EDSEL FORD TO BUILD MANSION

Work has begun on the excavation for the magnificent new home of Mr. and Mrs. Edel B. Ford on Gaukler Pointe, just over the Wayne line in Macomb county.

The new home, it is said, will be one of the finest of the magnificent group of homes facing Lake St. Clair and the Detroit river.

The house, which, it is said, will be of stone, will face toward the Flats and will be surrounded by an estate with nearly a mile of lake frontage. With the exception of the recently completed Dodge home in Grosse Pointe the Ford home will probably be the largest and costliest private home in the Detroit region.

Some 12 or more years ago Henry Ford bought 161 acres on Gaukler Pointe, tore down the old Matt Kramer road house which was on the property, and changed the route of the Shore Line cars, building the new road himself. More recently Ford increased his holdings by purchasing the property owned by Mrs. J. M. Brady, the John estate and the J. and T. Hurley parcels.

Part of the Ford property lies in Wayne county, but the major portion of the estate is in Macomb county. The property has a frontage of about 1,000 feet on the Mt. Clemens highway.

Musicin Works Way Through College By Playing Pipe Organ

It's a long trail from fighting Austrians in blizzards in the Alps mountains, chasing Turkish calvary on the sands of Egypt, and playing Italian grand opera in an English symphony orchestra in Venetian hotels, to being graduated from the university conservatory of music at Ann Arbor and going out preparing to teach American youngsters how to play in bands and orchestras—but such is the trail being followed by W. J. Skeat, erstwhile artilleryman, band leader and orchestra director in the British army during the Worl wdar. Skeat, an Englishman by birth, but now a naturalized American citizen and proud of his adopted country is one of the many students just graduated from the university school of music at the conclusion of the summer session. By playing a pipe organ in a theater he has managed to put himself through school.

Superstition Disproved By State's Twin Bull

Michigan did not let the superstitions about twin calves interfere with its purchase of a valuable Holstein in 1919 when state agents attended an auction in Philadelphia in search for a sire to head the Traverse City State hospital farm herd.

The state paid $8,000 for Echo Sylvia King Model, a twin bull of Canadian birth. The bull has proved a good investment as he has more producing and prize winnng daughters in the show rings last year than any other Holstein sire in America.

Some farmers object to the use of twin bulls in the belief that they beget twins. Dairymen, ar a rule, have more calves than they know what to do with.

Echo Sylvia King was consigned to the sale from the farm of A. C. Hardy at Brockville, Ont.

Michigan Man's Famed Horse Goes Into Movies

Jadan, a famous Arabian horse, owned by W. K. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, is being used by Rudolph Valentino in one of his latest pictures. The mount was secured from Kellogg's ranch at Glendora, Calif.

Rudolph has $50,000 insurance on the horse and $750,000 on the picture, making a total of $800,000.

The horse, loaned to Valentino, has a pedigree reachng back more than 300 years. He is of thoroughbred Arabian stock.

Tourists in Record Numbers Crowd Parks of Michigan

Michigan's public owned parks are receiving greater patronage this year than in any previous season, P. J. Hoffmaster, director of state parks for the conservation commission, stated.

Hoffmaster returned recently from a tour of inspection of fifty-three parks and examined sites which may be purchased and added to the public park system.

"We made plans for heavy patronage this summer, but the number of tourists, especially from out of the state, has far exceeded our expectations," Hoffmaster remarked.

"Most of the parks have recorer an attendance twice that of last year and all show an increase of at least fifty per cent."

Man Blind 43 Years Expert Operator Of Phone Exchange

For 43 years Samuel A. Denton, 67 years old, has been blind, but for 22 years he has operated the telephone exchange at Gregory, Mich., and no complaints have been registered about the service he gives.

Tweney-four lines enter the exchange, serving 225 patrons, and Mr. Denton has arranged an ingenious system of bells of different tones which tell him what line is calling. Even this novel method would be doomed to failure, however, were it not for the blind operator's delicate sense of touch and hearing, which enable him to quickly disconnect and connect the various lines.

When a certain bell or combination of bells ring, he knows instantly which line to "plug in" on to receive a message or number, although to the untrained ear there is no difference in the tone of many of the bells.

The exchange must be kept open from 7 a. m. until 8 p. m., but often Mr. Denton is at his post by 4 a. m. Once, he tells, he slept "with one eye open" all night. The reason was that a neighbor expected a visit of the stork and the obliging telephone operator remained awake. The urgent call finally came—at 1 o'clock the next afternoon.

Mother of Eleven Leads Her "Flock" In Interprative Dances

Being the mother of 11 children and at the same time an exceptionally talented interpretive dancer does not prevent Madame Calliope Charissi of Ann Arbor, 41-year-old terpsicshorean artist, from rehearsing daily with her "flock" in a secluded section of the city, and maintaining a beauty and gracefulness of figure seldom seen in a woman of her age.

Mme. Charissi, who lived in Greece for 17 years and until 1924 was a resident of Paris, is the proud mother of the group, 10 of whom came with her to this country a little over two years ago to appear in vaudeville, and who are now preparing to open a school for classic and ballroom dancing.

Passing of Free Tourist Camps In State Forecast

The free tourist camp is passing in Michigan and the pay-as-you-enter camp is replacing it.

That was the summary of a report given by Dr. Louis Webber, secretary of the Fremont chamber of commerce, who wrote to secretaries of various civic organizations in Michigan.

"The replies indicate an overwhelming majority in favor of the pay camp," said Dr. Webber. "I received replies from only three cities favoring a free camp. They came from Battle Creek, Cadillac and Grand Haven.

The questionaire was sent out by Dr. Webber because of some opposition at Fremont to the pay camp. The chamber of commerce after an investigation, decided that while the attendance at the tourist camp had not been as great as last season at this time the pay plan was not at fault, but rather there had been a decrease in the number of tourists.

Last Horse Drawn Fire Equipment Is Scrapped

The last of the old-fashioned steam engines of the Grand Rapids fire department are on their way to the junk pile. After being drawn for many years by horses, the engines were mounted on trucks as the department became motorized, but during recent years efforts of Fire Marshall George T. Boughner to supplant the old equipment with gasoline pumpers have been successful, with the result that the last of the steam engines recently were run out of the engine houses.

Charleston?—Never!

The fair Cristo de Vignes of Vienna will dance practically anything, as long as it is graceful and lovely, but she draws the line, emphatically and definitely, at the Charleston. "Too vulgar," says she. Fraulein Cristo, by the way, is the recent winner of a "perfect back" contest. Hence the pose.

DETROIT PLAYERS TOP IN TRI-COUNTY

Detroit baseball players are cutting a wide swath in the Tri-County League this season. The league is composed of teams from Peck, Richmond, St. Clair, Memphis, Yale and Port Huron.

Almost every club in the league has a number of industrial league players from the auto city on their rosters. In a majority of the cases, it has been these players that have made the teams pennant contenders.

The championship first-half St. Clair team added five Detroit stars to the club and won 10 of 11 games. Englishman, pitcher, won three games and lost one. In the other he played the outfield, batting .354.

Earl Miller, former House of David pitcher, and now with the same team as Englishman, is the league's leading hitter, average .866. Miller's performance is all the more remarkable when the team batting average shows only one club over the .280 mark. The champs are hitting .290. Other St. Clair players from Detroit are Ernie and T. Gignac, and E. Drinkert, catcher.

The Richmond team has added a number of Detroit men for the second half race. Paul Graham, pitcher; Reggie Moore, second baseman; Clinton Rogge, pitcher, and "Hub" Lee, catcher, have been singned. Trost and Taylor are other Detroit men on this team. Graham won his first game, 8 to 0, letting the Port Huron team down with only three bits.

At Memphis, Tony Dugray, pitcher or catcher, is the sole representative from Detroit. Dugray has won one and lost one as a pitcher. He is hitting only .250.

Peck has a number of men from Detroit. Heading the list is Sid Sankovic, baseball and basketball star. Sankovic has played in only two game but is hitting .555. The Springer brothers, Harold and Jimmie, are also there, while former Peck residents now living in Detroit on the Sanilac team are Hatfield, Bartlett, and Eldon Summers, pitcher.

The Port Huron team has no Detroit players. Yale follows the Port Huron example. Two other teams that started in the race but went under financially, Marine City and Capac, had Detroit players. Capac and O'Brien and Ladd, while Marine City used the Pankratz brothers, Tom Hayden, Ketch Ross, Michaelson and several others.

Various safety systems are now installed over more than 7,000 miles of track on 44 of the leading railroads in the United States.

A process has been developed for gassing green-colored oranges and grapefruit, turning them a bright golden yellow in from 48 to 72 hours.

RUINS MARK SITE OF OLD TRADE POST

Thrilling with mythical and historical romance, and so far from the dusty trails of man that it still smacks of pioneer Indian days, the lucky tourists may find the ruins of what is known as "The Old Trading Post." Alone and isolated, four miles from the mouth of the White river, in a veritable bower of beauty, stands what is left of this old landmark, that was the first Indian trading post in northwest Michigan.

Long before the advent of the white man, this was a favorite camping place of the Indians, and when the First French trader came into the country, he selected this spot as the most favorable site for a trading post.

Here the Indians resorted in large numbers to trade pelts for such supplies as they needed, the most necessary of which seems to have been the inevitable "fire water." Just when the log cabin was built is not known, but it was already in a state of bad decay when Charles and Albert Mears, the first permanent white settlers, came in 1837.

Woman, 90, Unable to Attend Family Reunion

The forty-fifth annual reunion of the descendants of Major Edward Crafts will be held the latter part of this month at Edgar's Park hotel, Auburn Corners, O. One of the oldest living members of the family is Mrs. Susan M. Frank, of Charlotte, who will become a nonogenarian November 2. Mrs. Frank, born in 1836, is probably Charlotte's oldest resident.

Mrs. Frank lives alone. She probably will not attend the family reunion in Ohio this year.

Major Crafts distinguished himself in the War of the Revolution, entering the Continental service early in 1775 as a private at the time of the "Lexington alarm." Hhe was in the battle of Bunker Hill as captain of a company in Colonel Woodbridge's regiment and later as captain of a company of artillery in Colonel Richard Gridley's regiment. The return of his company, on file at the state house in Boston, is date-lined "French Lines, October 12, 1777."

PROHIBITORY LIST ISSUED BY STATE

Among the new prohibitory orders issued by the State Conservation Commission are the following:

Adams Lake in Charlevoix County is closed to all fishing for one year. A carload of mature black bass from Lake Huron were planted in these waters recently and it is desired to give the fish a chance to spawn.

All deer hunting has been closed in every county south of the north line of Mason and Arenac Counties, known as Town 20 North.

The limit on all pike taken from the waters of Tittabawasse and Tobacco River in Galdwin and Saginaw County has been reduced to 10 in one day, 10 in possession and 15 inches in length. This order was issued to stop the practice of some fishermen who persisted in selling pike taken from the rivers under the no-limit law.

Emmett County, on petition of the supervisors, has been closed to all deer hunting for a period of five years.

Budd Lake in Clare County and Monro Lake in Cheboygan County have been closed to all fishing for one year on account of the recent plants of mature black bass.

MICHIGAN STATE'S FIELD IMPROVED

Needed improvements to Michigan State's athletic plant, East Lansing, have been made during the summer months, and with the opening of the fall term, the college will boast the best athletic equipment in its history. Three diamonds have been re-surfaced and a turtle back put on each. The bleachers went up in flames this Spring as a celebration of the victory scored by State over the University of Michigan on the diamond. The bleachers seriously obstructed the field of play and were unsafe.

Hundred-yard straightaways, each with four lanes, have been installed under the two concrete grandstands of the college stadium. Broad jumping, high jumping, and pole vaulting pits have also been built under one stand.

The cinder tracks have also been built with a view to permitting State's two star sprinters to get short workouts on cinders during the winter in preparation for the Illinois Relays, late in February.

Grand Rapids Woman, 97, Is in Excellent Health

Although 97 years old, Mrs. Mary Smith, one of the oldest residents of Grand Rapids, is suffering from no infirmity except deafness and never has been seriously ill except from injury.

Born in Dimchurch, Eng., July 2, 1829, and the wife of a London policeman, she came to America after her husband's death and has resided in Bellaire, Alden and Grand Rapids with a daughter, Mrs. E. H. Dorsey, for many years.

When 94 years old she was assaulted by a thug and suffered injuries which might well have been fatal to a younger woman. She had been left home for a few moments when the man, in a drunken rampage, entered the residence here, shook and bruised her and threatened to kill her. She was ill for several weeks and the attending physician had given up hope for her recovery when, one morning, upon making his usual call, he found her sitting up.

Coon Season Closed In State Until Oct. 25

The open season for the hunting of raccoon has been changed beginning this year from October 1 to October 25, for the reason that this is the only upland game that can be hunted in the state before October 25. The change opens the season at the same time as pheasant, grouse, robbit and woodduck hunting becomes legal. The order will keep guns out of the woods until the opening day of the general hunting season.

Four Noted Theologians Go On Ann Arbor Staff

Four prominent theologians will come to the University of Michigan from other schools, as members of the university school of religion teaching staff, starting their work ths fall. Two other members of the regular staff have been added to the department of religion, Professor Jesse S. Reeves, of the political science department; and Professor Preston Slosson, of the history department.

Edgar J. Goodspeed, of the University of Chicago and Professor William C. Morro, from the College of Missions of Indianapolis, Ind., are two of those experts who will be brought from outside fields to the university.

Professor A. F. Koodburne, a regular member of the staff of Madras college, India, will give courses in Indian religion, and Professor C. H. Moehlman, of the Theological seminary, Rochester, N. Y., will teach a history of Christianity.

New Field Opened to Michigan Spuds By Potato Worm

The tuber worm, a new pest in the fields of eastern Virginia, promises to open up a new an important outlet for Michigan seed and table potatoes, according to B. O. Hagerman, agricultural agent of the Pennsylvania railroad, who has returned from a tour of the Atlantic Coast potato producing states.

The Virginia crop pest commission has place restrictions on planting potatoes in that state in an effort to control the pest. Farmers in the infested district are not planting a second crop of potatoes this season. It is from the second crop that they obtain winter potatoes and also their seed for spring planting. The regulations virtually makes these growers dependent on northern states for seed and table potatoes.

The tuber worm attacks both the vines and tubers. The moth lays the eggs on the vines in the growing season and badly infested fields appear as if blight had swept through them. At harvest time the worms migrate from the vines to the newly dug tubers, burrowing great holes in them and ruining the crop. If the potatoes are left exposed in the fields the moths cram their eggs under the potato "eye-lids." These hatch in storage and destroy the potatoes.

Truck crop specialists in Virginia have found that the pest do little or no damage to the first or early crop of potatoes in the south, but they ruin the second crop if seasonal conditions are right.

Saginaw Man, 91, Does His Daily Dozen on Stairway

Benton Hanchett was 91 years old last April, but he still walks up the one flight of stairs to his law office in the Bearinger Block, Saginaw.

"He's spryer than I am," says the 21-year-old boy whose elevator the nonagenarian scorns to use. "Why, he often walks to work in the morning!"

Mr. Hanchett is the oldest member of the Saginaw County bar and, while he retired from active practice some 10 years ago, he still finds something to do every day at his downtown office.

400,000 Hunt Licenses Expected Issued in 1926

The 1926 issue of resident hunting licenses will total 400,000. It is anticipated that the entire number will be disposed of if the proportionate increase of 1924 and 1925 takes place this year. The licenses are now being sent out to County Clerks.

TREES 'SHOCKED' TO FORCE FRUIT

An attempt is being made at the Graham Horticultural Experiment Station near Grand Rapids to "frighten" a 7-year-old block of Northern Spy trees into "premature" production. Ordinary Spy trees bear little fruit until they are 12 to 15 years old.

Pomologists from Michigan State college have left one row of trees untouched. The others have been pruned lightly or moderately.

In one row all main branches in the trees have been tied down to the trunks. The limbs are bowed in the hope they will set fruit spurs and bloom next spring.

In the next row only a few of the largest branches have been tied down in this manner.

In another row bands of wire have been securely drawn around the largest branches, "choking" the tree, in the belief that this may "scare" it into bearing.

Bands of raffia have been tied about the large branches in the next row. These are expected to have the same effect as the wire in the adjoining row.

The branches have been slightly girded in the last row. Bands of bark about one-eighth of an inch in width have been removed from the limbs and the wounds carefully treated and bandaged to prevent infection.

All trees in the block, except the first row, will be snowy white at blossom time next spring, if the experiment is a success.

Half Million Spent in Developing Saginaw Oil

With the oil development in Saginaw valley only about nine months old, it has been estimated by Saginaw oil men that the sum spent so far to finance the production is approximately $500,000. To offset this investment it is estimated that the production now established in the 19 producing wells will bring about $270,000 annually into the treasuries of the various producing companies.

At the present time there are about 25 wells being drilled and plans for additional production are being laid by several companies.

Experts Oppose Dams As Fatal to Truot

The practice of damming some of the trout streams of the north to create small lakes has improved trout fishing, says Herman Lunden of Gaylord. The fish seem to congregate in these made lakes and give the fisherman plenty of sport. On the other hand, state fish experts claim creation of these lakes brings on fungus and gill dseases which eventually kill the fish. This is due to partial stagnation of the water.

HUSBAND DID THE WASHING

His Wife Confined to Her Bed by Ill Health

Because of his wife's frequent ill health, Mr. J. F. Gage was obliged to do the washing and cooking for the family.

One day when Mrs. Gage was confined to her bed, he brought her the newspaper to read. Among the advertisements she noticed a letter from another sick woman telling of the help she had received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I'll try it," she decided.

Her husband brought home a bottle and only a few days after she had begun to take it she felt well enough to be up around the house. Gradually her general health improved until she is now able to do her own work.

In a letter which Mrs. Gage recently wrote, she said, "I have taken twelve bottles and feel like a new woman." She has told many women about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and one of her friends is now taking it. Her address is Mrs. J. F. Gage, Route 5, Brownwood, Texas.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been taken by women for more than half a century with very satisfactory results.

He flung himself into the work with feverish ambition and belief. Baxter he saw little of these days nor did he tell him of his plans or state that he had secured an office. Baxter had told Caleb that he was busy trying to find the right tract of land for his "Little Colony."

"They are inclined to be fussy," he said. "I've got one or two propositions, but I'm afraid they won't exactly suit. And I've got to swing this deal." By which Caleb inferred that he needed money badly for his affair with the stenographer.

"Not going to get married, are you?" inquired Baxter jestingly. "I suppose you were browsing over at El Nido when you acquired that tan. She must be some girl. I told you you'd fall hard. The mater's due at Del Monte tomorrow," he went on. "I thought I'd need her to help me out, but, if I pull off this stock deal, I'll be in clover. Good job I didn't write her. Something usually shows up if you're in luck. If you're not, why, that's all there is to it."

He frowned. Caleb saw him looking at his picture gallery on the bureau:

"How are things going in that direction?" he asked.

"Meaning Mary Morgan? That's her name." Baxter picked up the silver frame. His face was still clouded. "She's getting hard to handle. Still hanging on to her job. Wants me to marry her, but insists upon the child being born, anyway. Says she always wanted one. She's an enigma to me. I think I'll be able to transfer her to a gun-metal setting before long. Here's hoping! Tell me about your doings across the bay, for that's where you were, of course."

But Caleb did not care to discuss Betty, and the telephone broke their chat.

"It's the Morgan girl," said Baxter. "She's getting to be a pest, but she's got to be jollied. Be sorry for me, Caleb."

Caleb cocked his eyebrow. The reference to the stenographer as "the Morgan girl," after all that had happened and still lay between them, struck him as particularly callous. Still, Baxter often spoke with affected bravado. Caleb kept silent.

CHAPTER IX

Progress

The work went swiftly. His preliminary specifications ended and the drawings traced and blue-printed, Caleb started on his model. From the maps of the geodetic survey he pantographed a scale enlargement of the lower end of the Caliente plain and much of the surrounding district, including Gabilan mountain.

Baxter had run down to Del Monte to pay a duty call to his mother. Duty, in Baxter's case, Caleb surmised, as with his affection, was largely a matter of keeping his mother in good humor whereby the financial supplies might be more lavishly and easily forthcoming. Both were too selfish, after years of indulgence and spoiling, to have much genuine love for each other. In one of the gossiping weeklies at the club—not Vedder's Pioneer—Caleb noticed an item that caught his eye with the mention of the Baxter name.

"It is rumored by Dame Gossip," ran the paragraph, "that Ted Baxter, who, by the way, has been hanging up some creditable scores in the golf tournament on the Del Monte links, is not overjoyed at the insinuating chatter that persits in suggesting that he may shortly acquire a stepfather. Gossip has been rife in this direction before, but now intentions seem to be serious. It is hinted that young Baxter may emulate the example of his stepfather-to-be. A double wedding is not entirely out of prospect, according to those who claim to have watched 'Ted' strolling on the fair-greens in the early mornings with a certain demoiselle who has inherited a fortune from interests closely connected with the lumber industry."

Caleb could not guess, and did not care to, the name of the girl referred to. And Caleb whistled under his breath.

"If Mary Morgan sees this item," he told himself, "she is likely to stir up things. I wonder how Ted's stock deal is prospering?"

Baxter had not told him the name of the shares with which he was speculating. But he noticed the girl the next morning as he passed through an outer office to Cox's private room by appointment. She was not in tailored clothes but in a lighter, fuller costume. Her face was startlingly pale save where she rouged her cheeks and reddened her full lips. The dark half-rings beneath her eyes emphasized their glance and, for a moment, Caleb felt it full upon him. He thought that it half besought, half challenged him not to speak of her to Cox. And then the mouth grew sullen and she turned away as Cox's secretary held the door open for Caleb.

"Come to accept the Beaver Lake proposition?" asked Cox, rising to meet him. His brows contracted and his look hardened a trifle when Caleb shook his head.

"I think not. I've come to make a proposition instead."

"Yes?" said Cox shortly, his tone as noncommittal as the tick of a clock, while he shoved the cigar box across his desk.

Caleb put the tips of all ten of his fingers on the shining surface of Cox's desk and leaned forward a little.

"You said that the Crystal Springs company is in the business of buying, conveying and selling water. It is the first consideration that holds my proposition. What will you give me for two million daily gallons of pure water, with constant renewed supply, within a reasonable distance of Golden and capable of development at costs that will leave you ample profit?"

Cox lit his cigar slowly and, under cover of the smoke, closely surveyed Caleb's face.

"Two million gallons daily? You mean what will I give you for your information as to where I can secure this?"

"And my plans for development. Conservation, storage, filtration, collection, piping, pumping?"

"Ah! Pumping? It isn't on this side of the bay, then?"

The question came swiftly, backing a swifter glance.

"You told me yourself that the water development on the peninsula was practically developed to its limit," checked Caleb. "It is across the bay."

"We have many prospects there ourselves. Plans half developed. It is unlikely that you offer me anything new. Have you spoken to Mr. Hinckley about it?"

"Hardly. I wished to talk with you direct. I believe you have not looked into this particular method of exploitation or more than suspected the source of supply."

Cox smiled and pushed aside some papers carelessly.

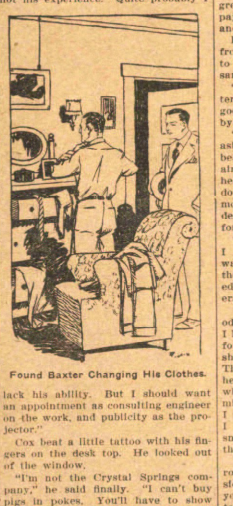
"If that is so," he answered, "I will give you one-half a cent per gallon for your secret."

"Ten thousand dollars? You are not liberal, Mr. Cox. I am not visionary in this matter. I am prepared to show you and your engineers a complete project, without estimating exact costs. But, if my general plans are not approved by Mr. Hinckley and his associates, if my source is not authentic, if it is not sufficient, I do not figure that I have anything to sell. But I want to know where I stand before I submit facts and figures."

For a moment they remained silent, the elder seated, Caleb standing, Cox patently appraising him. The latter spoke first.

"How much do you want?"

"One hundred thousand dollars and recognition of myself as the originator of the plan. I do not expect to in any way displace Mr. Hinckley. I have not his experience. Quite probably I lack his ability. But I should want an appointment as consulting engineer on the work, and publicity as the projector."



Found Baxter Changing His Clothes.

Cox beat a little tattoo with his fingers on the desk top. He looked out of the window.

"I'm not the Crystal Springs company," he said finally. "I can't buy pigs in pokes. You'll have to show me more of your project. If it's all you say I have no doubt we can come to terms."

"I have stated my terms."

"You'll have to take a chance with us, Warner," Cox said with a smile. "We are not exactly highway robbers, we westerners. And we don't mind paying for information. But I can't deal in 'ifs.' Send up your model, bring in your papers tomorrow afternoon. I'll have Hinckley here. We'll talk further. If it promises well I'll get the directors together and you shall present your proposition at the meeting. That agreeable?"

They shook hands on it and Caleb left the office practically content. After dinner at the club, alone, he found a telegram awaiting him in his rooms. It was a notice from the local bank that the deal for his house had been completed and that the purchase price, eight thousand dollars, less certain fees, now lay to his order.

"Which," said Caleb, as he stuffed the message back in its yellow envelope, "rounds out the day very nicely."

Next morning Caleb got up late and leisurely, three hours after his usual time. He ordered breakfast sent up from the dining room and lingered over his bath and shaving before he settled down in the window, grapefruit before him, the daily paper to one side.

From the outer page a face looked at him that seemed familiar, though, for the moment, he could not place it. Even the flaring two-column head did not supply the link immediately.

"ROMANCE IN HIGH LIFE
"Popular Society Widow
"Weds Eastern Man
"and Millionaire."

Then he read the caption under the halftone picture: "Mrs. Ernestine Leroy Baxter, whose quiet wedding is the talk of Nob Hill."

It was the resemblance to Ted that Caleb had noticed. He read the article. The Del Monte correspondent referred to it as a romance. It appeared that the couple had been married quietly at Monterey and had left for a protracted honeymoon in the private car of the bridegroom.

It was not Caleb's affair and he had his own business to attend to. Baxter would show up in his own good time. Caleb finished his breakfast and went down to his office to superintend the packing of the model and its dispatch to Cox. Later he visited his bank. It was noon before he got back to the apartment house.

He found Baxter changing his clothes. His face was pasty, the whites of his eyes congested. To Caleb the signs were plain. Baxter had been making a night of it.

"Seen the paper, I suppose?" Baxter greeted Caleb. "There's the devil to pay all around. The mater's gone and so's my income. Look at that."

He picked up a slip of pink paper from his dressing table and handed it to Caleb. It was a check for one thousand dollars.

"Signed by papa-in-law," said Baxter sarcastically. "A present to a good boy. God bless you—and goodby!

"Do you know what she did?" he asked truculently. "Mortgaged every bean she had to catch this millionaire. Played her last cent on the red heart and won. She had the right to do what she liked with my father's money under the will, but it was understood that she was to look out for me.

"Soon as I got down to Del Monte I saw what her game was. And I wasn't welcome. The bridegroom-on-the-hook looked at me as if he expected to see a little boy in knickerbockers. She's kidded him along properly.

"No use looking at me in that Methodistical way, Caleb. I'm bitter and I have a right to be. She was twenty-four when she married my father and she never intended to be a mother. Thought it 'ud spoil her figure. I've heard her say so. I was only a kid when I overheard that, but it illuminated things a lot. I knew then why I never had a mother like other kids. I was an unfortunate accident. A snake has more affection for its eggs than she ever had for me.

"I tell you, Cal', the way she acted round that old fool would make you sick. With the airs and graces of a young girl. Faugh! She wanted me to go back to Golden. I looked too much like an animated birth certificate to suit her play. No doubt she told him what a wayward youth I was. When I wouldn't stand up to the wedding—we had a sweet row about that and I boiled over a bit—she calmly told me she was broke. Said her trousseau had exhausted her bank account and her capital. Yesterday afternoon this check came to me in a letter from her. I tore the letter up. Hoped I'd settle down to something serious and inclosed a check from her husband. Said she didn't expect to see me for some time. They were going to travel extensively.

Frisco's Unique Colony of Italian Fishermen

On the San Francisco water front today you may find a fascinating bit of the picturesque Old world brought to America and made over into a thriving enterprise by the methods of science.

There, huddled along the Fisherman's wharf, you may see a nest of 40 boats owned by a colony of Italian fishermen. Transplanted bodily—language, customs and boats—from the Mediterranean to the Pacific, these hardy men are reaping a harvest of wealth in shining salmon from the deep sea outside the Golden gate.

In their little boats, says Popular Science Monthly, they have replaced with gas engines the lateen sails used for centuries by their forefathers. In place of oldtime nets and hand lines, they have substituted long, springy trolling rods with which four fishermen now can bring in a larger catch in one day than eight men formerly did in two.

By the use of modern appliances they have changed "fishermen's luck" into scientific skill that seldom fails. And as a result a single boat now averages $100 worth of fish at a trip—sometimes reaching as high as $500.

Chimneys

From the days of the Henrys, strict laws were enforced to prevent ordinary people from attempting to "presume above their class"—by building a chimney! Only in a castle or a manor house was one allowed—and not more than one. Imagine chimneys being built of wood! Yet they were. According to the Liber Albus (White Book) of the city of London, it was found necessary in 1419 to enact "that no chimney be henceforth made, except of stone, tiles or plaster, and not of timber, under pain of being pulled down." Owing to the restrictions on the statute book, it was not till the time of Queen Elizabeth that chimneys had become commonplace.

Accommodating Captain

A good story has been retailed by the passengers of a big ocean liner. It seems that the gigantic boat stopped at a small Southern port on a winter cruise, occasioning the most appalling amount of excitement among the natives. The captain of the little tender which came to take the passengers off almost burst with importance. He brought his boat alongside most pompously, shouting orders in Italian, and doing everything wrong. Three times he tried to make connection with the liner's gangway, and three times failed. The first time the liner's captain smiled; the second time he looked serious, and the third time his face became contorted with fury. "Stand by," he bawled through the megaphone, "and I'll bring my ship alongside."—The New Yorker.

No Chance for Argument

"I lead a dog's life," said a big-town husband, in a tiff with his wife. "Right you are," said she. "You come in the house with muddy feet, get a comfortable place near the fire and wait to be fed."—Capper's Weekly

Use Nature's Law to Save Clover

Develop Strains That Are Immune or Highly Resistant to Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farmers of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee have it in their own power to save the red clover crop from further decline and destruction in these states, says A. J. Pieters, agronomist of the United States Department of Agriculture. All that is necessary is to harness the old law—the survival of the fittest—and develop strains of red clover that are immune or highly resistant to the anthracnose disease.

Acreage Decreased.

The acreage in red clover in these states has not kept pace with the demands for hay and forage during the past 25 years. While there are many causes for clover failure, the one cause generally responsible in this area is anthracnose. On limed and fertile soils anthracnose is almost surely the only cause of failure here.

There is only one remedy, says Doctor Pieters, and that is the use of anthracnose-resistant strains. Experiments by the department, as well as observations of work done by farmers, have shown that it is entirely feasible to develop such strains. However, they must be developed by selection of the resistant plants in fields where the disease is consistently very severe. At present there seems to be only one known resistant strain—the one developed by the Tennessee experiment station several years ago, but not much seed is yet available.

Save Resistant Seed.

There is reason to believe that some clover now growing in this infected area is resistant. It should be located and saved for future seeding. When a field is severly attacked the plants surviving will likely be somewhat resistant. In such cases it may seem that the field is worthless to cut for seed, but it is at just such times that nature has pointed out the resistant plants.

By following this practice year after year until all susceptible plants have been eliminated by the disease and only resistant ones remain, it will be possible to develop strains that are much superior for local needs than any now in existence.

Sulphur-Lime as Summer Fungicide for Peaches

The New Jersey Agricultural experiment station is still recommending dry-mix sulphur-lime as a summer fungicide for peaches for the control of scab and brown rot. Four pounds of high calcium lime should be added to every 50 gallons of 8-4-50 dry-mix used in combination with lead arsenate in order to avoid arsenical injury. Growers making their own dry-mix should use eight pounds of lime with every eight pounds of sulphur when preparing mixtures to be used in combination with lead arsenate. It is also recommended that the amount of lead arsenate be limited to one pound of the powdered form to 50 gallons of spray mixture. Special care should be exercised in measuring or weighing lead arsenate since more than the recommended amount may cause serious injury to twigs and foliage.

We have never had any serious difficulty with dry-mix so far as staining the fruit is concerned, says a writer in the Rural New Yorker. As a matter of fact, the fruit staining caused by dry-mix is much less than that caused by self-boiled lime-sulphur.

Copper Carbonate Found Not a Virulent Poison

An experiment was recently carried on at the South Dakota state agricultural station to obtain direct evidence whether wheat and other grain treated with copper carbonate was poisonous or harmful to animals.

Laying hens were fed exclusively for two weeks on wheat which had previously been treated with copper carbonate, and these fowls were in as good condition throughout the period as similar birds fed exclusively on untreated wheat. The results may be regarded as a bit of direct evidence, indicating that copper carbonate is at least not a viruluent poison.

FARM NOTES

Deep cultivation after the plants have become established injures the roots.

• • •

Dairy cows that have to run to get away from the flies have little time to do justice to the milk pail.

• • •

Sudan grass when sown in the bare yards about the poultry building makes a good summer and fall pasture. Hens must have succulent tender green feed to maintain good health and high egg production.

• • •

Clover hay should be cured in the windrow or cock to save as many of the leaves as possible.

• • •

Success in the dairy business depends upon the cow and the man. If you are sure of yourself, then test the cows.

• • •

The one-crop wheat farm furnishes profitable employment only 60 to 100 days out of the year, or not more than one-third of the time.

• • •

Sheep frequently suffer for want of water. A sheep needs one to six quarts daily, depending on the feed received, the condition of the pasture, and the weather.

• • •

In order to save that hay rope, why not paint it with a mixture of beeswax, black lead and tallow? This will lengthen the life of good rope.

• • •

Screened and shaded stables will keep out the flies. Cow comfort and sanitation will be promoted by taking these precautions.

Helium Solidified

The solidification of helium gas has been one of the ambitions of Prof. Kamerlinch Ommes, who maintains a large laboratory at The Hague. Many unsuccessful attempts were made to convert helium into a solid. Recently Professor Keesom of Leyden university, who was working in Ommes' laboratory, succeeded in such an experiment. By using very strong pumps Keesom subjected the helium to a pressure of 150 atmospheres and a temperature of 4¼ degrees absolute, when the gas solidified.

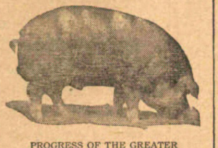
Why I'm going to the Greater
MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

By Cousin Joe

WONDERS RIGHT AT HOME

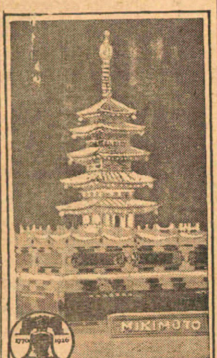
A good many folks never see any wonders except in foreign countries. It's a pretty good plan to know your own home state before starting off on a tour of the world. Sort of acts as a standard of comparison. You remember that story about the chap that travelled far and wide trying to find riches not knowing there was an acre of diamonds in his own back yard. Going to the Fair makes you realize you're a citizen of a great state, with wonderful agricultural, industrial and natural resources. The exhibits sort of picture the whole thing for you. When Abner Cole got back from his trip around the world he brought me a present. "This piece of pottery, Joe," he says, "came from Old King Tut's tomb in Egypt." "Did it," I says, "I happen to know that fancy bowl was made by Clem Riggs, the potter, that used to live in our own town." And I was right about it too, because my wife and I gave it to Abner for a wedding present when he was married twenty-five years ago.



PROGRESS OF THE GREATER MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

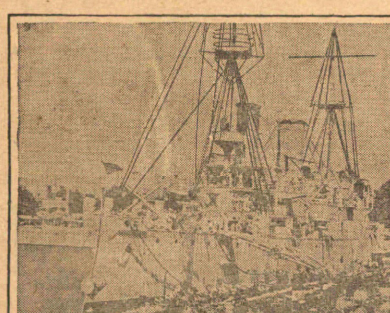
A symbol of prosperity is this grand champion Poland China Boar. All wealth, say economists, is based on the products of the soil. The Fair will show the importance of the farmer to the prosperity of the state. And while teaching this valuable lesson, it will give the throngs who attend a splendid entertainment, including the finest harness events and auto races ever seen here.

Millions in Pearls



This pagoda, a part of the Japanese exhibit at the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia, celebrating the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, is made entirely of pearls and its value exceeds $1,000,000. The exposition continues until December 1.

DEWEY'S "OLYMPIA" AT THE SESQUI



The famous old flag ship is shown at her berth in Philadelphia Navy Yard, the background for the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition which celebrates 150 years of American Independence. Docked just in front of the Olympia is the U. S. S. Constellation, oldest fighting ship in commission. They daily attract thousands of visitors to the Exposition which continues until December 1.

THE STORMING OF THE GATES

This picture is typical of many such scenes enacted daily at the main gates of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia where the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence is being celebrated. The "shot" was made from outside the gates and shows the long sweep of historic Broad street, the main artery of the exposition. To the left can be seen one of the capitols of the Palace of Liberal Arts and Manufactures which covers nearly eight acres of grounds and which houses some of the finest exhibits ever seen. The Exposition will continue until December 1.

Many states also have corrupt Practices Act. New York has a definite issue this year and the State W. C. T. U. women to whose treasurer funds can be sent. Members who are in sympathy with the project to elect a dry independent United States Senator, may, in addition to this giving of money, circulate petitions and help through house-to-house work.

But the individual member everywhere can follow the dictates of his own conscience in voting, and the following suggestions may help:

Study (A) Platforms of parties
(B) Candidates
1 Records of past political activities. 2 Present attitude toward National Prohibition Act and personal observance of it. 3 Campaign speeches
(C) Sample ballots and voting machines

If both major party nominations result in tickets with equally dry and qualified candidates, dry women can be "regular", and vote their tickets straight.

But many white ribboners and not a few drys among the men ask, "How shall we vote?" when confronted with the following situations for the same office:

1. A wet candidate on the chosen party ticket with a dry on the rival party ticket.

2. Both candidates wet and no possible dry independent.

3. Both candidates wet with a dry independent.

For all three dilemmas there is one reply: "Vote dry."

How can this be done?

1. Wet on one, dry on other for same office, learn to "scratch" without mutilating ballot.

2. Wet on both, no possible dry.

Do not vote for either wet, but be sure to vote for every dry candidate on the ticket of the party of your choice. The blank will register your protest against the wet candidate, and will show in his smaller vote in the election returns He will "run behind his ticket" (Party leaders note it.) This protest cannot be made by staying away from the polls. The dry candidates must have votes to be counted in the precinct on election night, tabulated in the final count and compared as a total with the smaller total of the wet.

Women generally and many good men do not know how closely election returns are studied by politicians, good and bad, and by all officials, because Election Returns are the Public Sentiment that controls most legislators, executives and judges.

3. Wet on both, with dry independent.

Vote for the dry independent. He may be elected in these days of increasing party irregularity, if dry voters learn the procedure in their state for independent voting. Voters—and women especially—are always urged to vote straight, parties will venture to bid for the foreign and wet vote with one or more wet candidates. Party leaders must learn that party success depends upon platforms and "right" candidates. Eyen if the independent dry is not elected, his votes are carefully noted as a protest of dry citizens.

White ribboners have learned to do many difficult and exacting tasks for the sake of their cause; and if sacrifice of time, money and strength for the election of dry legislators at the polls in November is required, the sacrifice—whatever it is—will be made. Dry women will learn how, and vote dry.

M. S. C. Studies Use Of Electricity On Farms

"What part can electricity play on the farm and in the farm home?" The Agricultural Engineering department at M. S. C. will endeavor to answer this question for Michigan farmers by conducting research and experimental work on a Rural Electrification project on farms where electric power is available.

The study will be made on an eight mile transmission line in the agricultural community between Mason and Dansville on how electricity can be best used on Michigan farms and ways in which farmers are going to be able to get electricity. This community was selected because it is near the college, on good roads, and near a transmission line.

It is planned that the delegations of people that annually visit M. S. C. will be able to visit this project, talk with the farmers who are using electricity and see what they are doing with it.

Booze in Large Quantities

Lenawee county is just now shame-faced at the doings of some of its citizens up at Sand Lake. It is claimed that two weeks ago Sunday evening an awful orgy was pulled off, whereby scores of innocent young fledglings went to the Sunday night dance and mostly all got drunk. Lenawee officers were summoned to the scene and they report things rather high wide and handsome. It seems the Sunday night dancing at Sand Lake has been in progress most of the summer, and couples from all the surrounding country were usually in attendance but upon this particular occasion people were present from as far away as Detroit and Island Lake, bringing their bad habits with them. Lenawee authorities are trying to fix the blame upon these foreign parties for introducing the liquor but some think most of the hooch was strictly a home brand. In fact they claim to know that considerable is being manufactured within a short distance of the resort. At any rate the disgraceful proceedings on that particular Sunday evening were much regretted by some people. The sheriff thought best to send the offenders home with a lecture when as a matter of fact some sort of punishment seemed better. As it is there are a lot of foolish indulgent parents in the vicinity and probably the kids will be told to go out and do the same but be a little more cautious. It is said that young girls not over 16 and 17 years of age got beastly drunk, stripped off most of their clothing and performed disgusting antics for the amusement of their escorts and the whole bunch were too drunk to realize the situation. Immorality was also in evidence and it is up to the church people if there are any down there, to put a stop to Sunday dancing. We do not know of any place in Hillsdale county where this kind of misbehavior has been carried to such excess, although we mistrust many a young couple are not doing what they should. It is simply up to their parents to look into the matter.

Cock Fighting in Michigan Popular

On 4th of July at Washington in Macomb county the state police stopped a real cock fight which was being pulled off by a conglomeration of Macomb sports. A grand total of 42 cocks were confiscated and five ring leaders arrested for the offense. State Police are after this form of amusement and will push proceedings to the limit in every case. These lovers of the dark ages sport will find they are black listed in every part of the country, Not so long ago we received word that at several points in Jackson county these chaps were holding forth in high class style. It is rumored that in the vicinity of Horton and Clarks Lake many of the cocks were kept and meets were pulled off at stated intervals in out-of-the-way places. Sheriff Stoddard holding the reputation of a perfectly good officer, needs to keep well abreast of the times, and no doubt he will. If such bouts are being held anywhere in the county he ought to be informed and attend to them per se.

Weeds are plant food robbers and when allowed to grow they use the plant food which should be stored in the soil in readiness for the wheat and the result is often winter killing and a weakened condition in the spring. Early plowing prevents this growth of weeds and grass and saves the plant food to stimulate the early growth of the wheat.

BISHOP DEDICATES NEW DETROIT PAROCHIAL SCHOOL

DETROIT, Mich.,—The Right Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of Detroit, placed and blessed the cornerstone of the new school of the Parish of the Transfiguration here recently. This is the first permanent building to be erected by the parish which was established one year ago. Later the parish, which is in charge of the Rev. Fr. Simon Kilar, was visited by the Right Rev. Theodore Kubina, D. D., Bishop of Czenstochova, Poland, who is visiting in Detroit on his homeward trip from the Eucharistic Congress in Chicago.

Detroit—The cornerstone for the fourth school building of St. Hedwig's parish in this city was laid recently by the Rt. Rev. Joseph C. Plagens, D. D., auxiliary bishop of Detroit. The new school will cost, it is estimated, $140,000.

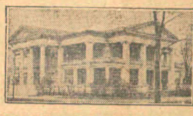
St. Hedwig's has one of the finest parish plants in Detroit, including a church which will accomodate 3,800 persons, three school buildings in addition to the one in construction, a Sister's convent and a rectory. Last season 2,800 children were enrolled in the school.

Why I'm going to the Greater
MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

By Cousin Joe

COMPETING FOR A REAL PRIZE!

Effie Martin and Minnie Kirk 's been running a neck and neck race for young Bill Carter, the catch of Lapeer County. Effie expects to win out on her lemon meringue pies and Minnie's depending on her cocoanut cream cake. Last night they were both at our house together and I says: "Girls, going to the State Fair? I hear you can learn something new down there about baking in September. And young Bill Carter was telling me he's getting mighty tired of lemon pie and cream cake. Seems to me you ought to brush up a bit!" So I made two customers for the Fair right there.



PROGRESS OF THE GREATER MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

This beautiful and stately colonial mansion formerly the Administration Building is now the Women's Building of the greater Michigan State Fair. It has been entirely renovated and is ideal for its purpose with most beautiful grounds surrounding it.

An Ideal Vacation Land

Michigan is a playground for millions. Its wooded wilderness, rich in wild life and natural beauties, brings those who once enjoy it, back,—and back again.

Heavy inroads are being made into this treasure land, by the DEMON FIRE.

Fire Can Destroy it!

The situation is very serious. It must be understood by all,—by our own people and by our visitors. A situation understood is half conquered. This destruction can be stopped by the combined efforts of all who use the forests.

Printed below are five important FIRE PREVENTION RULES, constantly practiced by all trained woodsmen. Study and apply these and pass them on to others. Education in the use of these methods will quickly overcome the carelessness which now causes so much loss.

How to Prevent Fires

1. Matches—Be sure your match is out. Break it in two before you throw it away.

2. Tobacco—Be sure that pipe ashes and cigar or cigarette stubs are dead before throwing them away. Never throw them into brush, leaves, or needles.

3. Making Camp—Before building a fire scrape away all inflammable material from a spot 5 feet in diameter. Dig a hole in the center and in it build your camp fire. Keep your fire small. Never build it against trees or logs or near brush.

4. Breaking Camp — Never break camp until your fire is out—dead out.

5. Brush Burning — Never burn slash or brush in windy weather or while there is the slightest danger that the fire will get away.

PRIMARY ELECTION

Notice is hereby given that a General Primary Election will be held in the Township of Adams, County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, at Town Hall North Adams Within said Township, on Tuesday September 14 A. D. 1926.

For the purpose of placing in nomination by all political parties participating therein, candidates for the following offices, viz.:

State—One candidate for Governor: one candidate for Lieutenant Governor.

Congressional—One candidate for Representative in Congress for the Congressional district of which said Township forms a part.

Legislative—One candidate for Senator in the State Legislature for the Senatorial District of which said Township forms a part: one candidate for Representative in the State Legislature for the Legislative district of which said Township forms a part.

County—Also candidates for the following county offices, viz.: Sheriff, County Clerk, County Treasurer, Register of Deeds, Prosecuting Attorney; County Auditor; Circuit Court Commissioner; One County Drain Commissioner: One Surveyor; Two Coroners; County Road Commissioner.

DELEGATES TO COUNTY CONVENTIONS

There shall also be elected at said primary, by direct vote of the registered and qualified voters of each political party in each county as many delegates in each township, ward or precinct, as the case may be, as such political party in such township, ward or precinct shall be entitled to by the call issued by the county committee of such political party for the county convention thereafter to be held by such political party within said county in that year for the purpose of electing delegates to the state convention called for the purpose of nominating candidates for state offices, to be voted for at the November election. In case of any vacancy in any delegation from any election precinct, township or ward to the county convention, such vacancy shall be filled by the delegates present from the ward or or township in which the vacancy occurs.

The state central committee of each political party shall, at least thirty days before the September primary herein provided for, cause to be forwarded by mail to the chairman of the county committee of such party a copy of the call for the Fall state convention showing the number of delegates to which such county shall be entitled in the state convention of such party; and the said state central committee shall apportion such delegates to the several counties in proportion and according to the number of votes cast for the candidate of such party for secretary of state in each of said counties, respectively, at the last preceding November election.

The name of the candidate for delegate to the county convention shall not be printed upon the official primary election ballot, but one or more such names may be placed on such ballot by printed or written slips pasted thereon by the voter, or the names may be written in by the voter.

Delegates to the Fall county convention shall be elected by election precincts and the county clerk shall notify by mail each person elected as such delegate.

The required number of electors to receive the highest number of votes for delegates to the Fall county convention of any political party shall be declared by the board of primary election inspectors to be elected.

The board of primary election inspectors shall certify to the county clerk the names of the electors so elected, as delegates, naming the political party upon whose ballots such electors were elected. The county clerk shall notify each delegate so elected of his election as such delegate, and shall certify to the chairman of the county committee of each political party of the county, the delegates elected by such political party as delegates to the fall county convention.

SUGGESTIONS RELATIVE TO VOTING

Separate Ballots for each political party will be provided. The elector must name the political party of his choice when asking for a ballot and in marking his ballot must make a cross in the square to the left of the name of each candidate for whom he desires to vote and can vote for only one candidate except where two or more candidates are to be nominated in which case he should vote for two or the number to be nominated.

The Polls of said election will be open at 7:00 a. m. and will remain open until 5:00 o'clock p. m. of said day of election, unless the Board of Election Inspectors shall in their discretion, adjourn the Polls at 12 o'clock, noon for one hour.

Dated July 17, A. D. 1926.

This Undertaker Was Smooth

It is not often that the "dead wagon" carries so much misery as it did at River Rouge recently. Residents along Coolidge Road were horrified to note the heavy death rate, and officers wondered why such superabundance of sorrow and such awful mortality, In other words the "why is" rather got the officers goats. Day after day a sad faced crowd of mourners followed a perfectly respectable looking hearse to the last resting place (whereabouts unknown). Many of the sad faced mourners still had traces of salty tears on their agonized faces. The whole business had a terribly funeral stench. The hearse driver was a sedate and clerical looking man robed in the conventional black. He did his stunt with noble dignity. Altogether it resembled a heart-rending obsequies for a dear one who was no more.

For some time nobody paid much attention to the outfit—in fact it requires an earthquake to attract more than passing notice these days up that way. At last the officials decided to investigate and stopped the procession on the road and opened the hearse and snooped around in the coffin. They found a good many quarts of Canadian Booze where the stiff ought to be. They copped the venerable son-of a-gun who sat in front and found the joke was nothing more or less than a bunch of bootleggers.

Housewives have seen it—have sympathized—and finally, with a callousness beyond explanation, have come to doubt.

Workmen on Coolidge highway have been affected no less. One who noted nervously the approach of the cortege every day, and each time each day, was heard to say to his foreman:

'Mah heavens, Boss, dat district must have a plague, suah. I'se seen dat hearse 'most ebery fifteen minutes de liblong day." But the hearse passes no more.

The Civil war episode of Benjamin F. Butler at New Orleans has nothing on this deal. Old "Spoon Butler" if he were alive to-day would lash the air and gnash his teeth to a fury at such brazen affrontery. We need a few more Butlers in Michigan who cannot be bought or bribed. The main trouble with the temperance cause today is the fact that practically every man who has been placed in charge of enforcing the liquor laws has had a price—and the wets have managed to raise that price. Human nature was is now and always will be controlled by the dollars of our Daddies but there is a time near at hand when money will not influence so much wrong doing as now. We are happy to note that for a time at least the quarantine on liquor across the river at Detroit has been pretty well established and we get it from wet authority that the bootlegging business just now is in misery—the leaks are mostly plugged and every last rum-runner admits he is practically in hard shape. The clamps are on and we hope they will remain just so. Old rum-runners say the odds are too great now to try to peddle whiskey in Detroit to any great extent although beer is of course easy to obtain. In fact the beer regulation is a joke as far as enforcement is concerned. The percent content law makes it so.

A Calamity When Timber Burns

On the back page of this issue you will find an advertisement calling your attention to the awful havoc wrought by forest fires in the timber country. This applies to northern Michigan as well as in the far west and we might say almost right here in the county. Now then Mr. Hunter and Mr. Camper we want to ask one small favor of you. For the sake of all that you hold dear in the world don't throw down your lighted cigarette or cigar in the woods or in any place among timber where it might ignite the dry tinder and leaves and start something. My God, Think Man! Use your best possible judgment to prevent such a calamity as a timber fire would be. Remember this state and every other timber state is right on the verge of a timber famine. You are going to the lumber yard today and paying an outrageous price for a ten foot pine board just because somebody has blundered and did not conserve the magnificent cork pines of Michigan in your boyhood days. Year after year and time after time forest conflagerations have raged in the pine country of Michigan and each time a mighty loss was incurred to every body. Industry which would cheerfully erect much needed residences today is paralyzed because of high prices and scarcity of good timber. What's the cause? Simple enough. Some forty-five years ago we had a splendid stand of pine, and what have we to-day? Merely burnt over sections which are trying to put forth a half-hearted growth of stunted bush timber which will not amount to anything in a generation as timber does not grow today as it did one hundred years ago when there was plenty of moisture in the soil. Watch your step, and don't kindle a fire in the timber.

State Fair September 5–12 1926

West Virginia Leads

The West Virginia State Police have inaugurated some reforms in traffic laws which would look very good in Michigan, The traffic laws in Virginia are looking up, and if things continue to advance lhe motorist as well as the pedestrian will be amply protected. The police have decided that human nature is somewhat slow to realize just what is required on roads and they are hereafter going to use a slight moral persuasion to assist in the observation of laws. Knowing the driver has his troubles the police are looking after his rights. For instance no one walking on public highways is allowed to take the middle of the road. He must keep to the side always (left hand) and no walking three or four abreast is tolerated. These regulations will be enforced to the dot.

Instructions to arrest all persons who walk along the roads in such a manner as to endanger their lives and block traffic, have been issued to all patrolmen. Failing to withdraw when the horn is sounded or walking on the right hand side of the road will be considered a misdemeanor and arrests will follow.

Persons parking on the pavement when there is room to pull off for changing a tire, will be arrested

Elimination of the "one-eyed" night driver is going to be done. Two headlights and a tail-light will have to be burning on every car operated at night, and a campaign against persons driving without the minimum number of lights has been started.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON HOUSEHOLD BUDGETS

"Aunt Emmy," asked Helen, "won't you explain what is meant by a household budget? You said something the other day about budgets, but I don't seem clear in my mind about it."

"A budget is simply a plan," said Aunt Emmy. "You plan what you are going to do with your income. You divide your income systematically so that you can meet your needs. You lay aside a part of your income for rent, other parts for food, clothing, heat, light, telephone, recreation, savings and so on."

"How are you going to know how much you should spend for each thing—on rent for instance, Aunty?" asked Helen.

"Experts have studied the question carefully and have worked out budgets to suit every income. Of course, you can alter these typical budgets slightly to suit your particular needs. For example, the average budget that covers incomes of from $2,000 to $10,000 a year divides your income into six parts. Ten per cent for savings, twenty per cent for rent, twenty per cent for food, twenty per cent for what is called betterment and includes education, amusement, entertainment, books, music, sports; fifteen per cent for clothes and fifteen per cent for operating expenses.

"No matter how you change the other items you must not change the savings allowance—except to increase it. A great majority of men who reach sixty are dependent on relatives or charity. If they had saved only ten cents out of every dollar, they would not have been in that plight. There is nothing like money in the savings bank to help you through the emergencies that come in everybody's life. If everybody kept one year's income in the savings bank, much misery would be averted. If you always have enough money to see you through one year, you are pretty safe. Beyond that, it is wise to let your money accumulate until you have enough to buy some good securities. Your banker will advise you about the securities that suit your needs."

"But, Aunt Emmy, suppose you wanted to alter your budget?" inquired Helen. "How would you know how to do it? A young married couple might start on a certain budget and then, when they had children to feed and educate, they might want to change it."

"Well, my dear, if they were in doubt about their financial affairs, they could always consult their banker. That is why it is so good to establish friendly relations with a bank when you start out in life. Any banker will be glad to advise young people about making their money go farther."

—A. B. Aymes.

WHAT THE FEDERAL RESERVE HAS DONE FOR BUSINESS

What the Federal Reserve System has done for business is summed up in these points: It has (1) given business greater confidence in the ability of the banks to care for credit needs; (2) introduced an elastic currency and eliminated money panics; (3) eliminated extreme seasonal fluctuations in rates of interest; (4) brought business safely through the war and post-war crises; (5) saved millions of dollars to business through its efficient system for check collection; (6) made the gold reserve more effective as a basis for credit extension in times of extraordinary demand; (7) aided in the financing of foreign and domestic trade by developing a discount market for acceptances; (8) provided a means for handling huge financial operations of the government without interference with business; (9) aided in the re-establishment of the gold standard abroad; (10) given us an experienced banking organization which will assist us in meeting the future exigencies of business at home and abroad with courage and confidence.

Club Winners To Go To State Fair

Winners of demonstration and judging contests from three Boys' and Girls' Club Camps will attend the Michigan State Fair at Detroit September 5 to 11 to compete for higher honors.

Three hundred and three free trips for club teams and their leaders have been made possible through the courtesy of the Board of Managers of the State Fair. A. G. Kettunen, State Club Leader, estimates that there will be in all about 500 club members who will attend the fair.

There will be 53 judging and demonstration teams representing the lower half of the lower peninsula, chosen during Club Week at M. S. C. in July and at the annual Livestock, Crops, and Poultry Tours at the college for club members August 23, 24, 26, and 27. The upper peninsula will send the second largest group of representatives with 24 teams and their leaders chosen at Camp Shaw at Chatham. There will be 11 teams to represent the upper half of the lower peninsula who were chosen at the first annual club camp for this section of the state held at Gaylord.

The contests which the club members will enter at the State Fair are as follows: dairy judging, dairy demonstration, poultry judging, poultry demonstration, grain judging, potato demonstration, clothing demonstration, canning demonstration, food study demonstration clothing judging, canning judging handicraft demonstration, and a health contest in which the healthiest boy and the healthiest girl of the state will be chosen.

Winners in each of the contests at the State Fair will be awarded free trips to the fifth national Boys and Girls' Club Congress at Chicago November 26 to December 2.

With the annual International Egg Laying Contest conducted at M. S. C. drawing near the close for 1926, White Leghorns are still holding the lead for light breeds and Barred Rocks in the heavier breeds. The contest will end November 1. A pen of ten White Leghorns from Hanson's White Leghorn farm, Corvallis, Oregon is leading with 2,070 eggs since November 1, 1925 with White Leghorns from the Harry Burns farm, Millington, Michigan, second. Maple Crest Poultry Farm leads in the class for Barred Rocks with 1,836 eggs and Sunrise Trail Rhode Island Reds, Farmingdale, New York are first in their class with 1,677.

CATHOLICS ACTIVE IN PATRIOTIC OBSERVATION

Roman Catholic churches throughout Michigan participated in the recent observances of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence and the centennial of the death of Thomas Jefferson, author of that document and second president of the United States.

In accordance with instructions sent to pastors of the three dioceses of Detroit, Grand Rapids and Marquette, there was official observance of "Kosciuszko Day", in memory of the great Polish patriot, "Patriot's Peldge of Faith Day" and "Jefferson Centennial Day."

Anthony J. Beck, editor of the Michigan Catholic, official publication of the Roman Catholic diocese of Detroit, was chosen chairman of the news committee of the Catholic Press Association of the United States and Canada, at the recent international convention of the association held in Detroit. In selecting a Detroiter as chairman of one of the important committees, recognition was given to the progress of the Diocese under the administration of the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D. The news committee will work in co-operation with the National Catholic Welfare Council, which supplies news of interest to readers of Catholic publications throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Mexican Catholics Ask a Truce and Reform of the Constitution.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

MEXICAN Catholics are now seeking a compromise of their controversy with the government. The episcopal committee, made up of archbishops and bishops, last week presented to President Calles a petition for suspension of the religious laws pending constitutional reform "so that worship, education and charity may from now on enjoy due guarantees."

The committee denies that the priests were rebellious in suspending public worship in the churches, and says they have given proof of their respect for the law as far as their consciences permit. The petition continues: "We answer the charge of not having petitioned for reform of the constitution by stating that the governors, for one reason or another, did not enforce the objectionable clauses, so we are not called upon to demand a repeal of the clauses, which were a dead letter. Similar action with regard to the constitution of 1917 we considered less called for since President Carranza himself qualified them (the religious clauses) as unjust and uncalled for and proposed the reform of certain articles that are contrary to liberties claimed by the Mexican Catholic people.

"These were not effected because of events known. Nor did General Obregon urge compliance with the objectionable laws. So we had no reason to object.

"Now, animated by a most sincere patriotism, desirous of a true and lasting peace, we ask you to use your influence to reform said articles, effectively, and also the penal prescriptions lately sanctioned.

"As a basis for this reform, we request full independence of church and state, so that the constitution and organic laws and regulations be faithfully interpreted; that the state dictate no laws prescribing any religious or legislative matters, as, for example, the fixing of the number of priests, or imposing conditions on the exercise of the ministry, etc.

"This is the true conception of civil law as observed among people faithfully respecting the independence of spiritual and temporal power. Accordingly, we ask the following liberties, to which we are entitled as Christians and citizens of a cultured nation and as men: Liberty of conscience, of thought, of worship, of instruction, of association, of press—all without onerous restrictions destroying the substance of the constitutional principles."

Though the Catholic authorities have repeatedly asserted that they do not countenance any revolutionary attempts, the government agents say they have uncovered extensive plans for rebellion, and scores of arrests were made. The one actual attempt at revolution so far was scotched by agents of the Department of Justice of the United States when they nabbed Gen. Enrique Estrada and more than 150 of his followers near San Diego, Calif., on charges of violating the neutrality laws. The band of insurrectos had an armored truck, machine guns, rifles and lots of ammunition and was on its way to cross the border.

Secretary of State Kellogg, calling on the President at White Pine camp, told him of his discussion with the leaders of the Knights of Columbus who had presented that order's demand for intervention in the Mexican dispute. Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Kellogg were in complete agreement that no grounds exist for such intervention or for any variation of the administration's policy of dealing with the Calles government.

There has been but one specific complaint of infringement of American property rights in the church embroglio, and not any complaints of bodily injuries to American citizens. The administration, it appears, has not felt warranted in interceding to prevent the expulsion of American clericals from Mexico, inasmuch as these expulsion measures have applied to all foreign clericals alike.

In the controversy over confiscatory oil lands the President is satisfied that the Mexican government has made large concessions.

SECRETARY KELLOGG took occasion, in a speech at Plattsburg, N. Y., to state the administration's attitude toward the Geneva preliminary arms limitation conference, and the government cabled the full text to American diplomatic missions in all major capitals. Dealing with published reports that the United States might withdraw from the Geneva deliberations, which have been complicated by efforts of the French and other delegations to have a limitation formula which would cover land and sea forces, aircraft and even national economic resources and possibly man power, Mr. Kellogg declared that "we are now working to make the Geneva meeting a success," and expressed hope that "progress towards naval limitation, as well as toward limitation of land armament, will result."

He made it clear that "what we desire is results," but left the door open, if the Geneva meeting should adjourn without constructive action looking toward reduction of military burdens, for the Washington government to initiate a conference among great naval powers with a view to extending the scope of the Washington limitation agreements.

YET another result of Mr. Kellogg's conference with the President was the decision to ask the Canadian government to receive American officials for discussion of a plan whereby the supply of bootleg liquor from Canadian sources can be completely shut off. The proposed agreement would permit American prohibition forces to arrest liquor smugglers wherever smuggling was attempted. It was given out that the President was determined that national prohibition, being the law, should be enforced to the limit of the government's power. Gen. L. C. Andrews has been persuaded to continue in office at least until the present congress ends. He believes the agreement he negotiated with the British will stop the smuggling of liquor from British possessions, and he expects congress to amend the Volstead act so the diversion of industrial alcohol to beverage purposes can be prevented.

WITHOUT waiting for the return of Carmi Thompson, his personal investigator in the Philippines, President Coolidge has made it known that he still does not regard the Filipinos as capable of independence at this time. He believes that they should make further political advancement before being trusted to govern themselves. But that the United States will be justified in granting them independence eventually, he has no doubt.

POINCARE'S government in France, of which Ambassador Herrick, home on vacation, speaks most optimistically, is putting into effect its retrenchment program, the first step being to cut down the wheat importations to the extent of 28,000,000 bushels the ensuing year. Dr. Andre Queuille, minister of agriculture, told the cabinet that by increasing the percentage of whole wheat in flour the country could dispense with 5,000,000 bushels this coming year. A further saving of 23,000,000 bushels will be effected by the obligatory use of 10 per cent of other cereals in breadmaking.

WHEN Julius Rosenwald, Chicago capitalist, was in Europe recently he was immensely interested in the famous Deutsches industrial museum in Munich, and determined that his city should have a similar institution. Accordingly, last week he gathered together a number of Chicago's leading men and announced that he would give $3,000,000 to equip such a museum, to be located in the Fine Arts building in Jackson park, a World's fair structure whose reconstruction has been provided for at a cost of $5,000,000. Mr. Rosenwald's guests were enthusiastic over the project and gave assurance of financial and moral support that makes its carrying out a certainty. The museum with all its industrial exhibits installed will represent an investment of $20,000,000.

Another Chicago institution that will be of national interest, the Shedd aquarium, soon to be built in Grant park, was given an additional $1,000,000 by Mr. Shedd last week, making his total gift $3,000,000. It is planned to make this aquarium the greatest, from a scientific standpoint, in the world.

UNITED Spanish War Veterans held their annual encampment in Des Moines, Iowa, and elected United States Senator Rice W. Means of Colorado their commander in chief. He served in the Philippines during the war with Spain. Mrs. Jennie R. Dix was chosen president of the Spanish War Nurses. Detroit was selected for the 1927 meeting, and Havana, Cuba, for 1928.

PROSPECTS for peaceful settlement of the British coal strike are good, for the miners voted in favor of resumption of unrestricted negotiations with the mine owners, and conferences between the latter and the miners' executive committee were begun. It was presumed the government would name a neutral chairman. Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, said the government's good offices were available to both sides but that whatever happened, there could be no more subsidy. He added that the strike had already cost the taxpayers of the country £23,000,000, and asserted that if all the miners returned to work at once additional taxation could be avoided only with the greatest exertion, for funds needed for cultural and economic development had been consumed in the internal warfare.

TROUBLE is brewing in Tangier and British and French warships are there to meet the situation. The population is in a state of great excitement, due partly to the torturing of native prisoners by the international police and partly to the statement of Gen. Primo de Rivera, Spanish dictator, that Tangier should be included in the Spanish zone in Morocco. This is Spain's price for the relinquishment of her claim to a permanent seat in the League of Nations council, and if it is not conceded there is a chance that she may veto the admission of Germany to the league or more likely follow the example of Brazil and withdraw from the league. An Italian cabinet member says any solution of the Tangier question which does not include consideration of Italy's rights as a signer of the treaty of Algeciras and as a Mediterranean power will be protested to the League of Nations.

JACK DEMPSEY and Gene Tunney will fight for the heavyweight title in Philadelphia on September 23, instead of in Chicago or New York. Tex Rickard has made arrangements with the Sesquicentennial authorities for the use of the stadium and the contest has received the O. K. of the Pennsylvania boxing commission, Governor Pinchot and Mayor Kendrick. That's the status of this momentous affair at this writing. There may be a change any day.

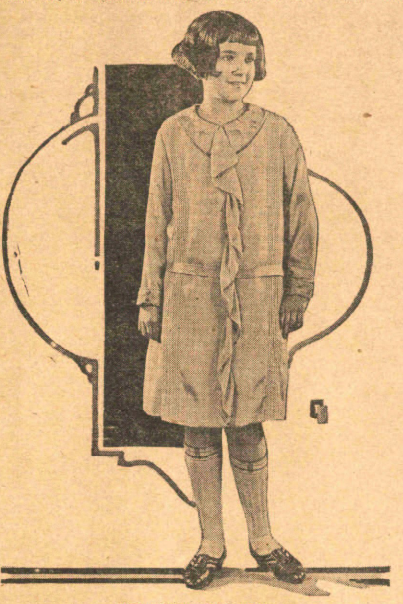
ALLIED armies of Marshal Chang and General Feng, after a siege lasting 112 days, drove the Kouminchun or national forces out of their strategic position in Nankow pass. The losers, however, retreated in good order while their heavy guns slaughtered the Manchurians. Foreign military observers say that in this campaign the Chinese employed modern war methods with notable skill.

The Kuominchun are said to have received bolshevik support from Russia. The same influence is said to be animating the march of the Cantonese government troops in southern China against the central provinces controlled by Wu Pei-Fu.

DR. HENRY WADE ROGERS, former president of Northwestern university and also former dean of the Yale law school, and since 1913 a judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in New York, died in Trenton, N. J., at the age of seventy-three years. During his ten years at Northwestern he raised that institution from the status of a suburban college to that of a metropolitan university.

CHIC STYLES FOR SCHOOL; EARLY FALL MILLINERY

RIGHT in the midst of the long vacation mother wakes up on some placid summer morning with something weighing on her mind. It is the fact that Marguerite, Frances, Mary and the rest must soon be answering the roll call at school and thereby hangs a tale of new clothes for fast growing youngsters. Wherewithal shall they be clothed for the fall season? Is there anything new in fabrics that is worth considering? If not, which of the old reliables is favored? It goes without saying that school frocks must be simple—but how shall they be varied and what little details of finish reveal their up-to-dateness?

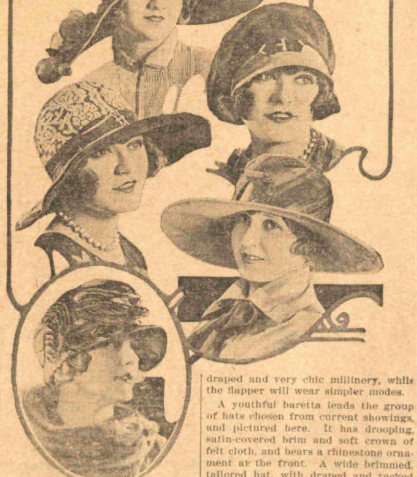


Ready for the School Bell.

Beginning with wool fabrics, jersey seems to stand at the head of a dependable class which includes twills, wool crepes and various novelty weaves for dresses. In silks, crepe de chine, canton crepe and other wash silks are as practical as wool or cotton for school frocks, while the smaller fry will still wear everyday clothes of sturdy cotton weaves. In wool and silk materials the favored colors are chanel red, navy blue, peony, deep green, brighter reds and some black, but beige, rose, brown and various blues are all represented. As for style points, bloused waistlines, small collars, jabots, plaits, bolero jackets, smocking and embroidery (in cross-stitch or other simple effects) are approved and recurrent in the new displays. Leather belts with metallic buckles, metallic buttons and little buckles placed at the collar, all contribute decorative touches.

Coats include the straightline, flared and cape-coat varieties made of wool cheviot, velours, broadcloth and other coatings and velveteen may be considered in the list. High, snug collars and full sleeves with varied treatments of the shoulder line are liked for girls up to their middle teens.

In August fashion sounds the retreat of summer millinery from shops and departments to make way for between-seasons and fall hats. These begin to arrive in late July and soon replace their more fragile sisters, however lovely they are, with sturdier stuff. This year the advance guard of fall headwear was made up of light-colored felt and velours hats, many of them having medium wide brims and high dented crowns. They are soft and therefore supple and adaptable, with brims that may be turned up or down and crowns that may be dented to suit the wearer. These were soon followed by felt blocked shapes and draped hats of antelope and foulard felts in darker colors. Hats of moire, satin, ribbon, velvet and combinations of fabrics are popular items for fall wear.



Distinctive Millinery.

Judging from these early arrivals stylists are making distinctly different types for the matron and the maid. Older women will not wear flapperish hats, but will be smartly crowned with supple, intricately draped and very chic millinery, while the flapper will wear simpler modes.

A youthful baretta leads the group of hats chosen from current showings, and pictured here. It has drooping, satin-covered brim and soft crown of felt cloth, and bears a rhinestone ornament at the front. A wide brimmed, tailored hat, with draped and tucked crown, is finished with a ribbon ornament and a still wider hat, of the picturesque type, bears a cluster of velvet fruit at the right side. Summer lingers in the heavier straws like ballibuntis and is represented in the modified poke shape, faced with satin and adorned with handsome feather ornaments. Finally a black and white model makes a late summer appeal with soft, floppy brim, faced with velvet, crown covered with applique embroidery, a collar of fancy braid and a sparkling ornament at the front.

Objects to Vanity in Sacred Edifice

The vicar of a leading Hull (England) church, in his monthly parish magazine writes:

"I have had several complaints about what appears to be a new form of nuisance in church. People keep telling me that the most solemn moments in our worship are often spoiled for them by some—shall we call them shame-faced ones, since they are apparently ashamed of their ordinary faces?—who powder in a most ostentatious way.

"One can sympathize with many people wishing to disguise themselves, and one has grown almost used to seeing Pimpo (the clown) complexions; but these people are asking too much of us when they choose such inappropriate times and places for their renovation.

"It will come to a pretty pass if we have to display notices in our churches, 'Ladies are requested not to powder during the prayers.'"

Bird Life in England Is Undergoing Change

The haunts of wild birds, as well as their food, are being changed considerably in England through increasing motor traffic, the breaking up of great forested estates for building and the disappearance of woods, parks and meadows.

The annual report of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds adds: "Beyond the margin of the land, petrol-driven vessels outdo the danger of the motor car inland by emptying on every sea an oily refuse that means death to the sea birds."

The society reports that special perches placed on lighthouses around the coasts have saved the lives of thousands of birds during the migration season.

Oh, Well!

Bishop Benjamin Brewster said at a Portland reception:

"Most of the religious quabbles that fill the newspapers and empty the churches are as absurd as—well, as this story:

"A family lost its pet parrot, and little Jimmy said:

"'Poor parrot! He's an angel now.'

"'He ain't no angel, nuther,' said little Bill ferociously.

"'He is so!'

"'He ain't, I tell you! Only human beings can be angels.'

"'Well, what is he, then?'

"'Why a Bird of Paradise, of course.'"

Vacant Prairie Lands

It is estimated that there are still in the three prairie provinces some 30,000,000 acres of cultivable land, within 15 miles of existing railways, which is as yet unsettled. In Manitoba only about 11.8 of the cultivable acreage is now under field crops. In Alberta only 17.5 of the available area is being farmed, while in Saskatchewan the percentage is 34.7.

When a new philosophy begins, it demands tolerance; after it grows old it practices intolerance.

We may be personally defeated, but our principles never.—Garrison.

American Farms Are Not Losing Fertility

Washington.—A widely held belief that crop yields per acre have been decreasing, due to lessened soil fertility and bad handling of land by farmers, is exploded by economists of the Department of Agriculture.

An examination of the records of production extending back over the last half century discloses that yields have been rising in Illinois during the past forty years. This also is true of eastern states, thus disproving another theory that farms in the older areas of the United States have been worn out.

The outstanding feature of the investigation made by the department officials is the discovery that crop increases have been largest in states east of the Ohio river.

The study was undertaken on the theory that if it is made worth while to agriculture to stimulate production the volume of the national harvest will be materially enlarged. Rising values of food products normally would result in increasing intensification and a higher level of soil productivity through the wide use of better cultivation methods.

Victory over a multitude of innumerable plant parasites would also be a tremendous factor in increasing the food supply. Insects are estimated to wreak damage annually to the extent of more than $1,000,000,000. It is the opinion that progress in combating pests will go hand in hand with other improved farm methods.

Reaches Below the Ankles

A rather different bouffant frock is of black satin with a high neckline at the front and reaching to below the ankles. The back has a deep decolletage outlined with a fichu of fine lace. It is very short in back.

The Double Neckline

A rather new note has been touched by the double neckline. The top one is of a transparent fabric cut close to the neck and the under one is extremely decollete.

Chiffon Pajamas

Lovely pajamas for summer wear feature a combination of plain chiffon with flower designs in striking color effects. One of black chiffon has trousers of black bordered with huge roses.

Kills All Household Insects

Flit spray also destroys bed bugs, roaches and ants. It searches out the cracks and crevices where they hide and breed, and destroys insects and their eggs. Spray Flit on your garments. Flit kills moths and their larvae which eat holes. Extensive tests showed that Flit spray did not stain the most delicate fabrics.

Flit is the result of exhaustive research by expert entomologists and chemists. It is harmless to mankind. Flit has replaced the old methods because it kills all the insects—and does it quickly.

BRIMMED HATS ARE FALL STYLE

One thing that will be noticed in the fall showings of millinery is the presence of a brim on most of the hats, whether they are of the sports or formal variety. Sports hats, of course, are quite conservative in this matter, but the millinery for semi-formal and dress is designed with brims that are equal to the days of the nineties. Trimming, however, is simple, the style note depending upon the lines of the creation instead of its decoration.

Outstanding features in modes for frocks are the short jacket, decidedly tailored, the presence of embroidery on semi-formal gowns, plenty of color in all garb, and sports combinations of practical materials, many waterproof and in most delightful hues.

Paris designers continue to display original ideas in fall attire. In the collection of Paquin are many tunics made in plain black or navy on a black background. They open in the front. Generally they are rather full in the skirt with blousing bodices.

The neck lines are often square, except on dressier frocks, where they are boat-shaped. Occasionally they are round and are then either bordered with narrow velvet ribbons or have stiff rather flat not very large pink moire ribbon collars.

The ensemble is often seen in this collection and can be divided into two groups; the first consisting of a dark dressy frock worn under a rather tailored coat made in a lighter fabric; the second formed of a three-quarter length coat made of the same fabric as the hem of the dress, which differs from the upper part of the dress and therefore produces a sort of tunic effect.

One attractive model in the first group is a black crepe satin dress with rather close-fitting bodice trimmed with velvet ribbon at the neckline. The skirt has the fullness obtained by gathers. The coat worn over it is made in grey covercoat. The waist is rather clearly marked and the entire skirt pleated, while the only touch of fantaisie, which, if anything, adds to its severity, is obtained by a small velvet collar.

Half of Jackson Prison Inmates Sent From Wayne County

Prison population figures taken frfom the books of Record Clerk John Crowley at Jackson show there are 2781 men serving time for one offense or another. Nearly half the number of inmates hail from Wayne county, there being 1,542 registered from Detroit and vicinity, while Kent county is next with 110 prisoners. Other counties contributing to the rolls of the institution are Jackson, with 76; Kalamazoo, 84; Genessee, 56; Oakland, 76; Calhoun, 52; and Ingham with 67.

While there are 98 committed to the prison for first degree murder and 59 for second degree murder, robbery leads offenses committed with 320. Larceny violation of the prohibition law and breaking an entering at night, the first with 287 and the others with 179 and 174, respectively, are next.

Out of the whole number in the institution, 35 college men are serving time, and 176 with a high school eucation, as against 511 illiterates. The rest have ha a grammar school eucation.

Only 852 prisoners claim this state as their resience. There are 463 foreign born, Poland leading with 184 and unaa coming next with 102. Other countries contribute as follows: Austria, 36; Mexico, 29; Russia, 85; Germany, 17; Greece, 12; Holland, 6; and one each from Africa and Algeria.

Sanilac Tourist Camp Has Outdoors Swimming Pool

East Michigan presents an unusual appeal to the tourist, in the form of a very unique setting near Sandusky, county seat of Sanilac county, in the Thumb region.

Half a mile south of this beautiful spot is Michigan's only outdoor swimming camp. The pool is constructed of concrete from two feet to nearly seven feet.

At the immediate edge of the large bathing basin is Sandusky's new tourist camp. More than an acre of woods, with considerable land elevation adds a marked distinction to this camp, and the pool, itself, already is attracting hundreds of tourists, winding their way through the beautiful central secton of the Thumb.

On the road to success, resting places are few and far between.

To know what to do and not do it is laziness or downright cowardice.

Success consists in anticipating difficulties—and beating them to it.

Marshes Sanctuaries For Terns and Gulls

In the spring the white-winged fleets of gulls and terns return to our lakes and contribute to the charm of the waters. The large Caspian terns group themselves near the gulls and the common terns remain to be seen along the marshy edges of rivers or lakes than elsewhere. The marshes themselves, providing there are open pools, are welcome sanctuaries.

Of the numerous tern family the Caspian, common and black are the only ones regularly found in this region. The Caspian nests on some islands in uppermost Lake Michgan, but migrants may be seen both spring and fall elsewhere. The common tern nests in large colonies on low islands in any of the lakes. In some instances the crude scooped-out nests are so close together that it is almost impossible to walk there without stepping on egg or chick.

The black tern is not so likely to be confused with the gulls as the common, for it is so much darker in color and is seldom found in the open waters. It also has a black bill, a distinctive mark easily recognized. The tail is much less forked than the common tern. The fisherman need not have any suspicion of it, for the black tern is the least piscivorous and the most insectivorous of the family.

Farm Implement Sales For Year Gain $55,000,000

The farmers of America may be in the throes of a depression but last year they bought equipment worth approximately $55,000,000 more than the value of their machinery purchases of 1924, the department of commerce reports.

Sales of agricultural equipment for domestic use in 1925 aggregated $332,845,204, as against $277,924,547, while sales for export rose from $51,988,372 in 1924 to $64,934,212 in 1925.

The total value of farm equipment manufactured in 1925 was placed at $383,736,736, an increase of 18.7 per cent as compared with $323,367,127 in 1924 and of 5,2 per cent over $364,854,106 in 1923.

Farm tractors and traction engines led other classes of equipment produced in 1925 with a value of $120,358,518.

The total of the domestic and export sales is not identical with the value of equipment manufactured, the department pointed out, because a part of the 1924 production was sold in 1925 and a part of the 1925 production was carried over into 1926.

Yankee Springs Named By Travelers in 1835

The recent rise in value of real estate along the shores of so many of Barry county lakes has brought to light many stories of the early life of the settlers in this county.

Yankee Springs township, where are found the popular Gun lake attractions, has an especially interesting background. Early in 1835 a family by the name of Henry Leonard and a young man, Charles Paul were moving; on the Indian trail between what is now Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids they stopped for luch at some wonderful springs. A stranger joned them who was also from New England and when one remarked that they were all Yankees and should call the springs "Yankee Springs," another member of the party cut a strip of bark off a tree and carved "Yankee Springs" on the tree. The public liked the name.

Experienced Line up for 1926 Promised Hillsdale

For the 1926 football season, Hillsdale College will have a large squad of experienced men returning to school as but five were graduated in June. Coach Leroy Guckert, who is on a tour of the Orient this summer with his assistant, Dwight B. Harwood, will be on hand September 21.

The schedule for the 1926 season is as follows:

Sept. 25—Open.
Oct. 2—At Lake Forest College, Chicago.
Oct. 9—At Toledo University, Toledo.
Oct. 16—At Alma.
Oct. 23—Adrian at Hillsdale.
Oct. 30—Detroit City College at Hillsdale.
Nov. 6—At Kalamazoo College.
Nov. 13—At Olivet.
Nov. 20—Albion at Hillsdale.

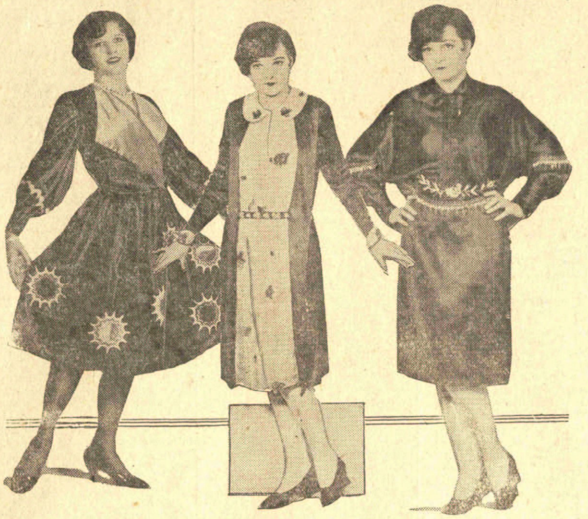
Hospitality comes from the heart; it can't be imitated.

Statistics prove that 50 per cent of the married people in the United States are women.

Poetry may bring returns—if a stamp is inclosed with it.

It's an easy matter to get into the habit of meeting trouble half way.

Satin Is One of Autumn's Favorite Fabrics



Satin frocks are very prominent in the Autumn styles. Three of the new creations are pictured above, left black with lapels and skirt motifs of colored silk, the latter finished with embroidery. The full skirt and fitted bodice suggest a basque effect. Silver cloth front, collar and cuffs embroidered in bright colors decorate the frock in the center, and the third model (right) is a dolman type—also of black satin—with Chinese embroidery and tie collar.

$350,000,000 GAIN IN STATE'S VALUE

An increase of more than $350,000,000 in the valuation of the state for taxation purposes was ordered by the state board of equalization. The board accepted, with only one change, the recommendation recently made by the state tax commission advancing the value from $7,361,035,000 to $7,715,865,00. Alger county was given a reduction of $75,000 from the suggested values because of an industrial fire there a few days ago.

Inasmuch as $250,000,000 of the increase is added to Wayne county's valuation most out-state counties will benefit by the revision. Their percentages of the state tax will be decreased in most instances.

The only exceptions are Muskegon, where the percentage jumps from 1.19 to 1.24 per cent, Macomb, which goes from 1.33 to 1.45 per cent, and Oakland from 3.34 to 3.78. Wayne's portion of the state tax will advance from 46.5 to 47.6 per cent.

Ban On Hunting In North Michigan Is Forecast by Baird

"Sentiment throughout Northern Michigan favors an indefinite closed season on all forms of hunting," says John Baird, director of conservation. "Residents generally believe the wild life resources are of more value to their country as attractions for tourists than as targets and trophies for sportsmen. One prominent business man told me, while we were on our fish hatchery inspection trip, that tourists will travel miles for a glimpse of a wild deer, and if hunting was forbidden it would be but a short time before the animals would lose much of their wildness and feed contentedly along most of our highways where tourists could see them. From present indications I would not be surprised to find the next Legislature confronted with requests to ban hunting in Upper Michigan," said Mr. Baird.

Detroit Hair Cut Prices Fail to Phase U. S. Seal

One class of customers who are not affected by the new Detroit prices for haircuts is the seals of the Pribilof Islands in Bering Sea. And they are all to have their hair cuts and trims, that is the mole element of one year of age. Captain A. Anderson of the bureau of fisheries vessel Elder says they will be sheared to indicate the increase next year. Each year several thousand are slaughtered for the fur market under government supervision.

Responsibilities cannot be dodged—either you must meet your bills or bill collectors.

As a rule a "flier" on any scheme means that the savings put into it will take wings and fly away.

Michigan Deer Are "Fodder" for Guns of Pennsylvanians

More deer are killed annually in Pennsylvania than in the entire state of Michigan, statistics compiled by experts prove. And the deer that annually fall befor the hunters' rifles in that state are Michigan white-tailed deer which were transplanted in Pennsylvania forests several years ago through the efforts of George Shiras, 3rd, of Marquette.

White-tailed deer, which are considered the greatest game animal in the United States today, are natives of Michigan and the only other states they inhabit are those to which they were transferred by enterprising sportsmen. The original run of the white-tailed deer was a belt of heavily timbered hills in Alger and Marquette counties in northern Michigan, but the invasion of the lumberman and the deer-slaying hunters did much to depopulate northern Michigan forests of this noble animal.

Lying adjacent to Munising, like a green emerald in the deep blue of Lake Superior, is Grand Island whereon has been established the world's largest private game preserve, which is now the home of white-tailed deer. The island is owned by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company which maintains the preserve.

Ship Lines Send Trucks for Oceana Fruit Crop

Steamship lines operating between Muskegon and Milwaukee and Chicago are making it easier for Oceana county frut growers to market their crops this season.

Trucks are beng sent to orchards to pick up fruit for shipment. Ship lines have given growers and shippers a flat rate of 25 cents a case from any point in Oceana county to Milwaukee. The rafe from Muskegon to Milwaukee is 12 1-2 cents a case and the other 12 1-2 cents a case is the service fee for hauling the fruit from market to port.

Large quantities of sweet cherries have been marketed in this manner, and it is expected a heavy tonnage of peaches will be moved by the same method. Growers benefit by the new system as they can spend their entire time at home, supervising the harvest and other farm operations.

Father and Son in Skiff Make 500 Mile Lake Trip

Michael Derler and his son, Charles, 12 years old, of Ludington, have finished a 500-mile cruise on Lake Michigan in a 16-foot rowboat equipped with an outboard motor. They made a trip along the coast to Chicago and after spending a week there, returned the same way. They averaged seven miles an hour and the boat consumed 26 gallons of gasoline. It was equipped with sleeping quarters, but meals were prepared ashore.

Of course your job's a problem; that's why you're trusted with it instead of someone less capable.

AUTOS BARRED TO UNDERCLASS MEN

Student automobiles for underclassmen of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, will be banned with the beginning of the school year this fall. Only upper-classmen, juniors and seniors of the university, whose scholastic record is high, will be allowed to own cars.

Enforcement of this new order will be placed in the hands of a student committee that will be appointed by the president of the student council, student undergraduate governing body. Violators will be tried by this body and subject to any discipline that it imposes if they are found guilty.

Letters are being mailed to parents of students who will enter the school this fall, informing them of the new ruling, and telling them that students must leave their cars at home.

Michigan State Faces Big Job to Get Running Team

With only one veteran available, Capt. Roy Severance, Coach Morton F. Mason faces a difficult task to build a Michigan State cross country team capable of holding its own this fall.

Dual cross country meets are scheduled with the University of Michigan and Marquette University at East Lansing, and with Notre Dame at South Bend. In addition, State will compete in the Central Intercollegiates, which will be held at East Lansing, and in the Western Conference cross country run at the University of Minnesota. State's second cross country team will run as usual in the State Intercollegiate at East Lansing.

Coach Mason must depend virtually on his last year's freshman squad for material, and on a few reserves.

Charleston Is Called Cake Eaters' Eliminator

The much-talked-about Charleston is part of the daily dozen of stalwart athletes at the University of Illinois, in the school of coaching.

Professor C. T. Stafford, in charge of corrective orthopedics at "Red" Grange's alma mater, and at present an instructor at Battle Creek college, says:

"We are for the Charleston; it takes good feet and cake-eaters can't stand the strain. We use it as a foot exercise."

Ypsi Professor, Native of India, Goes o Missouri

Theodore W. H. Irion, professor of education and psychology at Michigan State Normal College, Ypsilanti, has resigned to take similar appointment at the University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo. He will go to the new position at the opening of the fall term.

Professor Irion is a native of India, his parents later moving to the United States.

QUICKSAND PERILS UTILITIES PLANTS

Quicksand, underneath the power plant of the Michigan Northern Power company, which supplies electricity for the sault Ste. Marie street car system and the furnace of the Union Carbide company plant, the city's largest industry, has so undermined the giant power house, which is the longest in the world, that it has been forced to shut down.

Virtually all of the 500 Union Carbide company employes have been put to work on the repairs to the damages wrought by quicksand and rushing power canal water, to forestall any chance of the plant tumbling into the waters of St. Marys river.

50 Elk to be Shipped Here in Deal with U. S.

The conservation authorities of the state have about completed negotiations with the federal government for the shipment of at least 50 elk from the Jackson Hole country in Wyoming to the Amasa ranch property in upper Michigan. The animals will be liberated and it is expected that the herd will band together more or less and keep well within the confines of two or three counties.

Wife Fills Place When Age Retires Rail Man

D. E. Connine, M. C. ticket agent at Caro, has reached the age lmit of 70 years and has been retired by the company. M. E. Bloom, of Otter Lake, has been appointed to fill the vacancy. Mrs. Connine is acting operator until the change is made, and the passenger depot is closed for the late evening train.

Grand Rapids Asked to Give Laborers Holiday

Saturday half holidays for laborers employed on municipal projects in Grand Rapids are asked of the city commission by the trades and labor council. A number of contractors have refused to suspend operations on Saturday afternoons, it was said.

"Y" State Tournament to be on Jackson Court

The state wide Y. M. C. A. tennis tournament will be held in Jackson September 10-11. Entries must be mailed to the Y. M. C. A. before midnight September 4. The district Y. M. C. A. tournament will be held at Jackson Friday.

Re-Foresting Wins State Tower For Muskegon County

Muskegon County's leadership in reforestration has won a second fire tower from the State. The second 65-foot tower was put in operation last week. Despite dry weather, there has not been a single disastrous forest fire this season.

The towerman with the aid of cross-section maps, are able to determine the location of the fires and the township fire fighting units are notified. As a result, the fires are put out before they gain much headway.

Several arrests have been made in Muskegon County for the starting of fires without permits. This action has resulted in the number of fires being kept down.

HAY-FEVER AND ASTHMA CONQUERED

You can be permanently relieved from the distressing diseases, Hay Fever and Asthma. No matter of how long standing or how violent your case may be, permanent relief may be obtained in most cases by the use of HIMALYA.

"Gentlemen:-

"Replying to yours of the 11th instant, will say that I am glad to add one more testimonial to the praise of HIMALYA. I am 44 years old and when I was 15 years of age I began to suffer with Asthma, and the paroxysms got worse and more frequent for the next ten years, until I could rest no way when an attack was on; but thanks to 'HIMALYA' I am well and I suffer no more from Asthma, and as it has been ten years since I was cured, I feel that the cure is permanent, but should it ever recur, I would send for another treatment of HIMALYA. I had used every remedy I could hear of, all to no good, but HIMALYA gave me relief from the start. HIMALYA is the one great boon for Asthma and Hay Fever sufferers, and I will always be glad to recommend it to all who suffer with same. As ever,

GEORGE ALBERT EMERICH
Pittsford, Michigan
Republican Candidate for the Nomination of
STATE REPRESENTATIVE
PRIMARIES — SEPTEMBER 14, 1926

A man of excellent character, high morals, and capability. He believes in:—A pay-as-you-go policy; an equalization of taxation, so the farmer will not be unjustly burdened; Equal rights for all, special favors for none; Government by the people. He will listen to suggestions from any or his constituency and will honestly endeavor to be a Representative of all the people of Hillsdale County.

A supporter of Green for Governor, but if Groesbeck is elected, will support him as much as is consistent.

YOUR SUPPORT GREATLY APPRECIATED

PEACH CREST

Postoffice, R. F. D., Phone, CAMDEN, MICH.

The rains and temperature have been very favorable to peaches. Deweys will last until about the 28th.

Carmen, (our only white peach) also a few clings for pickling, will start about the 30th. If you want White Peaches, order now.

Yellow St. John and Sonth Haven will be on Sept. 1st followed in ten days by Elberta and Gold Drop. The Lemon Free so pepular for canning, will be on after FAIR WEEK when it is cooler for canning. They please everyone but are homely before being peeled.

Send a card or letter stating what variety you prefer and about how many, so we can tell you when to come for them. Visitors always welcome, and as we were told several times yesterday—"It is one of the real sights of Souhtern Michigan." It is surely an unusual one.

9 miles south and 3 miles west of Hillsdale.

DETROIT'S GROWTH MAKES MONEY!

Growth in population backed by basic iudustries is what sends real estate values upward. bringing profits to owners. Let this faster growth bring faster profits to you.

Reputable Detroit real estate can be bought on installment—indeed this is the customary way. You are thus able to purchase real estate out of income rather than capital.

Installments are usually one per cent of the value of the lot per month.

The initial down payment is 15 per cent.

Thus:

A $1500 lot will cost you $15 per month and $225 as a down payment.

Make use of the customary terms to enrollin the ranks of Detroit's profit makers by investing in property in our Golf and Country Club District.

Eugene McBain will be in attendance at Warsaw Indiana to the National Field Trials of the famous English Beagle dogs October 1st this season. He will take five of his thoroughbred Wolverines to the meet including the famous old "Bobby Burns" which he expects will as usual bring home considerable credit. Mr. McBain is president of the Association and he says much interest is being manifested in the meet, as he has received letters and inquiries from both eastern and western states from those who expect to be in attendance with their high grade English Beagles. This annual event is always a great drawing card with dog breeders throughout the country.

Next Sunday the great Michigan State Fair opens at Detroit and all indications point to a large attendance from this way. A large number of folks will undoubtedly drive their machines up there. Note on the inside pages of the Advocate this week a comprehensive map of the streets adjacent to Detroit leading to the Fair grounds. Autos driving from this way will pursue the usual route, viz: to Somerset thence on the paved Pike to Michigan Avenue to Dearborn at Telegraph Road where you turn left and go north to Plymouth Road, turn right go east on Plymouth road to Emerson Street, turn left and go north to Six Mile Road, turn right and go east to Woodard Avenue, thence to Grounds. This route takes you out of the heavy traffic and brings you to the gates without trouble. Cut out this map and carry it with you. Telegraph Road crosses Michigan Avenue north and south at Dearborn.

New Fire Engine on The Way

The citizens of this village and adjoining townships after several years of patient waiting, are fully decided that with the advent of good roads, the coming of auto motor traffic, and other improvements which go hand in hand with all live wire communities, it is time the fire protection was looked into. Pursuant to the recent decision of the North Adams Council to purchase a chemical outfit mounted on a six cylinder Reo Speedcar chassis, Mr. Reed of Howell has been out with Councilman Harley Fry getting signers and has met with a flattering reception. The signatures of 120 farmers will be necessary to put the deal across thus giving the village and country-side farmers a splendid fire protection by means of an apparatus built by the Boyer Fire Equipment Co.

The small sum of $25.00 is asked from each signer who recieves service for 25 years, which is pretty cheap insurance we calculate, and at that rate no farmer within ten miles of North Adams can afford to turn down the proposition. Inside of two or three years there wont be a cross road anywhere which will not be passable summer and winter for this powerful truck which can attain a 60 mile clip if necessary.

Practically every man is provided with a telephone and he can send in his alarm and the outfit will be on its way in five minutes

The calamity at the Lake farm ought to be a reminder and we believe it will. The following have signed up to date:

Eli Collins; H. G. Wells: John Quarton; Ora Holcomb: J. Edgar Kempton; J. P. Speer; E. H. Stevens; Lem Roberts; A. L. Foster; Fred Giddings; Albert Pease; Art Smith: Minor Beecher; Giles Stevens; Arthur Stevens; John Haskell; Howard Haskell; H. G. Roberts; L. W. Get the Big Value in the Fence Post Field

STEEL fence posts are no longer all alike. The RED TOP Double Strength Studded Tee has set a new standard. It is a stronger post of longer life, easier and cheaper to set and easier and cheaper to fasten fencing to.

Greater Strength—due to adding more metal in a reinforcing rib (see illustration) and also due to the fact that there isn't a single hole punched in the post either for staples or anchor plate. No rivets required to attach anchor plate. (See illustration.)

Firmer in Ground—the RED TOP Anchor Plate is heavier and stronger than ever.

Longer Service—the new aluminum metallic finish and solid post make it longer lived.

Better looking fences—the aluminum metallic finish gives the post a neat, trim appearance.

Easier, cheaper setting—with the One Man RED TOP Driver one man without a helper can set 200 to 300 posts per day.

More efficient fence fastening—RED TOP Handy Fasteners makes it possible for one man to attach fencing to posts. And fastener holds fencing tighter.

Come in and see this better post. Handle it. Inspect it. See how the new One Man Post Driver works. Don't buy a fence post until you do this.

RARE LIBRARY IS GIVEN UNIVERSITY

The hobby of a lifetime has endowed the University of Michigan with a collection of rare books—a possession that promises to become unique among the great libraries of the world.

Years ago—doubtless he has forgotten precisely when—Dr. Lucius L. Hubbard of Houghton, now a regent of the University, came upon an immortal book and straightway found in it his hero, one Robinson Crusoe, castaway mariner, an object of profound admiration. Out of his own experience, one has little difficulty in imagining the effect of the absorbing tale upon the boy. Young Hubbard lost a perfect summer day when that copy of Robinson Crusoe came into his possession. Shorn of its attraction was the murmuring brook, while the waves of a southern ocean rolled frothing up the sandy shore. Gone, for the time, was the thrill of landing the speckled trout—overshadowed by that tensely dramatic moment when Robinson rounded the rocky headland to find the print of a naked human foot upon the sand.

This is an Age of Realities. Man's performance has so outstripped his imagination that, till progress is halted and the nag Pegassus gets his second wind, there will be little enough to quicken the heartbeat and people the dreams of the rising generation. How piffling the Siege of Troy as Homer sings it— when compared to a Marine's account of the shindy between Leathernecks and Limeys in a waterfront dive at Bordeaux! Macbeth, reeling from Duncan's chamber with the bloody daggers, is a pitiable bungler beside the gangster who earns glory and an 8-column line in the Night Final. Hold the budding intellect, if you can, with tales of Robin Hood and his Merry Men against the rival account of any fourth-rate daylight payroll robbery.

The heroes of Dr. Hubbard's youth have vanquished like wraiths at cockcrow and there are none to take their place. The doughty Templar at tilt or single combat is simply an ass rattling about in pieplates. Leatherstocking speeds his last ball and the painted warriors come closing in with blood-curdling cries. Our youngster yawns and closes the book on the chapter. Tomorrow's "lesson in English" is done, thank Goodness!

State Would Keep Lake County Tract Sought for Dam

The 142-acre tract of land on the Pere Marquette river in Lake county, sought by a power company for a dam, will not get on the market until this fall, according to John Baird, director of conservation.

Shortly more than a month ago the State Consrevation Commission decided to sell the land and ordered it advretised for sale. Baird has found the land must be appraised before it can be offered. The Conservation Commission does not meet until late in August or early in September and the sale will have to be authorized over again.

Baird is laboring in the meantime to work out a plan for making the land into a state park and, if possible, prevent the building of the proposed dams, which would ruin the Pere Marquette for trout fishing.

When the land is offered for sale, the state will be a bidder, unless other interests purchase it meantime.

Street Building In Detroit for Year Sets World Mark

Detroit is now engaged in carrying out the most extensive street paving program any city in the world has ever undertaken. Greatly expanded within the last three years by the annexation of new territory containing 1,190 miles of new streets, Detroit is destined soon to have the finest paved streets in the world. There are now more than 12,000,000 square yards of asphalt gavements in service in the city, of which 3,445,732.82 square yards were constructed in 1925. Of this, 2,300,130.47 square yards were laid by contractors and 1,145,593.35 square yards by the city.

100 ACRE LAKE IN ROUGE IS PLANNED

Mayor John W. Smith, of Detroit, has asked the city engineers to prepare plans for a 100-acre lake in the River Rouge park, to be used for swimming and boating purposes. The mayor stated that he planned to use between 300 and 400 prisoners now confined to the Detroit house of correction in the construction of the lake. He said the facilities of the prison do not permit of their being usefully employed. As labor is the chief cost of such work, the financing of the project is made easy, Mayor Smith stated.

The plan discussed by Mayor Smith calls for the laying off of concrete on the floor of the river, and over the natural bowl of 100 acres. The river would then be dammed on the southly side of the lake.

River Rouge park is one of the largest in the country and plans under way call for at least two and possibly four 18-hole golf courses in it.

Muskegon Town Highway Keeps City Folks Away

Did you ever hear of a community which wanted no good roads, in fact, boasted of its poor highways? It is a strange condition in this day of improved highways, and pleas for more and more miles of good roads from every section of the state. Yet, Michigan has such a community. It is Winnetaska, a resort colony located a few miles from Muskegon on Lake Michigan.

The mayor of this community, mayor by consent at least, is Douglas Malloch, nationally known poet. And it is Mr. Malloch as unofficial mayor of Winnetaska, who stands firmly on a platformr of "no improved highways," and proudly boasts of the condition of the roads.

"Why, of course we are proud of our highways," said Mr. Malloch, who serves as highway commissioner and chief of police as well as mayor. "I am proud of our highways because they are so bad. I really believe that we have the worst highways in Michigan, and I am going to see that they are not improved."

There is a reason why Winnetaska wants no improved highways. It wants no visitors. Country cousins and city friends are not welcome. The latch key is never out. Winnetaska folks want to live in peace and quiet and there is a feeling that unimproved bighways will aid the cause.

Beautiful Hedges Razed in Error for Evil Plant

Many splendid hedges of the Japanese barberry have been destroyed by home owners in the belief that the variety spread rust to our wheat crop. The government has issued a bulletin which states that the harmful common variety can be distinguished from the harmless Japanese as follows:

The harmful common barberry bushes have a tendency to grow erect, have three or more spines or prickers at a leaf base, have saw-toothed edged leaves, and produce berries in bunches like currants. The Japanese or harmless barberry bush is very branchy, has single spines at a leaf base, has smooth-edged leaves, and the berries are single or in pairs. All barberries have a marked yellow inner bark.

State College Host to Grangers Oct. 26-29

Michigan State's college, East Lansing, will be host to more than 500 delegates when the State Grange holds its annual meeting in East Lansing, the first to be staged here in many years, October 26 to 29, it was announced by R. W. Tenny, director of short courses.

Tenny, who is in charge of entertaining the visitors, states that East Lansing homes will be opened to the Grangers during their stay and that the program will be given in the People's church.

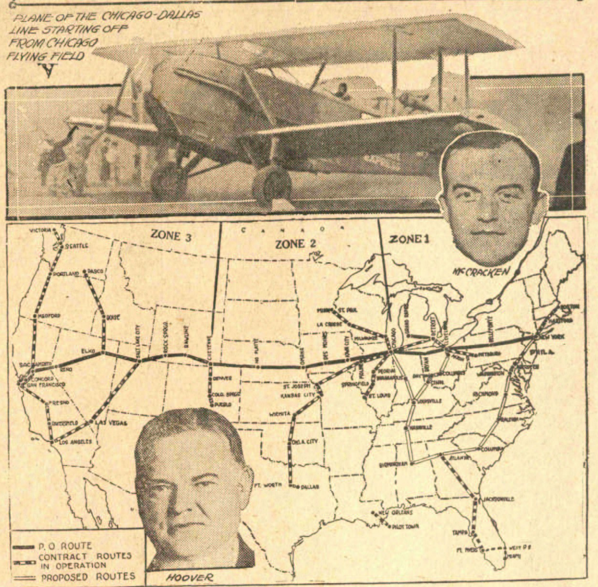
Several prominent state and out-of-state speakers will address the group. A. B. Cook, Owosso, and Mrs. Dora Stockman, East Lansing, are in general charge of arrangements.

$2,005,922 Paid By Ford Co. in City Taxes

Receipt of a check for $2,005,922.46 from the Ford Motor Co. was announced by Robert Smiht, Highland Park city treasurer. The check represents the company's 1926 city tax bill for its Highland Park plant, which is assessed at $197,923,950. This is 10.7 per cent of the whole valuation of the city.

The total tax in Highland Park is $3,583,877.50 and the tax rate is $17 on each $1,000 of assessed valuation.

U. S. Government Stimulates Commercial Aviation



Into Secretary Hoover's plans for spreading a network of airways over the U. S. and "putting wings on the American public" by stimulating commercial aviation will be incorporated some 8,314 miles of aviation routes already being utilized, largely by the air mail service. Plans of the newly created Division of Commercial Aviation established in the Department of Commerce, over which William P. MacCracken, Jr., of Chicago, has charge, contemplates 1,431 additional miles of airways, which are indicated by the light parallel lines in the accompanying map.

Witnesses Being Rounded Up For Great Lakes Trial

The Great Lakes Harbor Association is rounding up witnesses to appear before Charles E. Hughes, special commissioner named by the United States Supreme Court to take testimony in the suit brought to enjoin Chicago from taking water from Lake Michigan through its drainage canal. It is expected 60 witnesses will be summoned by states bringing the suit.

Plans for the suit were made at the recent meeting of the Great Lakes Harbor Association, held at Milwaukee. Testimony will be taken about the middle of October. Newton D. Baker of Cleveland, former Secretary of War, will head the counsel for the Great Lakes interests.

Plans were made also at the Milwaukee meeting for development of the Great Lakes as a means of transportation. Committees were named to study the question. One committee will have charge of the movement for municipal docks; another will arrange for a clearing house to aid ship owners in obtaining business.

Cold Spring Hits State Lamb Crop; More Ewes Bred

A recent survey indicates tha tthe Michigan lamb crop this year is about 788,000 as compared with 764,000 last year, or a gain of only 24,000. The spring was cold and backward and the number of lambs saved per hundred ewes was four less than last year, the respective numbers being 95.5 and 99.5. The number of breeding ewes on Jan. 1 was estimated at 825,000, an increase of 57,000 over 1925. The increase in lambs would have been in about the same proportion had the spring been as favorable as the previous one.

Editor Exhausted By Swim From Wreck, Dies

Stuart Pratt Sherman, 45 years old, literary editor of the New York Herald-Tribune, died at Dunewood resort, five miles north of Manistee, of heart disease, following an exhaustive swim to reach land after his canoe turned over in Lake Michigan. His heart failed just as he neared the shore. Friends saw him sink and pulled him out of the water in less than a minute, but attempts to rescsuiate him failed. Mrs. Sherman, also in the canoe, swam safely to shore.

Nature Turns Father Into Cannibal To Curb Bass

The plug curved over the water, alighting with a slight splash. As the sunburned angler reeled it in, his nerves were a-tingle, his muscles set for the quick, smashing strike of a bass. But there was no strike. The angler, tired and hot and considerably annoyed by the midgets that swarmed about his head, cussed to himself with the air of a man who accepts the inevitability of a fishless supper.

"For two hours I've been doing this, but nary a bass. They're altogether too scarce. Why are bass so scarce and other fish so common?"

This is a logical question, one that the Michigan angler often ponders. There are big schools of perch and sunfish lying below the surface of the lake, swarms of bluegills, thousands of wall-eyes and what not, and all are comparatively abundant, but bass are few. Why?

The answer is that Nature ordains that bass never become too plentiful, otherwise all fish-life would suffer, the perch and sunfish would melt away, the wall-eyes would disappear, the bluegills would not survive to suck the hook into their small mouths. These fish in time would be overwhelmed, would face extinction before the onslaught of the bronzed-backed warrior.

Nature, ever wise, has made the bass a curious paradox, a leveler of his own species. The process is most interesting. The male is suddenly transformed from a devoted father to a cannibal destroyer of his young, whom he slaughters with the ferocity of a tiger, after guarding them with his life. This is rather a roundabout means to an end, but Nature accepts it as more efficacious than curtailing the number of eggs laid by the female.

The male guards the eggs in their nest and watches them develop into baby fish with all the fondness of an ideal parent. Let a carp or a water snake approach and the father immediately fulfills his trust. A model of parental devotion is the male bass, poised over the nest and ready to sally forth at the first enemy that menaces his off-pring.

But after the baby bass have grown an inch or so in length, a dreadful surprise awaits them. The devoted parent suddenly becomes a fearful enemy, and darts down into the nest to gulp down all the young he can. He slashes and tears them with his sharp teeth, he pursues them into their hiding places. He tries to kill and eat all. Only a few of the baby bass, guarded so carefully and then betrayed so suddenly, escape to grow to maturity.

Nature knows that the bass, as a species, must be kept down. So she entrusts the job to the bass themselves, who readily eat each other, as well as the young.

Fire Blight Spreads Where Bloom Heaviest

Fire blight in apple and pear orchards this season is the worst in recent years, causing pomologists at the Graham Horticultural Experiment Station at Grand Rapids to feel that there is some definite relationship between the percentage of bloom in the spring and the prevalence of the blight in midseason.

The worst infections are in orchards which bloome dheavily last spring. Blocks that did not bloom have little or no tip blight.

Spread of the disease is attributed to insects which carry germs from infected blossoms to other trees as they gather honey.

Man Beheaded When Gas Tank Explodes

Ellis Mosier, 38, married, Drummond's island, was instantly killed at his refreshment stand on the Dixie highway, near Saginaw, when a gasoline pressure tank burst while he was increasing its pressure by use of a garage air line. The top of the tank blew out, practically beheading him.

"HELL-DIVER" IS AS FAST AS SHOT

The boy crept to the edge of the pond. Peering through the rustling grass, he made out the figure of a small, brownish duck-like bird swimming at the edge of the lily pads. He cocked the old double-barreled hammer gun—aimed until the sights wabbled upon the slowly moving target. Then he fired.

But the shot spattered futilely upon the surface of the pond, for the bird had dived the merest fraction of a second after the youthful finger had pulled the trigger. The boy could not believe his eyes when the powder smoke rolled away. He saw the procession of bubbles kicked up by the charge, the lily pads torn by stray pellets, and a king-fisher rapidly quitting the vicinity, but no sign of the brownish bird.

Many a Michigan sportsman has experienced in his boyhood such an introduction to the common "hell-diver" or pied-billed grebe, perhaps the most adept diver of all our water fowl. The grebe slips under water as if he were greased, sometimes so quickly as to dodge the charge of shot after it has left the barrel of a gun. This faculty of diving with the rapidity of lightning has cloaked him with a mysticism, and made him the fit companion of spooks and spirits, as indicated by the colloquial name of "water witch." He is exactly that.

The grebe is a poor flyer. He must spatter along the water a hundred feet or so, using his feet and small wings as propulsive agencies, before he can take off. On land he can not walk, because his feet are attached to the end of his body, and he is unable to preserve an equillibrium. But in the water he is unsurpassed and our quickest and most graceful diver.

Change in Lakes' Bank Brings Suit to Clear Title

Because two lakes have taken the place of one large lake, due to the recession of water, Abraham Swen and wife have filed suit in Grand Rapids circuit court against Robert McLaughlin, Milo A. Boynton, David Salyer and Bertie Salyer to clear title to land adjoining the water. Scram and Angel lakes now lie in the bed of what was one lake when the government survey of 1837 was made and dispute has arisen as to who is the rightful owner of land adjoining these lakes which was covered by water during the survey 90 years ago.

U. S. Warden Reports Game Now On Increase

H. P. Sheldon, the newly appointed Federal game warden, states that an understanding of the present game situation does not warrant a pessimistic outlook. He says:

"Never before have the sportsmen and conservationists of America been so strongly and effectively organized; never before have the official agencies of conservation found such large sums of money atr their disposal for advancing their work, and never before have we seen game and fish laws and regulations more generally supported by public approval than at the present time. A glance at the game registers proves that the destruction of game that went on throughout the century just past has now been solidly checked, and that most species, particularly the migratory birds, are actually increasing."

STATE'S SCHOOLS TEACHING SAFETY

When schools open this Fall a brand new course will be given every student in the state of Michigan—that of public safety. The Detroit Police Department, the Michigan State Police and the Detroit Automobile Club will combine their efforts this year to reach every student and every parent with safety messages.

Such a programme was announced following a meeting attended by Michigan Commissioner of Public Sawety Alan Straight, Captain J. C. Scavarda of the state police, Gustava C. Schinck, Detroit police inspector of traffic; Judge MacKay Skillman of Recorder's Court, Charles T. Bush, president of the automobile club, and George Walters, sheriff of Wayne County.

The following officers of the state police also attended the meeting to make plans for the Fall educational campaign; Lieut. Walter T. Anderson, Flint; Lieut. Ova Jackson, South Rockwood; Lieut. A. W. Eaton, Wayne; Lieut. C. E. Memaray, Paw Paw; Lieut. J. C. Cleghorn, St. Clair; Sergt. James Fredickson, Lansing; Sergt. William Hanson, Jackson, and 20 members of the force.

Son of Anti-Saloon Head Drowns in Lake Michigan

John McBride, 19 years old, son of F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, was drowned while swimming in Lake Michigan near Little Point, Au Sable resort.

The body was found about on hour after the boy disappeared, but attempts to resuscitate him proved unavailing.

He is survived by his fahter and mother and two sisters, Christiana and Geralda. The family home is at Westerville, O., national headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League of America.

Work Begun On Road Along Lake Michigan

Work on the construction of county highway No. 20, the scenic drive which is to extend from Muskegon to Whitehall, along the Lake Michigan shore, has been started, following the receipt of $388,000 of bond money by the Muskegon county road commissioners.

The highway will be slightly more than 10 miles long and 20 feet wide, running through sections which are now trackless. It will run over one of the highest sand dunes in the vicinity of Muskegon, rising to a point 285 feet above the lake, and will be built on the beach for a distance of half a mile.

Too many men sit down in easy chairs and close their eyes when they are looking for opportunities.

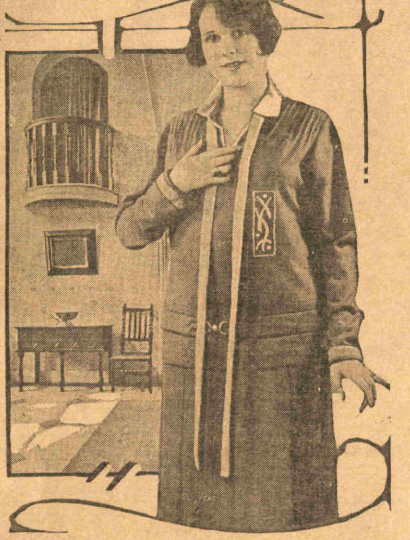
FETCHING FROCKS FOR AUTUMN; COATS OF STRAIGHTLINE STYLING

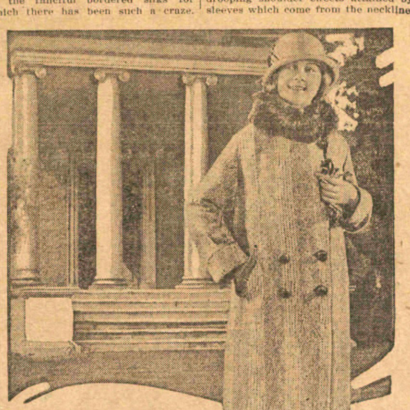
THANKS to Madame Mode autumn days will not find us lacking in ideal frocks for wear in cool crispy weather. One has but to glimpse the new fashions which especially feature an array of fetching woolen frocks, to feel assured that not only are we to be most becomingly attired but also these simple, colorful gowns will be most timely for practical daytime occasion.

These naive dress types, for which a widespread vogue is already bespoken, are styled for the most part of soft flannel or fine jersey in colors so delectable they are enough to coax anyone into the buying. Nothing prettier than the new wine shades can be conceived of, and therefore, small wonder is it that these glorious red shades are decidedly in the lead for fall. The new leaf shades are fascinating, too, and they include every splendid tone of green and brown which foliage displays and then there are the varied blues to think of from navy to soft pastel shades and one should keep in mind also that rust colorings are very smart.



Has Hallmark of Simplicity

Interesting from a color standpoint plus extreme novelty are the handsomely bordered flannels, which perhaps are inspired by the remembrance of the fanciful bordered silks for which there has been such a craze.



Coat on Newer Style Lines.

Then, too, stylists are taking great delight in contrasting one color with a bordering of another. This idea works out beautifully in the new dress flannels and a goodly number of dresses reveal collars, cuffs, belts and facings of the same fabric in a different color.

The chic and charm of these flannel or jersey frocks, if you prefer, for jersey is considered equally as smart, is in adhering strictly to a policy of simplicity when it comes to the making thereof. Any detail which tends to give a youthful appearance is approved. In the matter of neckline, turn-back collars are often employed and most every dress has a cunning belt of some kind. Skirt fulness is achieved by a discreet use of plaits at front or sides. A touch of embroidery sometimes enlivens the model, somewhat after the manner of the insignia worked on the blouse of the two-piece dress in the picture.

Other interesting detailing of these destined-to-be-popular woolen frocks stresses the bolero theme, the wide armhole, also tiers and scallops for skirts.

As to the coats we will wear this fall and winter, the advance models bring promise of color, gay and handsome. Stylists are pleased to refer to the newer tones and tints as foliage shades. These wondrous reds, golden yellows, winsome greens and burnished browns measure up in beauty to the coloring which nature gives to the trees of the forest at autumn time.

Nor are the colors themselves more interesting than the cunning with which they are wrought into novel patternings of plaids, stripes, checks, and other diverse designs. An outstanding number on the new color program is that of the two-toned effects. For instance, a burgundy red soft fabric has checks in the same color but in lighter vein, while a bottle green presents a patterning in just a tint of green. Blendings of blue are particularly effective and are sure to find favor with most of us. Two shades of blue, one in royal tone, the other a softer hue, are blended on a white woolen rough-surfaced weave presenting a patterning of wavy lines.

Other items which foretell the mode's trend include the fact of straightline styling for practical coats, also the slenderizing influence of drooping shoulder effects attained by sleeves which come from the neckline. In the dressier models we may look for a new silhouette which features wide armholes and bloused-back effects. But for the strictly utility coat of youthful mien, models of luxurious and colorful woolens cut to eliminate superfluous fulness are the idea correct. The handsome coat in the picture qualifies as a winning number among the newer styles. Note that it has a fur collar, for fur-trims are an assured fact for the coming season.

FISHER DESIGN SETS THE PACE

The pace set by Fisher—and exemplified in the beautiful new General Motors cars now commanding public attention—is the guide for the entire motor industry.

Fisher's vast experience, Fisher inventiveness and Fisher's unapproached facilities devise and perfect the beauties, comforts and conveniences which attract you to the leading new cars in all price classes—Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile and Pontiac.

For instance, Fisher achieves a new degree of safety—and nothing less than a Body by Fisher can approach it even after seasons of striving.

Fisher leads the way in luxurious fitments and decorations—and all the industry follows.

Fisher creates new standards of beauty in line and finish—and those standards are the measure of value for all of the world's cars.

It is easy to see, therefore, why the foremost of the new cars in all price classes carry the emblem—Body by Fisher.

And easy to understand why buyers the world over proclaim as the hallmark of quality that same magic symbol—Body by Fisher.

Chancery Slow to Let Go of Money

Some of the accounts in chancery in England date back to 1720, and many of them are earlier than 1800—a point of some importance to claimants. If a balance is about a century old, 100 people may be entitled to a share of it, and the cost of recovering it may be more than it is worth. For this reason a certain account of $15,000 odd will never be claimed. The persons entitled to it are well aware of its existence; but to make chancery disgorge it would cost more than the sum involved. Another account will also remain on the books forever. It is worth exactly tenpence (20 cents), but there are more than 200 exceeding $5,000 each.

Many accounts are survivals of annuities. A gentleman leaves an annuity to somebody, and his trustees place in chancery the capital sum necessary to secure it. When, some thirty or forty years later, the annuitant dies, everybody else connected with the case is also dead, and it has been completely forgotten.

Dog Hospital New Idea in England

Four young women who are studying the care and cure of sick dogs at an animal hospital at Totteridge, Herts, England, intend, when they have completed their training, to take up work in various parts of the country as "district nurses" for dogs.

In their course of practical studies at the institution, which contains 300 kennels, they have discovered there are many dog lovers who do not understand how to manage their pets in times of illness.

According to the pioneer of the new profession, dog lovers with pets of comparatively small monetary value will, for reasons of affection, gladly pay as much as $25 for their treatment; and many people who for various reasons may be unable or unwilling to send their sick animals to "hospital" will probably be glad to avail themselves of the services of these "district nurses."

Mycosis Kills Penguins

Has Several Broods

There is no native bird which attempts to equal the mourning dove in domestic accomplishments, says Nature Magazine. Its breeding season extends from early May until late September, and, if fate is lenient with the frail establishment of the bird, three or four broods may be raised to maturity with scarcely a pause between each family.

Foreign Dishes Bring Added Zest to Dinner

By MRS. WM. C. POST

Mrs. Wm. Post.

Height of my culinary ambition always has been to make dinner each day a gastronomic poem, rounded and perfect like a stately rime. A meal that pleases eyes, nose and palate alike!

A well-turned dinner is like a pretty woman in that it unlocks men's hearts with a magical key.

Exotic dishes give a tang of other lands to the dinner table. Things foreign awaken the romantic sense. Taste of codfish a la Benedictine transports one for the minute to the Montmarte in gay Paris, a dash of Piroski and we are supping in a quaint cafe on the Nevsky Prospekt in Leningrad, while the crunch of English tea cakes may bring visions of the rolling moors of Sussex.

As an aid to the housewife in carrying out this new and fascinating idea in cooking, the following of my recipes may prove of particular interest:

Italian Polenta.

8 cups hot-cooked rice or mush	1½ tbsp. butter or olive oil

Beat the butter into the mush while hot. Turn onto a hot serving plate and pour over the following cheese sauce:

Cheese Sauce.

2 tbsp. fat	½ cup evaporated milk diluted with
2 tbsp. flour
¼ tsp. salt
Dash pepper	½ cup meat stock
	¼ cup grated cheese

Melt the fat, add the flour, salt and pepper, and stir until the mass is smooth. Add the diluted milk and cook in a double boiler. Stir occasionally to keep smooth. Add grated cheese to the hot sauce and stir until melted or about three minutes.

Buffeten Kuchen.

1½ cups sugar	2¼ cups flour
¼ cup butter	4 tsp. baking powder
3 eggs, separated
1-3 cup evaporated milk diluted with	Grated rind of 1 lemon
	Chopped or sliced almonds
2-3 cup water

Cream butter and sugar, add yolks of eggs and the lemon rind, stirring constantly. Mix flour and baking powder, add to the butter mixture, alternately with the milk and lastly stir in the stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Place in well-greased shallow coffee cake tins, sprinkle with granulated sugar, cinnamon and a few almonds, sliced fine or chopped. Bake in a moderate oven.

AUGUSTINIANS TAKE OVER FLINT CATHOLIC CHURCH

DETROIT, Mich.,—The Augustinian Fathers from this city have been placed in charge of St. Matthew's Church, Flint, Mich., by the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of Detroit. St. Matthew's has been without a regularly appointed pastor for a month, the position having been vacated by the Rev. Fr. F. W. McQueen who is now pastor of St. Vincent's Church, Detroit.

The pastor of the new Augustinian charge has not yet been named. Temporarily St. Matthew's will be cared for by Augustinian Fathers from Detroit, of whom the Rev. Fr. James A. McDonald, O. S. A., is superior.

Peace, Goodwill

Columbia, Peace and the Spirit of Brotherly love have been joined in one person, a beautiful woman. This young lady was one of the central figures in a pageant staged at the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia, celebrating 150 years of American Independence. Road Guide To State Fair

The above map shows how Michigan trunk line roads come into the Detroit area, and how to reach the State Fair grounds without entering the city's heavy traffic districts. By crossing the Six or Seven-Mile Road to Woodward Avenue, motorists, coming from any direction can reach the grounds easily without going "down town" at all. (Map drawn by State Highway Department.)

SPECIAL DAYS MARK STATE FAIR PROGRAM

Special days, on each of which added attention will be given to the groups honored on that day, have been designated for the State Fair.

All of the entertainment and educational program of the big exposition will, of course, run right through the week, but extra features will be planned for the special days.

Monday, September 6, is to be Labor Day; Tuesday, Children's Day; Wednesday, Fraternal Day; Thursday, Farmers' Day; Friday, Detroit Day, and Saturday, Automobile Day.

Big time horse races are booked for afternoons from Monday through Friday, with brilliant A. A. A. automobile racing on Saturday afternoon, September 11, the last day of the Fair.

LESLIE CHURCH HOLDS ANNUAL PICNIC AND DINNER

BUNKER HILL, Mich., — The twenty-ninth annual picnic of SS. Cornelius and Cyprian's Church was planned at Bunker Hill, near Leslie, Mich., for early in August.

Last year the picnic was honored by the presence of the Right Rev. Joseph C. Plagens, D. D., auxiliary Bishop of Detroit and 20 Priests. This year Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck was to be present and speak, following the monster chicken-pie dinner.

A band concert and a ball game between Leslie and Stockbridge were planned to entertain the picnickers. The Rev. Fr. John M. Duffy is pastor of SS. Cornelius and Cyprian's. The picnic grounds are 14 miles north of Jackson, on the Jackson-Williamston-Owosso highway.

One Hundred Years Of Progress

Just a century has been required to bring prohibition into the federal constitution and forward into the way of enforcement, according to a historical statement made by Boyd P. Doty, general counsel of the World League Against Alcoholism.

The adoption of prohibition nationally was the inevitable result of nearly one hundred years of discussing, temporizing and experimenting with the liquor traffic and trying out every method proposed either by its friends or foes. Prohibition—local, state and national came finally as the only alternative.

The following chronological outline shows just how fast, how slow and how long—prohibition has been developing as the ideal and purpose of the nation in best meeting the evils of intoxicating liquor.

1826—January—Lyman Beecher declared that the "National remedy for intemperance" was "the banishment of ardent spirits from the list of lawful articles of commerce, etc."

1826—February 13—American Temperance Society organized at Boston, followed by many other organizations springing up in widely separated parts of the country.

1833—First National Temperance Convention—Philadelphia.

1834—Congress prohibits introduction of sale of spirituous liquor and wine in the Indian Country.

1836—Second National Temperance Convention—Saratoga, N. Y.

1838—Tennessee repeals license laws and prohibits retail of liquors.

1846—Maine adopted first statewide prohibition law.

1846—1860—Various states dopted local option and fourteen states adopted prohibition laws.

1852—Massachusetts adopted prohibition.

1855—Eight states adopted prohibition—Delaware, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, New Hampshire, Wisconsin and New York.

1860-1870—Prohibition wave receded, leaving only few dry states.

1873—Woman's Crusade, starting Hillsboro, Ohio, spread to many states.

1874—Woman's Christian Temperance Union launched.

1876—December 27-First prohibition amendment to federal constitution presented by Congressman Blair, New Hampshire.

1882 - 1902 — Crusade for and adoption of state and federal laws requiring scientific temperance instruction in public schools.

1885—Second prohibitory amendment resolution presented by Senators Blair of New Hampshire and Plumb of Kansas.

1886—Congress enacted law requiring that instruction concerning the effects of alcoholic liquors shall be given in all schools and academies under federal control.

1888—Ohio adopted township local option.

1890—Secretary of War declared that no ardent spirits or wine should be sold in the canteens.

1890—Congress passed "Wilson Law" subjecting all intoxicating liquors to laws of state into which shipped.

1891—Congress prohibited sale of liquor within one mile of Soldiers' Home in Washington City.

1893—Local option revived and given greater impetus by lauching of non-partisan, inter-denominational Anti-Saloon League movement at Oberlin, Ohio.

1893—Only six dry states in the Union. Four of these later repealed their prohibition laws, leaving Kansas and Maine as the only state outposts of prohibition.

1893-1913—Twenty long, hard fighting years—the two dry states increased to nine and in thirty other states 25 percent to 90 percent of population were under prohibition.

1899—John D. Long, secretary of navy, abolished traffic in beer and other alcoholic liquors on board ships and at Naval stations.

1901—Anti-canteen law passed by Congress—abolished sale of beer, wine or any intoxicating liquors in any Post exchange, canteen or army transport or upon any premises used for military purposes

1902—Congress prohibited Americans from selling intoxicants to natives of Pacific Islands.

1903-Recreation buildings and saloon substitues provided for army posts.

1903-Sale of liquors in immigrant stations prohibited.

1903-Saloon in basement of National Capitol building abolished.

1904-Beer halls in state and territorial soldiers' Home prohibited.

1906-Congress strengthened Internal revenue measure calculated to assist state prosecutions of law breakers.

1906-Oklahoma statehood bill passed by Congress prohibited liquor traffic in Indian territory for 21 years.

1906-Liquor traffic among Indian suppressed.

1907-Prohibition zones established around government institutions.

1908-Liquor barred from United States mails.

1909-Congress passed C. O. D. liquor shipment measure to protect dry territory.

1909-Anti liquor code for Alaska

1912-People elected one-third of the United States senate which submitted the 18th Amendment to the states. (Note; One-third elected 1914 and one-third in 1916. 5 months to four years before America declared war against Central powers.)

1913-Webb-Kenyon interstate liquor shipment law passed and repassed over presidential veto.

Champions Meet At Dairy Exposition

Winners of the Boys' and Girls' Clubs' events at the State Fair will comprise teams to represent Michigan at the National Dairy Exposition to be held at Detroit October 6 to 13.

Dairy cattle judging and dairy demonstration teams will be picked; club cattle exhibits will be chosen. The winners will compete with club teams from twenty five states in an endeavor to bring the premier dairy honors of the year to Michigan.

The Boys' and Girls' 4-H Club department is a prominent part of the National Dairy Exposition. Last year, 315 club members were entered in this national, competitive event. Twenty three states were represented.

The club showmen's contest is an added feature for this year's program. It is open to all club members who have not shown animals in open classes.

Keep Dust And Snow Off Roads

Under the direction of Governor Groesbeck the State Highway Department since the state has assumed control of the maintenance of trunk line roads has been using thousands of barrels of calcium chloride in an effort to keep down the dust nuisance on roads that are not hard surfaced. The appropriation made for this purpose was not sufficient to place every gravel road in the state in a dustless condition but on the highways where the travel is the heaviest automobile users are no longer forced to ride in the great clouds of dust that formerly hung over the roads.

Not only has the Governor directed that the gravel roads be kept in as dustless a condition as possible during the summer, but last winter the state for the first time inaugurated a snow removal system for many of its main trunk lines. Thousands of motorists in Northern Michigan used their cars during the entire winter for the first time.

It is the plan of the Governor and Highway Department to increase the number of miles of roads to be kept free of snow during the coming winter, as the plan met with such general approval last winter.

The Curse of Forest Fires

Forest fires often destroy the forest soil so trees cannot be grown on burned-over areas for hundreds of years. Forest fires exterminate wild life including the birds. Birds are of vital importance to successful agriculture. Forest fires cause springs, brooks and rivers to dry up thus killing all fish and game. The forest is the chief source of pure drinking water and water for the dairy and agricultural land. The forest is part of the National defense.

For all these reasons the forest should receive even better protection than the structures erected by the hand of man. It is important to each person that this national resource be relieved from the terrible annual devastation caused by human carelessness. It would cost 300 million dollars and require 300 years at our present rate of planting to reforest the area burned over in 1924.

Chicken-mites may be eradicated by a few thorough applications of kerosene or some of the coal-tar products sold for this purpose, or crude petroleum, to the interior of the poultry house, including the floor, taking care to get the material into the cracks.

If a new growth of sprout hardwood timber is desired to replace that being removed, it is advisable to cut the trees during the winter or very early spring, as stumps of trees felled during those periods sprout best. Sprouting is most vigorous from low stumps. Sprout regeneration is especially applicable to young hardwood stands, particularly those to be cut over every 20 to 30 years for posts or fuel. The majority of hardwoods do not sprout vigorously beyond 60 years of age. Basswood and chestnut are exceptions, since as a rule they sprout well from healthy stumps up to 100 years of age.

The prevailing idea that it is necessary to remove food products from cans as soon as they are opened is erroneous. For a reasonable period incident to its utilization it would be safer to allow the food to remain in the can. Transferring to another receptable only adds to the danger of contamination.

MANY TONGUES HEARD IN CATHOLIC CHURCHES

Evidences of "Melting Pot" Effect Are Seen in Michigan Worshipers

At least 15 languages are used in the Roman Catholic churches of Michigan, according to statistics recently compiled from official investigation. Owing to its large foreign-born population, Detroit has a large number of churches attended by people to whom English is the adopted language and many other communities throughout the state provide for the spiritual needs of foreign language groups.

The earliest Catholic churches in Detroit were French. This was true, also, in many of the settlements of the southern part of the state. Then came the so-called Irish parishes, where English was the language used. Later there were established many German, Polish and Belgian parishes. In Detroit alone there are today 22 churches where Polish is the language of a majority of the parishioners.

However, in every Catholic church in the state, with the exception of three, services are carried on in exactly the same manner and language, the Latin of the Roman Ritual. Latin is the language of the Mass and other ceremonials, whether the worshipers be Americans, English, Irish, Mexican, Poles, Hungarians, Belgians or Maltese.

The three exceptions to this rule are found in Detroit, in the two Syrian churches, of the Melchite and Maronite rites, and in the Roumanian Greek Catholic church. In the Melchite rite, Greek is the liturgical language and Syrian is used in the services in the Maronite church. The ancient Roumanian is the language used in the Roumanian Greek church. In all three of these churches, however, irrespective of language, the order of services follows the Byzantine rite, a ritual as old as the Catholic Church itself.

Some of the nations represented among Michigan's Catholic churches are: Poland, Lithuania, Italy, Hungary, Croatia, Solvenia, Slovakia, Roumania, Bohemia, Syria, Mexico, Belgium, Malta, France and Germany.

TWENTY-SEVEN ENTER MONROE SISTERHOOD

Girls From Many Parts of State Give Lives to Religion

Twenty-seven young women participated in a profession and reception in the Order of the Sisters Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, presided over by the Right Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D.D., Bishop of Detroit, at Monroe, recently.

Seventeen postulants who had completed their six months' probation were invested as novices with the habit of the order. Ten novices made vows for three years at the close of their two years of noviate. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Fr. Joseph Downey, of Saratoga Springs, N.Y. About 50 members of the clergy and a large number of friends and relatives were present at the exercises.

The following young women were received into the Sisterhood: Miss Margaret Follansbee, of Redford, to be known as Sister M. Consolata; Anna White, as Sister M. Baptista; Josephine Papineau, as Sister M. Alexis; Cecelia Keating, as Sister M. Terese; Eleanor Schofield, as Sister M. Collette; Gertrude Rowe, as Sister Marie Philip; Aileen Genroe, as Sister M. Celine; Dorothy McDonald, as Sister M. Reginald, all of Detroit; Mary Frances Murry, Jackson, as Sister M. Manuela; Dorothy Griffing, Detroit, as Sister M. Justine; Ethel Chester, River Rouge, as Sister M. Aquinas; Gertrude Rossell, Wayne, as Sister M. Sebastian; Louise Dumas, Suttons Bay, as Sister M. Jovita; Nellie Kane, as Sister M. Leola; Cecelia Schnore, as Sister Alice Marie, both of Lorain, Ohio; Catherine Tomes, Redford, as Sister M. Dolorita; Dorothy Brady, Coldwater, as Sister M. Ann Raphael.

Three nuns, refugees from Mexico, have arrived at the Carmelite convent in Grand Rapids. They are Sisters Clementine Negrete, Mercedes Ornelas and Caran Molfe. They traveled by boat from Tampico to New Orleans and proceeded by rail to Grand Rapids where a convent was established in 1916 by Mexican Sisters.

The Most Rev. George Matulevicius, Archbishop of Kaunas, and former Apostolic Visitor to Lithuania, the ranking dignitary of the Roman Catholic Church in that country, was a visitor to Michigan recently. The visiting prelate came to this country to attend the recent Eucharistic Congress and has been inspecting Lithuanian settlements in various parts of the United States since its close. While in Detroit he was the guest of St. George's Lithuanian Church.

PRIMARY ELECTION

Notice is hereby given that a General Primary Election will be held in the Township of Adams, County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, at Town Hall North Adams Within said Township, on Tuesday September 14 A. D. 1926.

For the purpose of placing in nomination by all political parties participating therein, candidates for the following offices, viz.:

State—One candidate for Governor: one candidate for Lieutenant Governor.

Congressional—One candidate for Representative in Congress for the Congressional district of which said Township forms a part.

Legislative—One candidate for Senator in the State Legislature for the Senatorial District of which said Township forms a part: one candidate for Representative in the State Legislature for the Legislative district of which said Township forms a part.

County—Also candidates for the following county offices, viz.: Sheriff, County Clerk, County Treasurer, Register of Deeds, Prosecuting Attorney; County Auditor; Circuit Court Commissioner; One County Drain Commissioner: One Surveyor; Two Coroners; County Road Commissioner.

DELEGATES TO COUNTY CONVENTIONS

There shall also be elected at said primary, by direct vote of the registered and qualified voters of each political party in each county as many delegates in each township, ward or precinct, as the case may be, as such political party in such township, ward or precinct shall be entitled to by the call issued by the county committee of such political party for the county convention thereafter to be held by such political party within said county in that year for the purpose of electing delegates to the state convention called for the purpose of nominating candidates for state offices, to be voted for at the November election. In case of any vacancy in any delegation from any election precinct, township or ward to the county convention, such vacancy shall be filled by the delegates present from the ward or or township in which the vacancy occurs.

The state central committee of each political party shall, at least thirty days before the September primary herein provided for, cause to be forwarded by mail to the chairman of the county committee of such party a copy of the call for the Fall state convention showing the number of delegates to which such county shall be entitled in the state convention of such party; and the said state central committee shall apportion such delegates to the several counties in proportion and according to the number of votes cast for the candidate of such party for secretary of state in each of said counties, respectively, at the last preceding November election.

The name of the candidate for delegate to the county convention shall not be printed upon the official primary election ballot, but one or more such names may be placed on such ballot by printed or written slips pasted thereon by the voter, or the names may be written in by the voter.

Delegates to the Fall county convention shall be elected by election precincts and the county clerk shall notify by mail each person elected as such delegate.

The required number of electors to receive the highest number of votes for delegates to the Fall county convention of any political party shall be declared by the board of primary election inspectors to be elected.

The board of primary election inspectors shall certify to the county clerk the names of the electors so elected, as delegates, naming the political party upon whose ballots such electors were elected. The county clerk shall notify each delegate so elected of his election as such delegate, and shall certify to the chairman of the county committee of each political party of the county, the delegates elected by such political party as delegates to the fall county convention.

SUGGESTIONS RELATIVE TO VOTING

Separate Ballots for each political party will be provided. The elector must name the political party of his choice when asking for a ballot and in marking his ballot must make a cross in the square to the left of the name of each candidate for whom he desires to vote and can vote for only one candidate except where two or more candidates are to be nominated in which case he should vote for two or the number to be nominated.

The Polls of said election will be open at 7:00 a. m. and will remain open until 5:00 o'clock p. m. of said day of election, unless the Board of Election Inspectors shall in their discretion, adjourn the Polls at 12 o'clock, noon for one hour.

Dated July 17, A. D. 1926.

Vast Crowds Jam Streets To See Michigan Theatre

Not since the visit of Charlie Chaplin a few years ago has down town Detroit witnessed such enormous crowds as thronged to the opening performances of the new Michigan Theatre. The theatre, a $6,000,000 edifice that combines its glories with art and music, is the world's most outstanding theatre, surpassing any that has ever been built in the world. It is operated by the John H. Kunsky Enterprises of Detroit, and Balaban & Katz of Chicago.

The opening program consisted of a feature picture, a 20 minute concert by the 50 piece symphony orchestra; a stage production of operatic gems featuring four famous Chicago and New York opera stars; a stage production featuring stars from Zeigfeld Follies, musical comedies and vaudeville. The huge pipe organ is the first in the world to equal a 200 piece orchestra.

Quite An Early Paper

Postmaster O. J. Fowle of Moscow takes considerable pride in exhibiting to the public some old documents which have been handed down in the Fowle family from the earliest territorial history of Michigan. Mr. Fowle's grand father Benjamin Fowle was one of the early settlers of Adams township which included Moscow in the 30's In 1831 Michigan Territory included Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and most of the Dakotas. So it will be seen that the job of ruling several hundred thousand Red Indians of the Winnebagos, Miamis, Pottawottamies, Hurons and Ojibways together with the hodge podge of white population which had emigrated from the eastern colonies was not as easy as one might suspect.

General Lewis Cass appointed by President Jackson had been Governor of Michigan since the days of General Hull's disgraceful surrender of Detroit, and was called to the President's cabinet at Washington thereby resigning his governorship. John T. Mason of Virginia, an intelligent and esteemed gentleman of the old school was appointed to the office. Mr. Mason had a son Stevens T. Mason and the father feeling his services were needed elsewhere resigned and turned the governorship over to his son. What a dissension this created few can realize. The city of Detroit contained many older and wiser heads in politics who aspired to the office and to have a mere stripling hoisted over their heads bodily stirred up a real rumpus. They criticised the President they ridiculed John T. Mason and altogether the days were made miserable for young Mason who at the time was only 19 years of age. Think of it! A mere boy in such a position of responsibility! But "Old Hickory" was firm as of yore, and the appointment stood. O. J. Fowle has the original certificate of appointment from Governor Stevens T. Mason to his grand father Benjamin Fowle, for paymaster in the militia of the district, also another document from Governor Mason appointing Mr. Fowle justice of peace dated February 15, 1835. The first certificate was dated August 6th, 1835. Thus it will be seen the Fowles have played an important part in Moscow's history when the red man and the deer roamed the wilds.

The Return of "Trudy" Ederle

Under no conditions would we belittle the accomplishments of Gertrude Ederle the dauntless American Miss who swam the English Channel—she sure is a typical western girl and her make-up is ninety percent pure grit—like all American girls, but we do believe that staid old New York rather overdid herself upon the landing of this athletic young Amazon. While we read occasionally of the triumphant return of the Conquering Heroes of the Trogan wars, how they feasted and dined—how all kinds of dark age entertainments were pulled off in their honor, usually winding up with a wholesale murder of captured prisoners who generally were dragged home at the tail of chariots—and other polite and interesting doings of the time, it seems a little late in history to begin this over again. Unless the New York reports lie like a witness in a horse stealing case, somebody made a genuine fool of themselves and you bet it wasn't "Trudy". She took all the hot air and bluff good naturedly as is a habit with phlegmatic German races, smiled and said "Thank You." Her time in swimming the Channel was 14 hours and 31 minutes, and please bear in mind she is the first female to complete the task. Hundreds have tried but failed. Strong strapping men have essayed to do it and gave out when half across. It remained for this dapper little American girl of German descent to do the trick—and we might say she is not the first American who has trimmed the British Lion's whiskers. Gertrude has a long prosperous life before her and it is hoped she makes the best of it. The dangerous lure of notoriety has stretched its bony claw toward her but we guess she won't be codded into accepting the suggestion. "Mamma" Ederle looks substantial aud we believe she is still boss of her household, and as such she will see to it in her phlegmatic German way that "Trudy" does not partake of the painted life which seems sweet as honey but stingeth like an adder.

The newspapers have made up a lot of disgusting and sloppy stuff about the affair from start to finish. Probably one-half at least of the drollery which is claimed to have took place during the swim across the English ditch is pure bunk and probably nine tenths of the simpering romantic young blades who read the bunk and take it literally are simply duped. Such is the stock in trade of the big dailies. What we do know is that Gertie Ederle is an unusually plucky and muscular daughter of a Chicago butcher who may have sold "Kosher meat" in his day on the West Side slums. It don't make any difference. The papers have painted the Ederle family up in glowing colors, but who cares? It's an American born daughter who made the the swim and she'll make many more—unless as we said—that bony claw should get her.

However apropas of this discussion we might say that a son of poor down trodden Germany has succeeded in swimming the ditch in considerable less time than our Gertie but then he's a man. His time is reported as 12 hours and 40 minutes and we presume he carried a bologna sausage stuffed in the hip pocket of his outfit and frequently regaled himself or he never would have accomplished it.

Holsteins Awarded Position Of Honor

Holstein-Friesian cattle will be the first breed judged at the National Dairy Exposition to be held at Detroit in October, it is announced by secretary W. E. Skinner. The judging will take place on October 7.

The premier position is awarded the breed because there are more Holstein Friesian cattle in the State than the rest of the breeds put together. The Holstein-Friesian association has more members than any other breed organization.

According to the last census, Michigan ranked fifth among the states in the number of Holstein Friesian cattle. At that time, there were 32,702 Holstein-Friesians; 8,396 Jerseys; 3,369 Guernseys; 429 Brown Swiss; and 291 Ayrshires.

The Jerseys will be judged on October 8; the Brown Swiss and Ayrshires on October 11; and the Guernseys on October 12.

Competition will be keen this year, according to J. E. Burnett, M. S. C., who is superintendent of the cattle department. Due to its proximity to Detroit, Canada will make a large number of entries. Canadian cattle are noted for their remarking breeding, and have carried away the highest honors at previous expositions.

Long Lived Harness

For washing harness use tepid water, a neutral soap, such as castile or white toilet soap, and a sponge or fairly stiff brush. Hardened grease may be removed without damage to the leather by scraping with a dull knife. Rinse in clean, tepid water, and allow the harness to hang in a warm place for 24 hours before using it. Harness should be oiled or greased while still damp, otherwise it may take up so much grease that it will pull out of shape or take up sand and grit. For heavy harness use liberally a mixture of tallow and cod oil, neat's-foot oil and tallow, or any of these with wool grease, to make a paste having about the consstency of butter. Rub the oil or grease, warm to the hand, thoroughly into the leather while it is still damp from the washing. After the harness has hung in a warm room overnight, remove the excess of oil with a clean, dry cloth.

Give Calves A Chance

Diarrhea, or scours, a very common and often persistant disease of calves, always hinders their growth and development. The most important causes of the disease are irregular feeding, sudden change of feed, fermented feeds, the feeding of dirty or sour milk or milk of diseased cows, the use of dirty milk pails or unclean feed boxes, and damp, dirty stables.

As soon as scours is discovered, separate the affected calf from the others and carefully cleanse and disinfect the pen. The feed should be reduced immediately to about one-half, milk pails cleaned and sterilized, feed boxes cleaned and disinfected, and any other causes mentioned above eliminated.

A few of the more common preparations used to treat the disease are blood meal, a teaspoonful at a feed; white of egg; limewater. A dose of four drops of formalin to each pint of milk has been used to advantage, and a drench of three ounces of castor oil followed by a teaspoonful of one part salol and two of subnitrate of bismuth also is recommended.

Must Clean Sports From Kidney Beans

That Michigan farmers who are producing kidney beans this year must clean out all sports from their fields if they are to be insured best marketing opportunities is the warning being sent out by H. R. Pettigrove, crops department at M. S. C.

Many kidney bean fields in Michigan have been found to be severely contaminated during the past year or two, while practically all fields have shown the presence of some of the sports, says Mr. Pettigrove. The sport is a bean which produces a long, vine like plant and is very prolific. It is easily distinguished in the field from the bush type kidney bean plant.

It is important this year that farmers go through their fields and rouge out all plants which have a foreign look or are of foreign nature to the kidney bean itself. A day or so in the field will make sure that all beans are pulled which do not belong there.

Farmers who have had severe contaminations in the past have found it a hard to market their beans, because of the presence of the sport The canners object to it because the sport fades out during the process of canning. The housewife objects for the same reason.

With the large amount of disease which is coming into the bean fields at the present time, all precautions should be taken to insure a better product for the market this fall.

Local Grower To Show At State Fair

D. E. Turner of Mosherville, known throughout this section as a very successful corn breeder, will exhibit a sample of his corn and also a peck of Rosen Rye at the Michigan State Fair, September 5 11.

Mr. Turner is exhibiting a variety which he calls "Golden Cross Corn." It is a cross between Duncan Yellow Dent and the Golden Glow variety.

Mr. Turner has found this variety to be unusually well adapted to the southern part of Jackson County and the northern part of Hillsdale. He has won honors with it at former Michigan State Fairs and also at the International Grain and Hay Show.

The crops show will be housed in the new $100,000 agricultural building, which has just been rushed to completion on the fair grounds.

The fifty fourth annual Farmers Picnic of two counties (Lenawee and Hillsdale) was pulled off at O'Riley Landing Devils Lake Thursday August 26th and from all indications it was a howling success. At this particular time of the year farmer folk are well supplied with leisure time having mostly finished their threshing and waiting for the corn crop to mature. The good weather which usually pertains on the occasion was with them this season and the usual attendance greeted the occasion. Hon. Earl C. Michener furnished the hot air and a program was carried out which all enjoyed. These picnics furnish a never failing bonanza for politicians to get their cases before the humble voters and the man who feeds us all.

George B. Smith has announced his candidacy for Representative from the Third District of Michigan at Washington Mr. Smith has spent his entire life in this vicinity and his qualifications include graduation from Hillsdale College. He pledges honest support of the farmers of this district and the elimination of red tape from congressional measures calculated to improve farm prices.

It requires considerable time for a seed bed to become well compacted to its full depth, especially on heavy soil. The soil should be worked down firm and clear to the bottom of the furrow slice. A disk harrow is good for obtaining this subsurfaced compaction, on the heavier soils. On lighter soils the cultipacker is a valuable tool for this purpose.

HOW MANY WOMEN GET UP SINGING

Two Women Find Health Essential to Happiness

MRS. BELLE THOMPSON
ROUTE 2, ROSSVILLE, GEORGIA

Springtime streamed in through the open windows. The green fields of Georgia were basking in the sunshine. Somewhere a bird was trilling. It was a day to be happy.

But the pale woman at the table sighed and pushed away her plate. Nothing tasted right. She couldn't eat much. She couldn't sleep well, either. She was so weak, it was hard to do her work. When the baby cried, she wanted to cry, too.

She had not been well for four years. Her husband watched her with a man's helpless expression. But his mother knew a remedy.

"My mother-in-law," says Mrs. Belle Thompson, Route 2, Rossville, Ga., "told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children, and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does more good than the treatments. It keeps me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me."

Another Happy Woman

Decatur, Illinois.—"I took your medicine for weakness. I would sometimes have to hold myself up with my hands. I was this way for five years, off and on. I read in the newspapers where Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped a lot of women, and I thought I would take it. I am now getting better so fast that every month I can feel a difference. My work now is cooking. If you like, you may use these facts as a testimonial. I am willing to help you boost your medicine."—MRS. IRENE REED, 635 Greenwood Ave., Decatur, Ill.

This dependable medicine has been in use for over fifty years.

"I kept the check. It was coming to me. And I'm going to have a good time on it. It won't pay up what I owe, or begin to. Square me with the club, though, for one thing."

He left and Caleb in turn changed his clothes and spent a couple of hours reviewing his plans. At the water company he noticed Mary Morgan driving away at her typewriter. Her expression was sullen and she did not look up, though she heard his name mentioned. Caleb wondered what she thought of the wedding.

He found his model set up on a long table in the directors' room that opened off Cox's private office. Cox and Hinckley were examining it. They greeted him cordially, Hinckley in particular giving him a cordial grip of the hand.

"Suppose you go over the general plan, Warner," suggested Cox. "Then we'll talk. We want to know how you arrive at your premises."

Caleb described simply his belief that the whole of Caliente plain formed a great bowl of gravel with bottom and sides of clay, with a roof of clay at the upper end that caused artesian wells. He went over his operations and displayed his maps. He had felt a certain diffidence about the water-divining, doubting whether his hearers might not scoff at proof built up of such means. But Hinckley accepted it and Cox nodded his agreement.

Hinckley spoke first after Caleb's final summing up. And he spoke with a sincerity that held no trace of jealousy.

"I congratulate you. I should have liked to have made that discovery myself. But there is one big obstacle that exists. It is the flaw, if there is a flaw, in your plan."

"I mean the powerful action of the tides upon any pipes which may be laid upon the bay bottom. It shallows at the south end and the six-foot rise and fall has great swing there. There is your weak point. It may be overcome, but it will need a special invention. I am convinced."

"I had thought of that and I have a suggestion," said Caleb. "It is not perfected. I have not had time. But I am sure the idea is a sound one."

"Well," summed up Cox, "so far, I think we may say that your project interests us, Warner. I must add my congratulations to those of Hinckley. It looks as if your visit to the coast was going to be fortunate to all concerned. I am going to call a directors' meeting. I cannot set a date now. They are all busy men, with other interests than this company.

"I should say a fortnight should prove sufficient. I'll let you know at the earliest moment. Perhaps that two weeks will enable you to work out your idea about the pipes. Keep in touch with us through Mr. Hinckley. You can rely upon his co-operation."

They both accompanied him from the big room. Hinckley gave him his private address and invited him to come there any evening for consultation.

Caleb had some other business to attend to down town and he got back to the apartment house in fine feather.

He found Baxter there. He had just come from the club, he said moodily. Caleb saw that he had been drinking. His face was flushed and he was in bad humor.

"I'm wiped out," he said. "The bottom dropped out of the market. Some of Cox's d—d manipulation! The tip was that they were driving down the stock to buy cheap and we were prepared for that. But they were unloading. My thousand went for margins. I'm clean. And I'm up against it."

He went to his bureau and took up the silver frame with Mary Morgan's picture in it. He took out the photograph and tore it into small pieces, which he tossed into a waste-paper basket.

"D—n her!" he said savagely. "She's the last straw. Getting ugly—in more ways than one!"

"You owe her something," said Caleb.

It was a slip that he realized immediately by the deepening scowl on Baxter's forehead.

"Owe her something?" he exploded. "A lot you know about it! You are like most preachers, you prate without experience. I may be a sinner, but she's no saint. She wasn't when I met her. The things we did were done mutually in full knowledge of the risks, because we wanted to do them. Now she's pinned this thing on me, with some cause, perhaps, but I'm not feeling paternal about it, I can tell you. And I don't intend to marry her. That's flat and final. Owe her something? Maybe I do, but it can only be paid with money and where's that coming from?"

"I didn't mean to preach, Ted. As for money, if she'll accept it, there's your land deal. It's easy for you to make money, Ted, if you buckle down to it and cut out the drinking."

"Preaching again," cried Baxter. The liquor he had been taking had a stronger, a more malevolent hold on him than ever before in Caleb's knowledge of him. The veins were swollen in face and hands and his eyes were slightly glazed, though his speech was fluent and clear enough. "I've taken more man-sized drinks this afternoon than you have in your whole life," he went on. "The stuff I swallowed out on the boulevard this afternoon would drive a man crazy in time, but that's all we can get."

"Look here, Ted, you're talking nonsense," said Caleb. He was beginning to feel nettled, the blood ran hot under the skin of his forehead. The day had gone too well to wind up in such fashion. He went into his own room to escape the threatened tirade. Baxter followed him, bent on argument, his mind set in one groove. He seated himself in a wicker armchair.

"I suppose you think I ought to marry the girl? Tie myself up with a whining wife and a kid?"

"Yours?"

"Maybe. I'm not even sure of that. No, I'm not. I can handle her if I do it right away," said Baxter with ever thickening speech. "But by the time my deal goes through it may be too late. Those things hang fire sometimes. Lend me the money, Cal'. Twenty-five hundred 'll do it. She's ready to cut loose and go east. If I tell her it's fallen through she'll turn nasty again. Will you do it?"

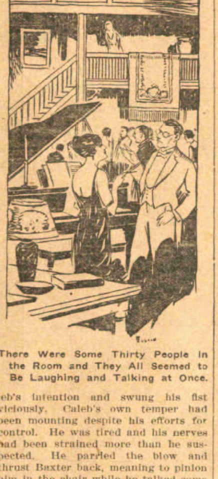
"I can't Ted, I haven't the money."

"You mean you won't. Why don't you come through and say what you mean?"

"I have. If I had the money, or could get it, I would lend it to you."

"Ah! That's what they all say, when it comes to a showdown. If you think you're going to force me to marry the girl, you're wrong. You seem d—d eager to take her side in the matter. If you're so anxious to save her good name, why don't you marry her yourself?"

Baxter got up, swaying a little. His eyes were now bleared. The poison he had been assimilating was forcing its venom to the surface. Caleb stepped forward to put his hands on the other's shoulders, partly to steady him, with the idea of coaxing him to lie down. Half blind with crudely doctored alcohol, Baxter mistook Caleb's intention and swung his fist viciously. Caleb's own temper had been mounting despite his efforts for control. He was tired and his nerves had been strained more than he suspected. He parried the blow and thrust Baxter back, meaning to pinion him in the chair while he talked some sense into his sodden brain.



There Were Some Thirty People in the Room and They All Seemed to Be Laughing and Talking at Once.

But Baxter twisted. His weight went all upon one arm and the light chair overturned. Clutching at the rickety little desk, Baxter scrambled on the floor in a shower of papers as the desk toppled. The fall seemed to temporarily sober him. He scrambled to his knees and began picking up the papers as Caleb righted desk and chair, ashamed of the brawling termination of the affair.

"Look here, Ted," he said, catching Baxter by the elbow. "This has gone far enough. We are both acting like a couple of chumps. If I've . . ."

But Baxter stood staring at one of the papers he had picked up. His face was contorted by a malevolent sneer.

"You haven't got the money, eh?" he said. "A fine friend you are. You rotten liar. I'm through with you!"

He flung the paper down on the top of the desk and flung through the door, his face livid. Caleb heard his own door slam as he picked up the slip. It was the telegram from his attorney announcing the closing of the deal and the forwarding of the money.

For a second he stood irresolute. He did not want to explain to Baxter why he could not lend him any of this amount, or to what use he had already put it. Finally he made up his mind. His friendship with Baxter had been largely protective. He did not want to abandon that friendship now when Baxter most needed him.

He knocked on the door, then tried it. The key had been turned on the inside. He called.

"Ted! let me in for a minute."

"You go to h—l." A moment after, the door to the corridor slammed. Caleb went to his own and saw Baxter entering the elevator. He rang the bell, hoping that he might catch the other before he got too far down the street.

The colored boy grinned at him as the elevator came to rest at his floor.

"Want to catch Misteh Baxter, suh? I reckon you's too late. His cyah's bin waitin' fo' him fo' nigh ha'f an hour. He's gone a kitin'."

CHAPTER X

The Party

If Baxter came back that night Caleb never knew. Baxter kept the door of his room locked. Caleb heard him casually mentioned at the club as being on "a tear." Doctor Fields inquired for him once directly of Caleb.

"He'll get cirrhosis of the liver, if he keeps on," said the physician. "And he'll snuff out like a match in the wind. We must get him on the wagon. I'll try and scare him into it. Though there's real cause for the scare. He'll stay off the stuff for several months sometimes. There's just one thing he can't resist and that starts him off. Worst thing he could take. Champagne. Fortunately it's scarce and expensive. You'll understand my talking to you this way. They say you and Ted have been friends for a long time."

But Caleb doubted very much if Baxter would listen to him until his mood changed. And he was busy with his own problem of the pipes and the tides.

He had an idea of what was needed. If the bottom sloped evenly the big tug at his submarine pipeline would come in midchannel, looping it backwards and forwards. But, wherever there was a depression or a channel, his pipes would sag and great strain come on the joints. A flexible line—that was what he wanted. He worked over it daytimes and dreamed of it nights without coming to a practical solution. He wanted to complete his plan, to come before the meeting with all difficulties solved.

Then one day he received an invitation from the Vedders to a radio party.

"It will be quite informal," wrote Mrs. Vedder, "but I think you will enjoy it and we hope you can come. Some friends of yours will be with us, Betty Clinton and Carmen Wilson among them. Don't dress. Come any time after eight o'clock."

Caleb accepted. He found himself eager to do so at the mention of Betty Clinton's name. The afternoon of the appointed day the solution of the pipe problem came to him. It seemed to him that thoughts of the girl had blent with his tinkerings and drawings and quickened his invention.

He sketched out his idea and made some specifications that he took down to a working machinist with whom he had got in touch. A model was to be made. The thing was simple enough though an entire novelty in such work. Caleb intended to make his pipe junctions flexible by designing a ball and socket joint so that the curving ends of one pipe should be clasped in coinciding curves of another, working in soft babbitt metal, giving a play of almost ninety degrees. This would make the pipeline as limber as a sprocket chain, Caleb believed.

* * * * * * *

The Vedders lived on Semaphore hill in a house that consisted of one great room on the ground floor together with a kitchen at one end and a conservatory porch at the other. An open staircase led to the upper floor and the bedrooms. A Japanese servant met him at the door, which was screened off from the main room, and relieved Caleb of hat and coat. There were some thirty people in the room and they all seemed to be laughing and talking at once, split up in little groups, on divans, standing by the fireplace, by the grand piano, about a table where the Japanese was now serving punch out of a great bowl of mandarin ware. Smoke trailed everywhere, from pipes, cigarettes, cigars and from sticks of Chinese punk.

Land of Endless Cold Unknown to Explorers

Northward beyond the tree limit is the land of endless cold, of eternal snow and ice—at least according to popular belief, and some textbooks still in use. But this story of eternal ice is an interesting myth. The facts of climate are quite different, says Tycos.

The Arctic winter is indeed long, dark, cold and stormy, but the actual number of inches of snowfall is less than in northern Virginia, for example. The cold, therefore dry, air of Arctic regions cannot produce much rainfall; in many places it is only ten inches or even less. The rainfall being light, the snow does not get very deep.

Believers in the snow-myth seem never to think of the intense heat of the Arctic summer, when the sun does double duty by shining also at night.

At 60 degrees north latitude the longest day has 18½ hours of sunshine. At 66 2-3 degrees north latitude, at the Arctic circle, the longest day has 24 hours of sunshine. At 70 degrees north latitude there are 73 days with continuous sunshine, unbroken save by clouds. At the pole there are six months of continuous daylight. Several hundred square miles of Arctic America have more than 30 days of continuous sun.

Brief Bootmaker

It was Thackeray who, when visiting Ireland, misunderstood the letters G.P.O. to mean "God Preserve O'Connell." But even in this age of letters, when newspaper readers are accustomed to decipher abbreviated form in news and advertisement columns, mistakes are easily made. A notice on a certain street door, for example, always excites interest. It runs: "J. X., B.S.M." Some rare university degree? No; merely an intimation that the occupant was a boot and shoe mender.

In the Forkless Days

Forks were not introduced into England till 1608, and it is a notable fact that whilst we get Knifesmith and Spooner amongst our occupative surnames, we find no Forker or Forksmith. Even the "Carver" had to use his fingers. In the Boke of Kervynge we find it set down, "Set never on fyshe, fleshche, beest, ne fowl, more than two fyngers and a thombe." The guest was lucky if he got a plate. Usually he was supplied with a round of bread known as a trencher upon which the meat was placed. It will be easy to understand why this was followed by the necessary services of the "ewer" with a basin of cleansing water and the "napier" who proffered the towel or napkin.—Manchester Guardian.

In the "Good Old Days"

In the days of female prize fights, an English woman was reported to have floored her Jewish opponent 70 times, and after an hour and twenty minutes of fighting was declared the conqueror.

Choose your new car from the General Motors Line

In the past twelve months the public has purchased 1,086,590 General Motors cars, an unprecedented record.

This great volume of business has made possible still further economies and these have been put into the quality of the 1927 series now on display by General Motors dealers.

The new General Motors line is first of all a quality line. It embodies every advantage of research. It has been proved at the General Motors Proving Ground. Every car is finished in Duco; the closed cars have Fisher Bodies.

It is a complete line. It includes 59 models of open and closed types, ranging in price-at-the-factory from $510 to $4,350. Within it you will find the car you want at the price you want to pay.

We invite you to visit the show rooms of our dealers and select your new car from the General Motors line.

MICHIGAN CELERY HOLDS OWN IN U. S.

Despite the increasing competition of celery grown in New York state and shipped in from California, Michigan celery is more than holding its own on the New York and Chicago markets.

Competition in the celery field is growing steadily, largely because of the success Michigan growers have experienced for more than 30 years.

Muskegon is producing a $500,000 celery crop this year, and the number of celery farmers is increasing rapidly. More than 75 farmers are now raising celery in the muck lands along the Ryerson creek, the Four-Mile creek, Muskegon lake, Bear lake and Mona lake, and through the use of proper fertilizer and scientific methods are placing a better product on the market each summer.

Muskegon takes pride in its celery business, because celery is the only worth-while crop grown in Muskegon county. There is a little wheat, corn and fruit, but the sand acres along the lake shore produce comparatively nothing. Only in the far eastern section of the county is there rich farm land, and that area is small.

The production of celery in Muskegon started when the lumbering business died out. Lumber workers turned this way and that, looking for something to do, and those who knew the requirements for celery growing saw wealth in the muck land bordering on Ryerson's creek.

HUGE SAVING SEEN IN LAKE SHIP ROUTE

W. L. Harding, former gvoernor of Iowa, and president of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater association, declared in an address to delegates of Michigan Hay and Grain association that the proposed route via the St. Lawrence river to the ocean would effect a saving in freight charges every five years in an amount greater than the total cost of construction.

The advantages of the St. Lawrence route over the New York ship canal were stressed by Harding and the objections of the All-American proposal pointed out. Basing his argument on the contention that tht merits of the two routes must be judged on the basis of freight rates, time of transportation and cost of construction, Harding asserted that the Great Lakes region would, when the waterway is completed, enjoy the same base rate that now governs New York, Montreal and other ocean ports. Freight rates to Montreal from Portland, Ore., via the Panama canal, are similar to the rate to New York, he said.

Dog Escaping Police Leads Cops to Liquor

A stray dog, dashing up a Detroit alley to avoid two police dog-catchers, led to the discovery of 15 gallons of moonshine and to the arraignment before J. Stanley Hurd, United States commissioner, of two men on charges of violating the prohibition law.

The liquor was being loaded into a sedan, according to William Lynch and John Roehl, police dog-catchers, when they appeared in the alley on the trail of the stray dog. The pup is still at liberty.

Albion College May Turn Away Students

Albion College may find it necessary this fall to turn away women students. President John L. Seaton announced that the new women's dormitory will be completed next week and that it will be in readiness for co-eds when college opens in September. However, all rooms except three or four have been engaged, and after the building is full, only those girls will be accepted for registration who come under three classes: Those who live in Albion, those who will live with relatives, and those who will work for their room and board.

Two Bass on One Line Is Sturgis Man's Fish Story

Leslie Persing, of Sturgis, realized his fish story would be doubted and so he brought along his witness, Louis Francisco.

Mr. Persing, while casting with an artificial bait, felt a heavy tug at his line. His catch gave him a tough battle and when he brought it to the surface he found he had captured two large-mouth bass. One measured 17 inches and the other 15 inches.

MICHIGAN FOLK "EASY MARKS"

Are you going to Mesopotamia? Or to France, Spain, England, Italy, Turkey, or Egypt? If you are and have even the remotest idea of buying antiques while abroad, be careful!

This warning comes from Albert H. Reutter, chief United States appraiser of Detroit, and his associates, who cite instances of Michiganders spending thousands of dollars for fake antiques in the belief that they were purchasing genuine article.

At present, there are in the customs storehouse many pieces of fake antiques—glassware, pottery, musical instruments, earthernware and furniture—which the appraisers have declared dutable as modern pieces. The enthusiastic antique collecter, who entertained the illusion that he had purchased an antique, found instead that he had been "stung," financially and artsitically.

The tariff provides that artistic antiques, except rugs and carpets, and objects of ornamental character or educational value, produced more than 100 years prior to the date of importation shall be admitted duty free. Further, that there shall be attached to the invoice covering importations of this character an affidavit of the foreign seller or shipper made before the American consul at the place of shipment as to the genuineness of the antique. The importer is required to file a similar affidavit with the collector of customs when entry is made.

Goods of this kind, when consigned to importers in Detroit, are sent in bond from the port of first arrival to Carey D. Furgeson, Federal collector of customs, before whom the entry is made. The merchandise is then ordered to the appraisers' storehouse for examination.

Enoch Arden Widow Is Sued For Insurance

The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. of Newark, N. J., has filed two suits for $5,000 each against Mrs. Victoria Lebert Manley of Port Huron, to recover money paid to her on life insurance policies carried on the life of her former husband, who last spring turned up alive and well after it was supposed that he was dead. In July, 1925, Mrs. Manley identified the body of a man who ended his life by jumping into a furnace at the Imperial Oil Co. plant, at Sarnia, as that of her former husband, whom she had not seen in several years and from whom she had obtained a divorce.

The insurance company after Mrs. Manley had filed proof of death and a claim for the insurance, paid her $8,894.

Last April a man who said he was Adelard Lebert, former husband of Mrs. Lebert-Manley, appeared at Port Huron and was identified as Lebert by former Port Huron friends. He said he had been on the Pacifis coast and it was not until he returned to Stony Point, Ont., to visit a brother that he learned he was presumed to be dead.

Mrs. Lebert, after obtaining a divorce from Lebert, married an aged civil war veteran.

North Michigan Crop Of Blueberries Is Huge

Upper Michigan this season is harvesting a bumper crop of blueberries, probably the largest in a number of years. Transfer points have become so congested in the past two weeks thatit has become necessary to impress into service extracrews to handle the heavy shipments consigned to Milwaukee and Chicago markets.

Louis Campau's Land Sale Not Recorded

Because a deed transferring from Louis Campau, Grand Rapids' first white settler, to Gideon H. Gordon the northwest corner of Louis street and Campau avenue, in Grand Rapids, was never ricorded, Kate Fuller Johnson, Margaret C. F. Johnson and Philo C. Fuller have brought proceedings in circuit court to clear title to the property. It is explained the flaw in the title has hindered sale of the property.

Street pavements constructed hereafter in Chicago will have a concave surface instead of convex.

Wins Legion Title for Work Among Stage Children

For her work in protecting French youngsters from exploitation on the Parisian stage, the French Legion of Honor has conferred membership on Mlle. Suzanne Devoyed, one of the popular actresses of the famous Comedie Francaise.

Woman Following In Footsteps of Luther Burbank

Backyard Burbanking, a game far more interesting than golf, mah jong or whist, according to the claims of participants, makes life worth living, says Mrs. Henry G. Wirts of Highland Park, who this year won the game.

In reality, she says, it's a game of soltaire, using bulbs instead of cards. In her case she started with a few bulbs of the gladioli and, after five years of playing the game, she won victory this year.

The game, as Mrs. Wirts explains it, is that of starting with a few bulbs such as gladioli, dahlias, or any flower one may prefer. Then, from the initial stock, after several years of careful watching and working, produce something entirely new in the way of a blossom.

In order to create something new, Mrs. Wirts found she must plant from the seed. By means of the brushes she interchanged the pollen from the blossoms she liked best, provided means for preventing tht bees from interfering in the game, and then waited the seed production.

Last year the seeds were planted and some healthy plants produced. But this year Mrs. Wirts achieved her reward. She sought for one new variety and got more than a dozen.

17 Miles Gravel Road Being Built in Isabella

A total of 17 miles of gravel road is under construction in Isabella county this summer. These are being planned so as either to link with state highways, other gravelled county roads or with the main roads of neighboring counties as far as possible.

One stretch of three miles in Isabella township is being rushed to completion, opening up a rich sugar beet territory so that the farmers of the district may be linked with M-14 for purposes of hauling their beets in the fall.

The longest single strip of new road is being built in Coldwater township.

Sioux Chief Takes First Shot On Putting Greens

Chief Iron Shell, aged Sioux tribesman, one-time scout with Buffalo Bill, and now the leader of a band of Indians traveling with a circus, climbed the country club hill at Traverse City to learn something about the game of golf.

For some years Chief Iron Shell, a well-read and active Indian chief, has been interested in golf and golfers, but never had a niblick in his hand.

The only knocking worth listening to is that done by opportunity.

ALL-METAL BLIMP ORDERED BY U. S.

Contracts for construction of the first all-metal dirigible airship have been awarded by the United States navy department to the Aircraft Department Corporation of Detroit, a firm with which Edsel Ford is prominently identified.

The new dirigible, the first of its kind, will cost $300,000 and was provided for in the naval aircraft bill passed by the last congress. The aircraft department was the only bidder.

The dirigible will be 150 fiet long by 50 feet wide. The "bag" will be a single cell constructed of duraluminum. It will be manned by a crew of four and will have a carrying capacity of eight passengers.

The ship will depend on hydrogen gas to keep it afloat and will have a speed of 70 miles an hour and a commercial cruising range of 1,200 miles.

Hydrogen gas can be carried with safety in the all-metal bag, although it is dangerous in the customary fabric bags, navy experts explained.

The all-metal ship, its proponents assert, will do away with much of the danger which has handicapped the development of the lighter-than-air machine.

Family, Bank Roll and Car Reported Stolen By Tourist

Samuel A. Hudson, a visiting tourist from Bremen, Ind., is the victim of the season's most unusual robbery. His automobile, his wife, two children and a bank balance of $15, which he had in a Bremen, Ind., bank, have been stolen by another tourist, he reported to the Battle Creek police.

Hudson told the officers that the little family pitched their camp at Barnes park, Battle Creek. The husband came to town on an errand and upon returning found only a vacant spot where his camp had been. Other tourists told him that the wife and children, a girl 9 years old, and a boy, 7, had packed rather hastily and departed.

Hudson gave the officers the name of another tourist who, he said, had been following them the past week or ten days.

WOMAN WINS IN REPLEVIN FIGHT

Mrs. Dell Skinner, of Kalamazoo, has won her second crusade.

The first was for prohibition. She fought 50 years for temperance.

The second was for $200 in cash which she deposited as a replevin bond with the sheriffs office, in Detroit, December 12, 1925. She fought eight months for that.

The sheriff's office made the error of paying the money posted by Mrs. Skinner to someone else—Mrs. Skinner's lawyer—although directed by a court order from Judge Dewitt H. Merriam to pay the money to her.

Mrs. Skinner came to Detroit last November to attend the national convention of he W. C. T. U. The day previous to her arriver her daughter, Mrs. Isabel King, moved.

She had trouble in the moving. She says she paid the van man in full. The moving company claimed she didn't. It confiscated Mrs. King's piano. A damage suit is now pending, with Mrs. King as the plaintiff.

If you have never cheated yourself, no one else can.

John Skinta of Toledo will give an entertainment at the M. E. church Saturday evening of next week. Mr. Skinta's program will be magical, mirthful and mystifying.

Church services were handicapped Sunday evening by the large number of mosquitoes which were in attendance, making it necessary to close the windows and barricade the doors. A member of the congregation suggested that a very small amount of oil should be poured upon all stagnant pools of water in order to prevent the insects from hatching. But when one considers just how rapidly the price of oil has advanced during the past year, one wonders whether such a plan would be possible or not. Perhaps Rev. Scott who comes from Albion college might be able to explain things to us. Perhaps he would tell us that John D donated $200,000 to Albion sometime ago and was raising the price of oil in order to regain the loss of his donation, another boss of Albion is S. S. Kresge wealthy chain store operator who pays many of his girl clerks starvation wages and then donates money to the college. Profs at Albion are not likely to air their views concerning oil or 5 and 10 cent stores.

DETROIT'S GROWTH MAKES MONEY!

Growth in population backed by basic industries is what sends real estate values upward. bringing profits to owners. Let this faster growth bring faster profits to you.

Reputable Detroit real estate can be bought on installment—indeed this is the customary way. You are thus able to purchase real estate out of income rather than capital.

Installments are usually one per cent of the value of the lot per month.

The initial down payment is 15 per cent.

Thus:

A $1500 lot will cost you $15 per month and $225 as a down payment.

Make use of the customary terms to enroll in the ranks of Detroit's profit makers by investing in property in our Golf and Country Club District.

William M. Boyden

Having been in ill health for a period of more than two years, the last six weeks of which were fraught with intense suffering, and which was diagnosed as cancer of the stomach, William M. Boyden succumbed to death last Saturday morning August 28 at 2 o'clock at his home, 210 Forest Court, Vandercook Lake.

Mr. Boyden was an expert plumber and worked industriously at this business until ill health interfered. He will be remembered as the father of Ellen Boyden Shinn of Jackson who died suddenly in a hospital about two years ago and after being buried her remains were disinterred by a degenerate and horribly mutilated.

Our Plain Duty

The weekly press of Michigan is already engaged in many laudable activities. chief of which are fire prevention, rebuilding the rural church and school, making farm environments more pleasing, better law enforcement, loyalty to home communities and many other worth while things that make for better citizenship and better living conditions. On every public question of importance we are always to be found with our feet on the ground battling for the things that is to the honor and endurance of the Republic.

That is why we should be vitally interested in encouraging everybody with the rights of franchise to exercise that privilege next Tuesday. There is no doubt about it, indifference is one of the gravest dangers besetting democratic self government. The ignoran,t the indifferent, the apathetic voter is really a far more potential menace than he who willfully expouses causes and movements that do violence to the Constitution and the accepted institutions of this country.

Save Money - Fence Now

THE easily driven "RED TOP" steel drive post has made fence building possible at this season. With this post there are no post holes to dig, so it doesn't matter how hard or dry the ground may be. With the "RED TOP" One Man Driver you can drive 200 to 300 of these superior steel posts a day.

At the low prices we are quoting on "RED TOPS" and fence there's a double advantage in building new fences and repairing old ones now.

A good many farmers around here are doing the bulk of their fencing during the fall season—right now. When the spring rush of work comes on they will have that much less to do.

"RED TOPS" for Low Cost Temporary Fences

We've been selling lots of "RED TOPS" for temporary fences this season. They are easily driven and the wire quickly attached. They can be pulled and the fence moved with so little labor and in such a short time.

It is a pleasure for us to sell you "RED TOP" Posts. We know they will give you lasting satisfaction. They have been doing it in this community for years.

Come in right away and arrange for the posts and fence you will need to put your fence lines in tiptop shape this fall. We are always glad to help you get the biggest value going for every dollar you spend with us. "RED TOPS" are one of our best offers today.

Fisheman's Heaven Found on Lake in Oakland County

The term "fisherman's paradise," is constantly overworked. Every Michigan lake described by the advertising copy writer in a sumer resort circular is such a place. Bass are supposed to rise avidly to the plug, pike smash the first spiner or pork rind that wabbles past and big schools of bluegills, sunfish and yellow-bellied perch haunt the bars, ready to compete for the first worm lowered to them. But ordinarily these paradises do not live up to what is claimed for them. The angler returns with a slim string and to his dying day be cherishes the illusion of finding waters that are literally ful of fish—but never does.

Strange to say, Oakland county possesses a lake that probably comes as close to being an angling paradise as any lake in Michigan. The lake is only 48 miles from Detroit and two miles from the little town of Clyde, near Milford. It is appropriately named Fish Lake, for it contains untold numbers of pan fish and small mouth bass—big fellows, too.

This body of water has one bad feature, however, and that is too many fish. It is difficult to make many casts with the live minnow without experiencing the theft of the bait by the hungry perch, bluegills and sunfish, whose ambition, it seems, is to kepe the bas from being caught. Not that these over abundant pan fish are unwelcome. The bluegills scale as high as a pound and the perch frequently reach a foot in length, but when the angler is striing for bass he is usually satisfied by only the bronze backs.

Farm Products at Low Level for Two Years

Farm products reached the lowest general price level in nearly two years in August, the United States department of agriculture has announced.

The monthly price index was placed at 132 per cent of the prewar level, continuing the drop which carried it from 139 in June to 135 in July, and was 20 points, or about 13 per cent, lower than in August last year. The purchasing power of agricultural products also is down, dropping to 85 in July, the lowes level since December, 1924.

Small price gains in cotton and grains were more than offset by declines in the meat animal and fruit and vegetable groups. Farm prices of corn advanced about 11 per cent, while hogs dropped about eight points.

Six Aliens Are Trapped In Row Boats in St. Clair

Three men and three women, aliens who said they came from Jugo Slavia are in custody at Port Huron. They were ferried across the St. Clair river in row boats by immigrant runners and after landing on the American shore between Marysville and St. Clair were abandoned by the runners, who saw immigration officers approaching. A seventh member of the party, a man, evaded the officers.

MICHIGAN FACES STRONG BIG TEN

While Michigan is enjoying prospects for a good football team at Ann Arbor and has what one coach has called the best material for the last several years, Michigan's opponents in the Big Ten also have a host of good men. Largely they have retained the men who played a year ago.

It looks now as though more men who have played against each other would meet in Michigan's game against Illinois, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Ohio State than for several years past.

Last year Illinois largely had a new line; Minnesota had a new team; Wisconsin and Ohio Stat had many replacements in the back field and line. This year only three of the Illini who played against Michigan are not back; at Minnesota Murrell, who has gone to West Point, is the only man missing who started against Michigan. Wisconsin has three men missing from its initial lineup — Polaski, end; Nelson, tackle, and Leo Harmon, halfback. Ohio State is without four men who started against Michigan—Cunningham and Gorrill, ends; Nichols, tackle; and Wendler, quarterback.

Coming of George Veenker and the leaving of Franklyn Cappon are the most important changes in the Michigan football coaching staff between the beginning of the football season a year ago and the next season, starting September 15.

The other change is the leaving of Frank L. Hayes and the return of Harvey Emery. Hayes during the last year gave his attention largely to the administration of the Four Year Coaching School, devoting only a small part of his time to football. Emery, who held this position whn he started on his tour of the world, will return to the place he quitted.

Michigan's varsity coaching staff for the coming year will be made up of Fielding H. Yost, beginning his second quarter century as a Michigan coach, and E. E. Vieman, Harry Kipke, Jack Blott and Veenker, with Emery as a possibility as needed.

Flagstone Is Last Mark of Springs' Famous Hostelry

Only a long, flat stone, the horse block in front of which stage coaches passed, remains today at the site of Yankee Springs Tavern, Barry county. Yankee Springs was a famous tavern in the pioneer days in the middlewest. Because it consisted of nine buildings of various sizes, it jolly host advertised it as a "nine-story tavern, all on the ground."

The tavern site is now an isolated section of the county, unmarked by anything to suggest it once was the grounds of a "Mansion House." It was the main stopping place between Grand Rapids and Kalamazoo for nearly two decades, and was one of the principal points on the Detroit-Grand Rapids stage route.

The tavern became the social center for all western Barry county and its dances and parties were attended by scores from Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids. It entertained at various times such notables as Gov. Epaphroditus Ransom, Zacharih Chandler, Senator Charles E. Stuart, Gov. Felch, Gen. Lewis Cass and others.

Holland Motorists Get Lost in Home Town

Mr. and Mrs. George DeWitt of Holland, Mich., have decided that next year when they take their vacation they will "see Holland first."

They came to the decision after driving through their home city without recognizing it. They were returning from an automobile trip to Rudyard. Arriving in Holland at night they mistook the town for Grand Haven. They stopped at a restaurant and inquired the way out of the city. It was not until they were two miles outside the city that they realized they had passed through their home town.

Music Clubs Contest At Grand Rapids, Oct. 9

Entries in the first annual contest to be held at Grand Rapids by the National Federation of Music Clubs have piled up so rapidly in the last week as to indicate that the movement will achieve its aim, that of stimulating public interest in music, directors of the contest said.

The contest will be held Octfl 9.

When long brooms are worn out, do not throw them away as useless. Cut off the bristles and tie a piece of thick felt or velvet on the end and you will have a good polisher for boards or linoleum.

College Coat Uses Squirrel Trim

VELOUR POPULAR FOR GIRL'S COAT

Velour is among the popular fabrics for coats this season. The coat, suitable for campus wear, is of brown velour and trimmed with dyed squirrel. It has tyle to recommend it for dress purposes and it will also serve for wear to classes occasionally since it is not too elaborate for school nor is it likely to grow shabby quickly. The squirrel always has a tendency to wear thin in spots but it can easily be matched at no great cost.

The side blouse is being featured by one manufacturer who shows several different manipulations of this line, although in general it is achieved by means of inverted tucks, the placing of these tucks giving variation. In some instances they are set at a low line, almost below the hips, on other models the line is higher. Sometimes they are augmented by a simulated belt or the tucks are continued farther down the side and trimmed with motifs of fur. In one interesting model, box pleats are set down each side from the bloused effect and a narrow fabric belt is tied across the front.

Pile fabrics are the rule throughout the showing, and a varied assortment of furs is used as trimming.

The shoulder treatment is, as a rule, closefitting, the set-in sleeve or the saddle shoulder prevailing.

NO—We Have Gasoline But Not for City Folk

NO NOTHING
KEEP OUT!

Possibly he was induced to post such a sign because of the tendency some folks have of helping themselves to whatever they find along the roadside, even though they have to tear down a fence or two to attain their objective.

There's a yarn that illustrates the point:

A couple from the city stopped to gather some apples from a farmer's orchard. They decided, after they had the apples, to tell the owner about it.

"Hey, old timer," they accosted the farmer, "we helped ourselves to your apples."

"Oh, that's all right," replied the son of the soil, "I helped myself to the tools in your car while it was parked."

Jail No Longer Needed To Be Sold for Garage

Andrew Volstead's eighteenth amendment has won favor in at least one town. Authorities attribute the lack of use for a jail in Capac, to the fact that the prohibition amendment has brought about a reduction in the number of persons arrested. The village authorities just have voted to sell the town jail to Andrew Hill to be used as a garage. The old building, used for more than half a century to house Capac's unruly, has been vacated and will be turned over soon to Hill.

Fife Lake Fish Declared Killed by Tape Worms

Appeal of the Fift Lake chapter of the Isaak Walton league to the conservation department for aid in discovering the reason for the presence of an unusual number of dead fish in the waters near the city of Fife Lake, has resulted in a high spot survey by T. H. Langlois of Paris. These experts report that the fish mortality is due chiefly to the prevalence of hoalostrome, a parasite. Presence of tapeworms in some of the fish also has been detected, according to a report made by Dr. G. R. LaRue and Stanley Brooks, biologists of the University of Michigan, who aided in its survey. Dr. LaRue, in a letter to Dr. David E. Hills of Fife Lake, says: "I have never been able to determine that death is cased by such an infestation with larval tapeworms. They seem to be less hurtful than larval trematodes. Adult tapeworms of this species do not seem to be very harmful to the hosts. There is no cure and no method of prevention under natural conditions. Fish with these parasites, if they are actie enough to take the hook, are certainly fit to eat. These tapeworms would not develop in man and under any circumstances would be killed by proper cooking."

Dog Proves Hero by Saving Child from Lake

"Ted," a year old German police dog, is the hero of the summer colony at Clark's lake near Jackson, after rescuing from drowning his little mistress, Millicent Florence, 18-months-old daughter of Mrs. J. B. Kluckner of Cincinnati, O.

Millicent went to the lake's edge during a moment when her mother's back was turned. Not finding the child playing where she had been left on the lawn, Mrs. Kluckner rushed down to the dock just in time to see "Ted" drag Millicent out of the water by her skirts.

Ex-Port Austin Men Form Old Timers Club

A unique sporting organization—the Port Austin Old Timers' club—has been formed in Detroit by former residents of Port Austin, Huron county, the purpose being to promote baseball and other sports among the youth of the village.

Ed Miller, Detroit, is president of the Port Austni Old Timers' club, and Earl Long, Detroit, is vice-president.

Pup's Manners Given Recognition by Court

A Detroit court took official cognizance of a pup's manners and nocturnal vocal practice by placing Jack, a 1-year-old terrier, on six months' probation.

Judge W. McKay Skillman said that the minute Jack began to sing the scale, as he has been accustomed to do, from midnight until 6 o'clock a. m., back to the pound he'd go.

"Not one little woof?" asked wide-eyed Sylvia Sann, aged 9, who is the owner and will be the probationer officer during the six-month period.

Forest Experiment Plot In Marquette Enlarged

The forest experiment station located near Dukes in Marquette county has been enlarged by a half-section of cut-over land, lying northeast of the original area. The Cleveland Cliff Iron Company, which made the original gift for the station, will deed or lease this area to the U. S. forest service.

Brothers Parted for 39 Years Are Reunited

Thirty-nine years ago two brothers, William and John L. Byron, bade each other good-bye at Littletown, Del., as they were each going out in the world to seek their fortunes. From that time until last week the brothers never saw each other and it was a joyous reunion when they accidentally met in the home of Charles Byron at Chester, Pa.

The Byron brothers were orphans, lost to relatives in Delaware long before they attained the voting age. William Byron, now of Holland, Mich., who was then affected with wanderlust, told his brother that he could not resist the call of the west and packing his belongings one morning he left against the wishes of John.

Peppermint Is Big Crop Of Arenco County

The peppremint which is grown in the eastern part of Arenco county, is in fine condition, and there are prospects of a good crop this year. The soil in that part of the county seems particularly well adapted to growing peppermint, and each year more farmers are giving it their attention.

MACKINAC IS MECCA OF RECORD CROWD

Mackinac Island, "the Isle of Enchantment," is enjoying this summer the greatest patronage from visitors and resorters in its entire history.

For at least 300 years, probably longer, it has been advertised for its beauty and healthfulness. The Indians started it before the coming of the white man, when they called it Moe-che-ne-mock-e-nung. Father Marquette, the first white man to dwell on the island, gave it additional publicity in Quebec and France. A brother of Franklin Pierce, president of the United States, when commandant of the island, praised it. Ethan Allan Hale, President Grant and President Roosevelt followed suit. Now the East Michigan Tourist association is telling the country of its recreational features and advantages.

One of the outstanding examples of the publicity which was given to Mackinac Island back in 1876 is revealed in a history of Cheboygan county, written in 1876 by Rev. W. H. Ware, of Cheboygan, and printed the same year. Rev. Ware read the history at the July 4, 1876, centennial celebration of the United States at Cheboygan, which was the result of presidential proclamation. Later, at the request of the supervisors, he had it printed in book form. While Ware's history was supposed to be one of Cheboygan county, he also gave representation to Mackinaw county whic hincludes Mackinac Island.

In the book, Rev. Ware records the official proceedings of a meeting of the "Western Hay Fever association," which was held at Mackinac Island, September 1, 1876. The officers elected indicate that back in those days, people from the midwest sought the island for relief from hay fever. And while the minutes exemplify the business-like attitude of members of the association, and their desire to bind themselves fraternally to fellow sufferers, they also disclose a trend of humor that is appealing. If I Owed You

If I owed you, or you owed me,
How wonderful it all would be
If each of us could only see
That we should do as we agree
And pay it.

Then every man would look ahead
And value every word he said,
So that the bills we often dread
Would make us better friends instead
Of hostile.

False optimism makes men say,
They'll have it such and such a day.
When oftentimes you know that they Won't have the means with which to pay
As promised.

Excuses never pay a bill,
And merchants often get their fill
Of those who have no power of will,
But satisfy their wants until They're stranded.

Men throw their judgment to the skies,
And promises will turn to lies
For him who buys and buys and buys,
With no thought to economize
At all.

No one should know as well as you
Of how much work that you can do,
Or how much debt can carry through;
So bite off just what you can chew,
And chew it.

William H. Weckler, Mason county fruit grower, one known as the "Apple King" of Michigan, sat down to a $200 meal at his home recently. It was a $200 dinner because that is what Mr. Weckler says it cost to grow the few mushrooms he had that day.

For 20 years Mr. Weckler has been growing apples, having 4,000 trees on his 60-acre farm. Last year he started to experiment with mushrooms and spent $200 in making beds and getting the mushrooms started. Then he picked his crop and ate it at one meal.

All the beautiful young dancing girls who fitted about the palace of the Maharajah of Indore, whose chief charmer, Mumtaz Begum, cost him his throne, are hunting new jobs. Application of a rigid economy program in the state of Indore called for the discharge of the entertainers. Their actual salaries, it is explained, were not so much—only about 3,000 pounds a year—but the cost of upkeep was much greater. Large sums, it seems, were squandered in satisfying their fastidious little tastes for trinkets, veils and perfumes.

Banker Last of Brothers Who Won Success In Life

M. J. McPherson, Howel blanker, is the one remaining brother of four who achieved success by sticking together. They were sons of the village blacksmith. Their father arrived in Livingstone county from Scotland one year before Michigan became a state.

One of the boys, Alexander McPherson, started in 1865 what is now the McPherson State Bank of Howell. When he went to Detroit, where he later became the president of the First and Old (now the First National) bank, the other three brothers took charge of the Howell institution.

"M. J." — as he is affectionately known in Howell, is the one brother left of the four who clung together so many years. Although more than 80 years of age, he does business every day at the State Bank, of which he is president.

Gas Rate Reduction Authorized by State

Reductions and revisions of gas rates in Lansing and Muskegon, affecting industrial and house heating consumption, have been authorized by the state public utilities commission, it has been announced. The Muskegon Traction & Light company and the Consumers' Power company were granted permission to make the changes. Similar revisions are being made in many cities with a view, according to utility officials, of encouraging the use of gas for heating purposes.

The new supercable on the floor of the Atlantic ocean will convey messages between America and Europe eight times faster than any other line. During the interval of one minute 2,500 letters will be sent over the line. The remarkable speed is made possible due to a magic metal developed by engineers, known as "permalloy," an alloy of iron and nickel. This has magnetic permeability many times that of other metals or known substances.

The largest windmill in the world is operated in San Francisco, Cal., to pump water into large reservoirs from which it is distributed all over the pleasure grounds of Golden Gate park. It has a main tower 200 feet high, and made of concrete. Each sail is 100 feet long, and there is an automatic device for setting the sails perpendicular to the wind direction. The maximum horsepower developed by the windmill in a fairly strong breeze is said to be about 100.

Chemists have discovered a new and quick method of preserving eggs. The eggs are dipped in an oil bath maintained at a temperature of 235 degrees Fahrenheit. This fills the pores of the shells, thereby preventing air from entering through them.

Indian Mound On Rouge River Once Had Counterpart

The old Indian mound on the grounds at Fort Wayne once had its counterpart in a site two miles farther west on the Rouge river, according t oscientists. At this point, where a bend is now, the intersection of West Jefferson and Dearborn avenue, Detroit, was located the largest mound in the whole northwest.

The banks of the Rouge were settled very early in the history of Michigan by the French, who found this mound there at the time they settled. All they knew about it was that the Indians used it as a buriel place. The oldest Indians knew no more of when it was reared htan the French themselves. They found it already occupied as a necropolis and they used it for the same purpose.

The mound was composed of fine building sand and the settlers began taking it away by boat and by wagon loads. Later it became the property of the Chase estate, and eventually became a part of the village of Delray.

When the mound first came to the attention of Bela Hubbard, a scientist, about 1836, about half of it had been destroyed. Yet, what remained disclosed the fact that it had been the memorial of many interesting and marelous events. From the immense number of skeletons found within it, and the mode of their occurence, it is believed to have been one of those national sepulchers of Hurons and Algonquin tribes where were deposited the bones of their dead.

Rebuilt Ship Is Added to Port Huron Ferries

The Port Huron & Sarnia Ferry Co. has put into commission the rebuilt ship, Ariel, adding to its fleet of ferries operating between Port Huron and Sarnia.

The Ariel was purchased about a month ago from the state of Michigan. It had been used as an automobile ferry at Sraits of Mackinac.

By J. ALLAN DUNN

AUTHOR of "A MAN TO HIS MATE" "RIMROCK TRAIL"

—14—

Caleb distinguished Carmen at the piano, her olive skin and rich coloring resplendent in the glow, gay as a California poppy in a daring gown of burnt orange, a red flower in her black hair.

She saw him standing there and called out a welcome across the room.

"There is my toreador," she cried and crashed into the first act prelude from Carmen. Caleb felt himself the focus of stares that were friendly enough, but embarrassing. A light laugh went round, though he sensed that it was not at his expense, and hands applauded. Mrs. Vedder saved a stage wait by coming swiftly to him.

"You see, you are known already," she said. "Now I must make them known to you."

She led him round the room, introducing him. Everyone seemed to be a writer, a musician, an artist. Vedder greeted him at the punch table.

"Better fortify yourself while it lasts," he said. "This is an anniversary, mine and Mrs. Vedder's, and we celebrate, but we are limited. Meet Carquinez."

A short man with an enormous shock of straight black hair, a roughly modeled face in which black eyes twinkled genially, dark-skinned almost as an Indian, shook hands with Caleb. He spoke with a Spanish accent. To Caleb he seemed to have stepped directly across from the Quartier Latin.

His wife was in absolute contrast. She was an ashen blond, with great masses of hair braided above and partly about an oval face that had a perfect complexion, untouced by applied aid.

She looked like a madonna, Caleb thought, until he noticed her eyes. They were Oriental in their piquant slant and they were the color of jade. He mentally docketed her as a woman of personality and unusual brains. Carquinez, it appeared, was an artist.

Caleb and his hostess wound up at the piano. Brompton was with Carmen. He had a stranded air, an appearance of having been left there by the tide of his own feelings, wishful to stay but conscious that he cut a figure out of pose, out of harmony. Carmen flashed eyes and teeth at Caleb as Mrs. Vedder fluttered away with a:

"And these, you know."

"That wasn't quite fair," said Caleb. "Your bringing me into a strange company with an orchestral accompaniment. You mustn't expect me to live up to the role of Escamillo."

"I don't think you leave much to be desired as a matador. In so far as I have seen you in action."

"You forget the inspiration. Of such a Carmen."

"Why, you are a true caballero. I thought you must be like all the New Englanders. I never understood that they possessed any gallantry. If you keep that up all evening, you will do very nicely," she said. And began to sing very softly. Brompton was ignored. Caleb felt sorry for him, so evidently in love with the girl who made a mock of him, but he saw no way of altering matters. He stood by the lamp and the girl sang up at him, her face full in glow, her lips shaping the syllables of Carmen's song witchingly.

Mais, si je t'aime, prenez vous garde.

"It was the toreador whom Carmen warned," said Caleb.

"Perhaps he didn't need it. Brommy—get us some punch before it's all gone."

Brompton departed obediently. Carmen made room for Caleb beside her on the piano bench.

"She hasn't come yet," she said as Caleb looked about the room.

"She is expected, I understand," he countered coolly.

Carmen gave him a queer little smile, of approbation perhaps—or of challenge.

"Has she ever thanked you properly for saving her from the bull? I haven't. But I intend to."

Brompton came back with the punch and they sipped at it, listening to the talk.

But Caleb found his enjoyment marred by a creeping doubt of Betty Clinton's appearance. Carmen perhaps perceived it. At any rate she seemed to have definitely attached Caleb as her cavalier.

"Come on up into the conservatory," she said. "The room is getting hot. There is a wonderful view of the strait."

They mounted three steps together and went in among the palms and vines, leaving the door open behind them.

"This is better, isn't it?" she asked. She stood close beside him and Caleb was tangibly aware of the appeal of her. She spoke softly. The light subdued her vivid coloring, the flaring hue of her gown, but something emanated from her that made his pulses quicken. She put a hand on his arm, soft and clinging. Caleb could feel the warmth of her palm penetrating the light cloth of his sleeve.

"Now I can thank you for saving me," she said. "You should be rewarded, toreador. What do you want? You can have—anything."

She spoke so softly that he stooped to listen. Her breath was on his face, her eyes held little flames, her lips were parted. Her whole face was a challenge to desire.

Caleb was human. Yet he could not tell himself later who had given the kiss—or taken it. Her fragrance surrounded him, for a second her arm was about his neck, her body supple to his own, with their lips together. The passion of her clinging mouth burned, soft, yet fiery. They were one, welded with something more than merely physical contact.

Then she stepped back with a little laugh, straightening the flower in her hair. Caleb saw that her eyes were looking beyond him. And she laughed again, an odd little murmur of content.

He wheeled. Standing on the threshold of the conservatory was Betty Clinton, at the head of the steps. Behind her was Baxter. Caleb stood as if suddenly frozen, while she passed as if she did not see him.

"It is a perfectly glorious night," she said to Baxter as she moved on. Carmen had vanished. Baxter gave him a malicious smile as he followed Betty to the end of the conservatory. Caleb stood irresolute and then went slowly down the steps into the big room.

The evening was utterly spoiled for him. Carmen rejoined him but he would not reaccept her challenge. He wanted to leave but he stuck it out, conscious that he had deliberately offended Carmen, hardly daring to imagine how Betty had construed the scene she had happened upon with Baxter as her partner. How had Baxter happened to be there on that of all evenings? Caleb remembered that he had said he was a friend of the Vedders but he fancied that, if he had been actually invited, Vedder would have said something about it. Yet Vedder did not necessarily know that Caleb Warner and Fred Baxter were intimates. And it was not a formal affair. Baxter might merely have exercised his right of dropping in.

He found the jade eyes of Mrs. Carquinez regarding him with a sidelong glance of humor, of understanding, not lacking in sympathy. He became suddenly conscious that he had stopped listening to her, or talking to her, whichever it might have been, and that he was watching intently the group of which Betty was the hub. Even as he flushed under the scrutiny of his vis-a-vis, Betty nodded to him, pleasantly, as she might to an acquaintance. Not—Caleb decided—as she would have acted if the incident she had chosen to ignore had never occurred.

"You have met Miss Clinton?" asked the artist's wife. "She is a charming girl. She is different—and indifferent—so say the men. She and I are close friends."

"Yes?" Caleb could muster nothing better than the inane syllable.

He was grateful to Mrs. Carquinez. Did she mean him to be, he wondered. Had she seen what the rest had missed with those oblique green eyes of hers? And had she tried to help him?

The rest of the affair went on to Caleb as if he looked at it through a screen. Champagne was opened and he saw Baxter lift his brimming glass and rise in a clever speech to his host and hostess. Caleb recollected the doctor's mention of champagne and its action on Baxter. He wondered if the latter would make an ass of himself.

As soon as the first couple gave an excuse Caleb found the Japanese and asked for his hat and coat. His hostess came up.

"You're not going? We're going to have some music. Don't say you have to get up in the morning? You do? Then good-by. You must come again. Don't wait for an invitation. There are some who always drop in, like Ted Baxter. We hadn't seen him for months and now he's been the life of the party. I do hope you've had a good time."

As he reviewed the affair at breakfast the next morning Caleb found no cause for gratulations.

"What did Betty Clinton think of him?" he asked himself, conscious of the fact that he desired nothing more than to stand in her eyes better than any other man. The thing was at an awkward pass. He could not go to her and say—"I want to explain to you the reason why you saw me kissing another girl." She had chosen to ignore the incident once, she surely would continue to do so. But his silence—to which he was committed—left the inference that he was either flirting outrageously with Carmen or serious in his intentions toward her. His annoyance wheeled on Baxter. His enmity toward Caleb appeared as more than a transient streak of bad temper.

With an effort he dismissed the matter, since he could not mend it, resolving to move his quarters at the end of the month and leave Baxter to his own devices.

Mail rattled through the slit in his door. There was a letter from the Crystal Springs company. The directors' meeting was scheduled for the next afternoon. The note was a bare mention of the fact from Cox's secretary. It did not leave him much time. He would have to hurry along the model and his notes for the improvements.

He plunged hard and deeply into it all. He bribed the machinist to work double-time and got a promise that the model would positively be ready. By three he had managed to complete his notes, to secure the pipeline model—not quite finished but sufficiently so—while a special price had secured him prints of his photographs. Thus armed he arrived on time, filled with the invigorating tingle that prefaced the interview, cool enough on the surface, determined to win over any opposition.

He had to wait for a few moments. And, while he waited, he saw the stenographer, Miss Morgan, sending guarded glances in his direction. Once he thought he caught an appeal in her eyes, even a suggestion that she wanted to talk with him. She looked ill, tired, walking without spring, all her spruceness vanished. A bell buzzed, the secretary went into Cox's room and came out again with:

"They're ready for you now, Mr. Warner."

Cox was in his own office to usher him into the directors' room where the big model was on the long table.

"You've met some of us," said Cox genially as he introduced him.

Caleb recognized Morse, of the Lumber ring, Lawler, the oil magnate, Winton of the Light and Power company and Marlin, Thurston's uncle. Hinckley was there. The atmosphere seemed friendly but charged with business. The faces were serious, thoughtful.

"Suppose," said Cox, "that you give us all the same talk you made to Hinckley and myself. We have gone over the matter already, but we should like to hear from you."

Caleb got up and began at the beginning. He spoke fluently. His talk came naturally as he opened up the filing cabinet of his mind. He commenced with Cox's dinner and the first prompting that came from the statement of Golden's lack of water. And he wound up crisply with the production of his pipe-joint model, and the notes and photographs connected with it.

Hinckley's eyes kindled.

"This should solve that problem," he declared. "You have hit upon a bully idea, and the right one, Mr. Warner."

The directors began to sit at ease, to produce cigars or select from a box that circulated to Caleb.

"You're thorough, young man," said Marlin. "Shall we go into conference, Cox?" He looked at his watch.

"We'll ask you to excuse us for fifteen minutes, Mr. Warner," said Cox. "We'll send out for you."

Caleb did not stay in the offices. He paced the corridor outside, smoking, pondering his chances. He had Oakville to fall back upon, but there was always the chance—always the chance in Big Business—that, having given up his knowledge, he might be shuffled out of the game. They knew his plan. They had the money and the influence. They might think themselves able to get along without him. He was a stranger.

He stood at the end of the passage, looking into the street but seeing little. And he smiled grimly. "I'm not a Yankee for nothing," he told himself. "They haven't got all the trumps."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

These Might Be Heard if Optimism Prevailed

"Fire? Fiddlesticks, young man, booklet says this hotel is absolutely fireproof. Go away and let me sleep."

"What's this—from the income tax bureau? Good! They probably are sending me a refund."

"I don't seem to be able to get central, Mary, but I'm sure those burglars won't be through in the cellar for some time yet."

"It's a good thing Jack has gone over to Gloria. He'll appreciate me all the more after he's tired of her."

"Lots of time, George dear. Just try again and give her a little more gas. That train will stop rather than hit us."

"I feel I'm going to lose my petticoat before another block, but I'll probably look snappier without it."

"Ten years in Sing Sing? Thank you, judge. I've always wanted to wear a light suit, but I never had the courage."

"Triplets? Hot dog! That just completes the children's baseball nine!"—Exchange.

Distinctive Trade Term

The term "rayon," as a generic name to be applied to all artificial silks, has come into quite general use, having been indorsed by many trade associations, and being applied by different producers to their products. The word is French, one of its meanings being a ray, as of light, and the thought in the minds of certain of those who sponsored it was that, being a term unknown to most of the English-speaking public, it would permit of no confusion in its use. It was believed that it could not be mistaken for anything else, and would still be applicable to the product as expressing its outstanding characteristic of luster.

Bison of Mixed Breed

The American bison is the one existing species of the European wild ox. Bos (bison) bonasus, known in Russia as a zubr, together with the nearly allied New world animal known in Europe as the North American bison, but in its own country as the buffalo. The American bison is distinguished from its European cousin by the following among other features: The hindquarters are weaker and fall away more suddenly, while the withers are proportionately higher; especially characteristic is the great mass of brown or blackish-brown hair clothing its head, neck and forepart of the body; the shape of the skull and horns is also different, the horns being shorter, thicker, blunter and more sharply curved, while the forehead of the skull is more convex, and the sockets of the eyes are more distinctly tubular.

The Ruling Passion

A member of the Lambs' club tells of a comedian, who of late years had not had much luck, and who was dictating his notions of what his will should be. "What money I have, if any such as it is, or might be, that is to say—," he began.

"Wait a moment," said his lawyer. "I can put that in more legal language."

"I know," said the comedian, "but I want to get a laugh."

WHY DENY YOURSELF
THE BEST IN MOTOR CAR BODIES

The finest of the new cars in all price classes have now been announced—Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile and Pontiac.

All offer vastly greater values than ever before in motor car history.

All register amazing advantages in performance and ease and economy of operation.

But the greatest factor of their new glory is described in a single phrase—Body by Fisher.

Here is their supreme beauty—setting absolutely new standards in charm of design and interior fitting.

Here are unequalled factors of safety which add so much to your comfort and confidence.

Here are exclusive conveniences and niceties which do, indeed, make the car with Body by Fisher superior in its class.

No matter what mechanical developments may allure you, it is the body of your car with which you live most intimately—that is why the General Motors units, makers of the best of the new cars in all price classes, point so proudly to the emblem—Body by Fisher.

With the finest of the market to choose from there is no reason why you should deny yourself the greater safety, beauty and comfort which only a Body by Fisher can give.

Elvers Have Place on German Tables Again

Germans are happy, and elvers once more adorn the board of the hausfrau, for the British have regranted permission, revoked in the World war, to Germany to catch the small eels which are plentiful in the English channel. Elvers are smoked before being eaten and are estimated a great delicacy by the Teutons.

With the year following the regranting of the privilege, Germans trawling for elvers in English waters caught 3,000,000 eels, many of them being used for restocking 130 German lakes and rivers. The eels are taken to Germany in containers, each holding 5,000. Fishing experts say that the eels migrate to the Gulf of Mexico to spawn, and that the young are carried back to European waters by the Gulf stream.

Power From the Sea

The world's industrial power of the future may be drawn from the heat of warm sea water. Already some scientists think they have found a way of utilizing this latent energy. The warm sea water will, they assert, evaporate carbon dioxide or ammonia, and the pressure thus obtained can be used in steam turbines to produce tremendous electric power.

Six-Year Food Tested

Food that had been canned for six years was opened recently and tested by a Dutch physician, Van Leersum. It was a meat hash, including onions and potatoes, and the doctor's conclusion was that the food was quite suitable for human consumption.

The essential thing in canning, Doctor Van Leersum decided, was that all the air should be exhausted from the can in sealing. Oxygen, he said, was responsible for any corrosion that occurred.

The Doctor's Dilemma

"Bernard Shaw," said a publisher, "hates doctors. His 'Doctor's Dilemma,' you know, is a terrific attack on the profession.

"A doctor took him to task at a dinner party in London.

"'Mr. Shaw,' he said reproachfully, 'do you know that most physicians are very poor men?'

"Shaw gave a twist to his mustache. "'I know,' he said, 'that most of them are very poor doctors.'"—Boston Post.

U. OF D. EXPECTS 2250 STUDENTS

First Classes Now Open; Many Courses Offered in Four Colleges

With an expected enrollment of over 2,250 students in all departments, the University of Detroit has begun its forty-ninth year of operation under the direction of the Jesuit Fathers. The Commercial Art department and Section "A" of the Engineering College have started classes and other departments will open at stated intervals until Oct. 5, when all will be operating.

As in the past, a diversity of courses will be offered. The four large divisions of the university are the College of Arts and Sciences, the College of Law, the Engineering school and the Commerce and Finance department. In addition to these are the Extension classes, the Commercial Art division and the Foreign Trade department, as well as the school of Journalism.

The law school, divided into day and night sections, will open Sept. 15, freshman classes only. Junior and senior law classes will begin on September 21. The college of arts and sciences, the commerce and finance department and Section "B" of the engineering school will open Sept. 20. The foreign trade department will open Oct. 5 and the extension classes of the arts college will start on Oct. 4.

Day law classes will be held from 8 a.m. to 12 noon, and night law classes from 4:30 p.m. until 6:30 p.m. Three years are required to finish the day law course, while four years are required for the night classes. The commerce and finance day classes run from 8 to 12 a.m., while night classes of the same department are held three evenings a week.

The extension classes are designed to enable school teachers and others employed during the day to take advantage of the courses in English, history, philosophy, sciences and languages offered by the arts department. They will be held from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. two evenings a week and on Saturday mornings.

Although rapid progress is being made on the university buildings, which are now under construction on the new Livernois avenue site of the school, it is unlikely that these will be utilized for school purposes during the current year. All classes will be held in the group of buildings on Jefferson avenue east, near St. Antoine street, consisting of the engineering building, the administration building, Godfroy Hall and Colford building.

Officers of the university are: The Rev. Fr. John P. McNichols, S.J., president; the Rev. Fr. Henry W. Otting, S.J., secretary, and the Rev. Fr. Philip C. Dunne, S.J., treasurer. The Rev. Fr. J. J. Horst, S. J., is dean of the arts department; P. J. M. Hally, dean of the law school; Jay R. McColl, B.S., dean of the engineering school; John A. Russell, A.M., LL.D., dean of the school of commerce and finance; John M. McGarry, director of the journalism course, and Fred C. Nash, director of the commercial art course.

EDITOR-PRIEST INVESTED WITH MONSIGNOR RANK

Rev. Ciarrocchi Has Many Degrees; Teacher, Writer and Publisher

The Rev. Fr. Joseph Ciarrocchi, D.D., Ph. D., J. U. D., former college professor, pastor of the Santa Maria church, nationally known Italo-American author and editor of "La Voce Del Popolo", one of the leading Italian newspapers of the country, was formally invested in the robes of a monsignor recently by the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Roman Catholic Bishop of Detroit.

More than 3,500 friends and parishioners of the prelate attended the ceremony and congratulated Msgr. Ciarrocchi at the reception which followed. The Italo-Americans were warmly eulogized by Bishop Gallagher, who praised the work accomplished among them by Msgr. Ciarrocchi, both as pastor and as editor, since he established Santa Maria parish five years ago.

A large number of the clergy were present at the exercises. The Rev. Fr. Raphaele D'Alphonso, pastor of San Guiseppe church, was the speaker of the day while the Rev. Frs. Joseph Cianci, of Grand Rapids, and George A. Mauer attended the Bishop as chaplains. The Rev. Fr. Adalbert Zadala, pastor of the Church of the Assumption, was deacon of honor.

Msgr. Ciarrocchi came from Rome about 15 years ago, to teach in the Orchard Lake Seminary. Out of his meagre salary he saved enough to establish his newspaper, which has grown in size each year. Six years ago, he learned of a "lost" colony of Italians who were living on the borders of Hamtramck and Detroit, obtained permission of Bishop Gallagher to bring these people together and today Santa Maria parish is one of the fastest growing Italian parishes in the city.

HOLY SEPULCHRE CEMETERY OPENED BY DETROIT BISHOP

DETROIT, Mich.,—The opening of Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, the largest and newest Roman Catholic cemetery in the metropolitan district, was announced recently by the Right Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of Detroit.

The new cemetery, modern in every particular, is located between the Ten and Eleven Mile roads at the head of Beech street in the Southfield Center district. Its establishment comes in answer to the growing demand for a Catholic burial ground to serve the northwest section of the city.

To insure the uniform development of the property and the preservation of its park-like qualities, strict supervision will be exercised by the board of control, yet to be appointed, over the placing and design of monuments and markers and the planting of shrubbery and flowers. Nothing which is out of keeping with the general aspect of the site will be permitted.

One section is already being used, more than 100 bodies from the old St. Mary's Cemetery, Redford, having been moved there. Two other sections will be ready for use soon, it is said. In all 42 sections are planned for the cemetery.

The new cemetery will serve 30 to 40 parishes in the northwest section of the city as well as those in the outlying districts. Bishop Gallagher plans to erect a chapel, public mausoleum and other buildings.

DETROIT 225 YEARS OLD; FIRST CHURCH SITE MARKED

DETROIT, Mich.,—The two hundred and twenty-fifth birthday of the City of Detroit was celebrated recently with a party given in honor of the event by the Board of Commerce in the grand ball-room of the Book-Cadillac Hotel. Mayor John W. Smith and Judge Charles C. Simons, of the United States Court, were the principal speakers.

The dinner was attended by consuls of France, Central America, Great Britain, Spain, Panama, The Netherlands, Belgium, Poland and Greece. Following the dinner a tablet marking the spot where the original Ste. Anne's Church, the first house of worship in Detroit, stood was unveiled by the Catholic Study Club and presented to the city.

The Rev. Fr. Vincent I. Donnelly, C. S. B., assistant pastor of the present Ste. Anne's Church, spoke at the ceremony as did Clarence M. Burton, city historian, Mrs. William W. Warren, president of the club, Joseph T. Belanger, French consul, T. A. E. Weadock, vice-president of the Detroit Historical Society; Mrs. Marie B. Ferrey, curator of the Michigan Historical museum; John Cameron, British consul, and Mayor Smith, who accepted the tablet on behalf of the city.

The marker was unveiled by Jane Sullivan, a direct descendant of the Chapoton and Viger families, early French settlers in Detroit.

VICTOR IN BALLOON RACE LAUDS RADIO

Strapped to Tiny Basket Which Bore Him as He Battled Above the Clouds, His Little Portable Apparatus Helped Lead Him to Victory.

When William T. Van Orman, Pilot of the Goodyear IV, captured the record for the greatest distance covered in the National Elimination Balloon Races held recently in the United States, he was enthusiastic in his praise for the mystery box which had accompanied him through the trials and tedium of the long contest. This was the fourth consecutive time in as many years that he had piloted a Goodyear Balloon to victory.

Securely strapped to the tiny basket which carried him safely over mountains, rivers and the broad western plains, his little portable radio set annihilated the intervening space and brought to him the encouragement of his friends thousands of feet below, special weather bulletins and musical entertainment as well as news of other contestants.

This victory qualified him to represent the United States in the International Balloon Races which followed in Antwerp, Belgium. For this great air classic Van Orman retained the same proven mystery box, a portable Radiola receiver.

One Hundred Years of Progress

1913—Number of saloons in District of Columbia reduced.

1913—Memorable National Anti Saloon League Convention attended by 5,000 delegates at which drive for National Prohibition was begun.

1913—Nine whole states were dry. Total population in dry territory in all states—46 million people—or more than half the population. By 1919 one half of the people living in licensed territory were living in four states, one quarter of all people in licensed territory were residents of six cities, more than half of all the saloons in the United States were located in 14 cities; 71 percent of the area of the United States was under prohibition laws.

1914—Committee of 1,000 men authorized by above 1913 convention and a committee of 1,000 women organized by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union marched down the streets of Washington City to the Capitol building and delivered to Congress, a memorial for National Progress.

Constitutional Prohibition. From that day, to the 16th of January, 1919 when the 36th state ratified the 18th Amendment, it was at least never the intention of the prohibition forces to give the liquorites a moment of peace. Every election—municipal, county, state, congressional and national—was a call to conflict over the existence of liquor traffic.

1914—One third of United States senate elected.

1914—Hobson resolution to submit prohibition amendment to federal constitution received majority but not ⅔ in House of Representatives.

1915—Joint Resolution No. 55 introduced in Congress calling for submission of prohibitory amendment to federal constitution.

1916—Senate Judiciary Committee reported favorably 13 to 3 this Senate Joint Resolution No. 55.

1917—Congress enacted prohibition enforcement code for District of Columbia.

1917—Federal law prohibiting liquor advertising in mails and bone dry law prohibiting shipment of liquor into dry states.

1917—Food control bill passed by United States House of Representatives forbidding use during war of all food materials for production of alcoholic beverages. Bitterly opposed by liquor interests Modified at request of the President. Food control made optional with the President. In this form bill passed.

1917—Anto Liquor regulations for army and army camps and posts.

1917—Distillation of liquor and importation of distilled liquor prohibited.

1917—Enforcement code for Alaska and prohibition for Porto Rico.

1917-August 1st—Senate as elected in 1912, 1914, 1916 voted-65 to 20 for Eighteenth Amendment resolution.

1917-December 17th—House of Representatives, elected months before war was declared, voted for same 282 to 128.

1918-January 8—Mississippi first state to ratify the Eighteenth Amendment.

1918 April 2—Massachusetts by the vote of its legislature elected in November, 1917, became the 11th state and the first great industrial state to ratify the 18th Amendment by Senate vote—27 to 12—House vote—145 to 91. Fifteen states ratified that year.

1918—Prohibition for Hawaii.

1918—Prohibition zones established around coal mines and war industries.

1918—War-time prohibition. Same became effective July 1 1919

1919-January 16—Nebraska became the 36th ratifying state. By this time the nine dry states had increased to thirty.

1919 October—Volstead law enacted to enforce Eighteenth Amendment. Original vote in House 287 to 100. Vetoed by the President. Passed over veto by 176 to 55 in the House and 66 to 20 in Senate.

1920 January 16—Eighteenth Amendment became operative.

1921 November 23—Supplemental prohibition act passed.

Only fourteen states ratified before Armistice; thirty two ratified after Armistice; Florida, November 27th, 1918; twenty nine states in January and one in February 1979 with New Jersey as the forty sixth ratifying state in 1922.

"Contrary to all precedent, a limitation of 7 years was put upon the time within which the Eighteenth amendment might be ratified Time actually required for first 36 states was 1 year and 28 days. If the wets had been able to control either House in only 13 state legislatures out of 48, they could have prevented the ratification of the Eighteenth amendment. They were unable to muster even this small number. As a matter of fact, only 3 of the 96 branches of state legislatures have voted against the amendment. The total state Senate and House vote for the Eighteenth Amendment was 5,079; total Senate and House vote against 1,265, a ratio of more than four to one.

The Eighteenth Amendment was the first to be submitted by a Congress in which the Senate was elected by the direct vote of the people.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

Champion Auto Races To Close State Fair

A championship 100 mile automobile race, with America's leading drivers entered to pilot the roaring cars in their quest for national honors, will close the entertainment program for this year's State Fair, on Saturday afternoon September 11.

The race is being referred to by automobile race authorities as the greatest long distance event ever held on a dirt track. The State Fair banked oval is in wonderful shape this year, according to Chester M. Howell, superintendent of the automobile race section of the fair, and record braking time is expected.

All cars in the race will have the new "vest pocket" speedway motor of small piston displacement—the same cars which have been making such phenomial time around America's speedways this summer. It will be the first time that these speedway motors have ever raced on a dirt track.

Frank Lockhart, winner of the 1926 Indianapolis 500 mile race, will head the list of 14 national champions who will pilot cars. Earl Devore, "Red" Shafer, Ben Jones, Dr. W. F. Shattuck, and other famous drivers are included. The race is limited to 14 cars.

The State Fair is planning to handle a crowd of 40,000 people for the races Saturday. Thomas E. Henry of Detroit, President of the American Automobile Association, and a member of the board of managers of the State Fair, is managing the races, with Mr. Howell as his superintendent. The State Fair itself is the promoter for the event which is sanctioned officially by the A. A. A.

Uncle Sam To Attend National Dairy Show

Uncle Sam will serve as the Government's personal representative at the National Dairy Exposition at Detroit in October, and will bring the U. S. Department of Agriculture's exhibit with him, it is announced by W. E. Skinner, secretary.

Accompanying Uncle Sam will be Dr. C. W. Larson, chief, U. S. bureau of dairying, who promises that the various displays will give each visitor at least one suggestion that will help him to make money.

A departure will be made from the usual manner of preparing exhibits. The old style chart and picture type of exhibit is not in evidence in this year's display. Each booth will have many real and life sized models, as well as moving parts that add interest.

The effect of feeding well cured and poorly cured alfalfa hay on the calcium needed for milk and reproduction, and the normal growth of dairy heifers will be illustrated by machinery and photographs.

G. Forrest Lewis

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR PROSECUTING ATTORNEY

I am a life-long resident of Hillsdale County, and as such have an understanding of local conditions and needs, I am now filling a vacancy caused by the death of a former Prosecuting Attorney, receiving my appointment from Judge Guy M, Chester on August 5th 1925.

My life in your midst and my work and record as Prosecuting Attorney for the past year is before you and I trust it merits your support and vote at the Primary election on December 14, 1926.

Denis G. Clancy

CANDIDATE FOR RENOMINATION ON THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

For State Representative

My platform is my record in the Legislature. My voting there shows my attitude on the gas tax, on road building, on taxation, on school matters, and other state questions, and has been approved by leading farm organizations. Although a new member I headed the fight against a useless Fifth Normal College and the school has not been located. The state has been saved a half million dollars. I am ready and better prepared to head similar fights next session. Your vote will make it possible.

PRIMARY ELECTION

Notice is hereby given that a General Primary Election will be held in the Township of Adams, County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, at Town Hall North Adams Within said Township, on Tuesday September 14 A. D. 1926.

For the purpose of placing in nomination by all political parties participating therein, candidates for the following offices, viz.:

State—One candidate for Governor: one candidate for Lieutenant Governor.

Congressional—One candidate for Representative in Congress for the Congressional district of which said Township forms a part.

Legislative—One candidate for Senator in the State Legislature for the Senatorial District of which said Township forms a part: one candidate for Representative in the State Legislature for the Legislative district of which said Township forms a part.

County—Also candidates for the following county offices, viz.: Sheriff, County Clerk, County Treasurer, Register of Deeds, Prosecuting Attorney; County Auditor; Circuit Court Commissioner; One County Drain Commissioner: One Surveyor; Two Coroners; County Road Commissioner.

DELEGATES TO COUNTY CONVENTIONS

There shall also be elected at said primary, by direct vote of the registered and qualified voters of each political party in each county as many delegates in each township, ward or precinct, as the case may be, as such political party in such township, ward or precinct shall be entitled to by the call issued by the county committee of such political party for the county convention thereafter to be held by such political party within said county in that year for the purpose of electing delegates to the state convention called for the purpose of nominating candidates for state offices, to be voted for at the November election. In case of any vacancy in any delegation from any election precinct, township or ward to the county convention, such vacancy shall be filled by the delegates present from the ward or or township in which the vacancy occurs.

The state central committee of each political party shall, at least thirty days before the September primary herein provided for, cause to be forwarded by mail to the chairman of the county committee of such party a copy of the call for the Fall state convention showing the number of delegates to which such county shall be entitled in the state convention of such party; and the said state central committee shall apportion such delegates to the several counties in proportion and according to the number of votes cast for the candidate of such party for secretary of state in each of said counties, respectively, at the last preceding November election.

The name of the candidate for delegate to the county convention shall not be printed upon the official primary election ballot, but one or more such names may be placed on such ballot by printed or written slips pasted thereon by the voter, or the names may be written in by the voter.

Delegates to the Fall county convention shall be elected by election precincts and the county clerk shall notify by mail each person elected as such delegate.

The required number of electors to receive the highest number of votes for delegates to the Fall county convention of any political party shall be declared by the board of primary election inspectors to be elected.

The board of primary election inspectors shall certify to the county clerk the names of the electors so elected, as delegates, naming the political party upon whose ballots such electors were elected. The county clerk shall notify each delegate so elected of his election as such delegate, and shall certify to the chairman of the county committee of each political party of the county, the delegates elected by such political party as delegates to the fall county convention.

SUGGESTIONS RELATIVE TO VOTING

Separate Ballots for each political party will be provided. The elector must name the political party of his choice when asking for a ballot and in marking his ballot must make a cross in the square to the left of the name of each candidate for whom he desires to vote and can vote for only one candidate except where two or more candidates are to be nominated in which case he should vote for two or the number to be nominated.

The Polls of said election will be open at 7:00 a. m. and will remain open until 5:00 o'clock p. m. of said day of election, unless the Board of Election Inspectors shall in their discretion, adjourn the Polls at 12 o'clock, noon for one hour.

(Received last week)

Mr. Williams has been on the sick list.

Ben Pendell and family were in Hillsdale Thursday.

Mr. Selig will begin marketing his tomatoes next week.

Clifford Allen and family are new neighbors in the vicinity.

The Jackson school commenced Monday with Mrs. Overly as teacher.

Mrs. Quick and Mrs. Hayhoe spent Wednesday with Jay Hayhoe and wife.

Charles Sprague of Tontogany Ohio was visiting at the Ellsworth Sprague home recently.

The Hoxie Ladies Aid will meet at the Talladay home near Pittsford the 16th of September.

George Hayhoe and wife, Jay Hayhoe and wife and Edgar Purcell and family attended the Farmers Picnic last Thursday.

Wilbur Sprague and wife of Detroit spent last week at the Sprague and McLaughlin home. Mrs. Sprague will teach in the Fordson school this year.

Jack Sprague of Toledo spent the the week end with his brother. Mrs. Sprague and daughter who had been visiting here for a week returned home with him Monday.

The State Fair

Those from this way who attended the Michigan State Fair certainly enjoyed the exhibition. Among the big things might be mentioned Henry Ford's private collection of curios. The Express locomotive built in 1860 which Mr. Ford has seen fit to put through his shops and refit, is a very handsome piece of machinery notwithstanding it has undergone some changes end many clean-ups. The engine called the Calista was built by an early Locomotive Works and is certainly worth your time and energy to inspect. While possibly not more than one-half as heavy as the passenger engine of the present day, it reminds one of the days in railroading when the fireman's duty was to climb out of the cab at every stop and polish the brass work until it shone like a mirror.

This locomotive is a wood burner and moved under its own steam from Dearborn Michigan, so we understand, to the tent on the grounds. A glimpse of this venerable old engine reminds one of the railroad methods of many years ago. Under the same tent appears a large collection of old vehicles built in the earliest days from the quaint one-horse shay to the phaeton with jump seat. Mr. Ford also exhibits specimens of the early Greek chariots—replicas—made to closely resemble the originals from wood and gilded. We suppose the originals were much similar to the ancient chariots taken from King Tut's tomb. As usual the array of side shows were numerous and amusing. "Mike and Ike" the midget twins were there and did their clever stunt at fistic work. Other monstrosities were abundant in the tents scattered throughout the midway. The "Hairy Lady" and Zippo "the wild man of Borneo" drew great crowds of sightseers.

The great Coliseum Building with its amphitheatre of seats rising tier upon tier, is an imposing sight in itself but when filled with several hundred people for the pageant at night, and the splendid thoroughbred horses and cattle the farming contingent certainly find much to interest and instruct. The tractor department for farming shows a wonderful conglomeration of sights as the various appliances used on the farm hooked up to a Fordson, and caterpillar tractors were constantly surrounded by a crowd of admirers. It is now possible to buy a farm ditcher for comparatively what a powerful tractor would cost.

Eating and checking booths are provided for accommodation of all and the Vernor's Ginger Ale stands are doing a thriving business. On Monday in the afternoon the temperature suddenly turned cold enough to require overcoats and many of them were seen about the Grand Stand and at other points.

The special vaudeville performances in front of the Grand Stand deserve more than passing mention On two large stages world famous acrobatic troupes held the great crowds spell bound with death defying acts. Strange Singalese from far-off countries and troupes of comedians vied with each other. One thing which was quite noticeable on Labor Day was the absence of bands, not more than one or two appearing. The Boy Scouts band furnished some very good music.

The better transportation methods pertaining at the present time seem to work wonders in getting the crowds inside the gates. The street cars as of oid of course are loaded to overflowing but much of the passenger service is augmented by taxi-cabs and buses—all seemingly loaded to capacity.

While the State Fair Grounds are yet somewhat in the suburbs the city is creeping up to it year by year, and not many years will pass until the grounds will be surrounded by a motley array of suburban homes and business places—in fact this end of Woodward is practically a city by itself during the fair season.

Plow Now Is M. S. C. Advice For Wheat

"Plow early for wheat," is the advice which comes from the M. S. C. Soils Department. "A firm seed bed is essential", says Prof. C. E. Millar of this department. "Land to be planted to wheat should be plowed at once; in fact, it would be better if the plowing had been done earlier.

The advantages of early plowing according to Prof. Millar are allowing the seed bed sufficient time to become thoroughly compacted, permitting time for the eradication of weeds, and making available a larger amount of plant food.

"A hastily prepared seed bed", says Prof. Millar, "puts the crop at a disadvantage since the supply of available plant food is likely to be diminished and moisture conditions are not suitable for quick germination. Wheat is sensitive to the nature of the seed bed and time spent in fitting the ground properly is time profitably expended."

State Poultry Men To Meet At M. S. C.

Poultrymen of Michigan will gather in force during the week of September 13 to 18, at the M. S. C.

A special Hatcherymen's Short Course and the second annual meeting of the Michigan Poultry Improvement Association are both scheduled for that week. Many of the delegates are expected to attend all sessions of both gatherings which are planned to run consecutively.

During the Hatcherymen's course which starts on Monday, September 13, problems of the poultry men, ranging all the way from disease control to egg laying contests will be discussed. Members of the faculty of the poultry department at M. S. C. and leading poultry specialists of the state are listed to lead discussion during the school.

The special meeting of the Poultry Improvement Association will be called on Friday morning September 17, with Dr. L. E. Heasely, of Zeeland, president of the Association, in the chair. In addition to technical matters on the program, a number of addresses by agricultural leaders and poultry experts are listed.

Prof. H. A. Bittenbender, of Iowa State College; Reese V. Hicks of Kansas City, Mo. managing director of the International Baby Chick Association; President Kenyon L. Butterfield of M. S. C.; Clark L. Brody, manager of the Michigan State Farm Bureau, and others are listed to appear on the program during the meeting.

M. S. C. Horses Win Honors At Ohio Fair

Horse entries from the M. S. C. made a clean sweep of leading prizes in the Belgian and Percheron classes at the Ohio State Fair last week, according to word just received here from R. H. Hudson superintendent of the M. S. C. farm.

Competing against the leading horse herds of the country, the college animals upheld the reputation of Michigan by pulling down no less than 25 prizes in the various events. Everyone of the 12 horses entered at Ohio won at least one ribbon. It is said to be the heaviest winning ever made by the college in big-time competition.

Pervenche, for three years grand champion Belgian mare at the Chicago International, continued her winning ways, taking first place with her colt in the "mare and colt" class. Among other outstanding Belgian winnings were: reserve junior champion, junior champion, and grand champion Belgian mare first and second place two year old mares; first prize filly foal; and first place herd, in the Belgian division.

Percherons did fully as well in bringing ribbons back to Michigan a dozen awards being won in this section. First prize futurity stallion first filly foal; reserve junior champion stallion, and other high places fell to the Percherons.

A carload of sheep, entered by M. S. C. at Ohio, won a total of 19 ribbons, Four breeds; Rambouillet, Shropshire, Oxford, and Hampshire were included in the entries, a number of places being won in each.

The M. S. C. horse string was shipped back from Ohio over the week end, and is being shown this week at Detroit in the Michigan State Fair.

Enters Butter In National Contest

F. C. Mergenthaler, Litchfield, Mich., is a contender for the world's champion storage butter maker, to be decided in connection with the dairy products exhibit at the National Dairy Exposition at Detroit October 6 to 13, according to T. H. Broughton, superintendent of the contests, and director of the State department of dairying at Lansing.

Mergenthaler's butter is matched against 185 entries from 14 states and Canada. Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin, all great butter states, lead in the number of entries. There are ten contestants from Michigan.

The butter storage contest is open to butter makers from all parts of the world. The butter is placed in storage in June and scored at that time. It will be scored again in October under a rating plan adopted by the association. The winner is announced at the exposition.

The dairy products contest also includes fresh butter and cheese classes The entries for these events will close on September 30.

TWO WOMEN PRAISE SAME MEDICINE

Both Helped by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"After the birth of my little daughter I was very badly run-down. I could not think of going to a hospital, but grew steadily worse, being compelled to stay in bed two or three days each week. A friend of my sister's told of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done her, and my sister bought me two bottles of it. I had not taken all of one bottle when I was up and able to do some work. I am truly a booster for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you may use my testimonial."—MRS. MAYME LYNCH, 1119 Island Ave., Ext., McKee's Rocks, Pa.

Mrs. Hope L. Smith, a farmer's wife of Route 3, Floyd, Va., says she was ill for ten years with a good deal of pain in her side and so weak she could hardly work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped her so much she is telling her friends about it.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine.

Insect Lives in Water

An insect belonging to the fly family that spends its whole life in salt sea water is the strange find reported to the Royal Society of England by F. W. Edwards and Dr. P. A. Buxton of the British museum. Doctor Buxton, who recently returned from a voyage to Samoa, found the insect associated with related forms whose larval or infant stages are spent in the water, but whose adult life is lived in the normal aerial surroundings of most insects. This is said to be the first recorded case of an insect going through its whole life cycle in sea water.

What Is a Diuretic?

People Are Learning the Value of Occasional Use.

EVERYONE knows that a laxative stimulates the bowels. A diuretic performs a similar function to the kidneys. Under the strain of our modern life, our organs are apt to become sluggish and require assistance. More and more people are learning to use Doan's Pills, occasionally, to insure good elimination which is so essential to good health. More than 50,000 grateful users have given Doan's signed recommendations. Scarcely a community but has its representation. Ask your neighbor!

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Developments in Mexican Situation—Lively Doings in Geneva.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

JAMES A. FLAHERTY, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, accompanied by the members of the supreme council, called on President Coolidge at White Pine camp and dispelled the popular idea that his order asks that the United States intervene in the Mexican religious controversy. It does not even ask the lifting of the embargo on arms shipments to Mexico, he declared. Instead, it desires only the exercise of whatever good offices the United States can extend under international law to ameliorate conditions in the neighboring republic. He placed much blame on the policies of the last three American administrations, and Mr. Coolidge, who has pursued a policy of "hands off" in the quarrel between Calles and the church, was said to have listened "kindly and patiently" to what the delegation had to say.

Down in Mexico City the congress has assembled and it is expected that the religious situation will be taken up very soon. The President's message dealt with it at some length. There was said to be a good chance that congress, although made up of over 80 per cent of government men, would make certain concessions to the Catholics which may remove some of the objections of the church. The Catholic League for Religious Defense, however, is not dissatisfied with the present situation, its secretary asserting that the economic boycott is so successful that it has practically paralyzed the economic life of the nation. Says he:

"Commerce in Mexico, according to statements by the chamber of commerce itself, has fallen off 50 per cent since the opening of the economic boycott, and industrial organizations are complaining of a large overproduction because of lack of consumers.

"In the interior the boycott is felt terribly. Entire cities, towns and villages have subjected themselves to heroic sacrifices of abstinence. In Aguas Calientes, Arades, and Penjamo no beans are eaten this month, and the civic government in these places is on the verge of bankruptcy.

"This is only the beginning. As time goes on the lines will be drawn tighter. The final effect of the boycott will be to force capital to face the situation and take means of meeting it. It either must further the ends of the boycott or force the government to repeal the objectionable anti-Catholic legislation."

IN MORE ways than one the world court cut quite a figure in the week's news. In Geneva the conference of representatives of 37 nations began discussion of the admission of the United States with the reservations made by the senate. The first three reservations were quickly accepted, but opposition developed to the fourth, which would prevent the League of Nations from amending the court statutes without America's permission. Sir George Foster of Canada led the opposition and was warmly seconded by Markovitch of Jugo-Slavia. The debate grew rather hot but South American delegates intervened to smooth things over. Final action on the fourth reservation was postponed and discussion of the fifth was begun. This provides that the world court shall not, without the consent of the United States, entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest. The belief prevailed in Geneva that the basis of this reservation is a desire on the part of the United States to prevent any attempt by the council of the League of Nations to seek advisory opinions either on immigration problems or questions affecting the Monroe doctrine and Latin America. It was thought likely the reservation would be turned over to a commission for study and advice.

MEANWHILE California was holding a primary election in which the world court was prominent. Senator Shortridge, pro-court, was running for renomination by the Republicans and was opposed by Robert M. Clarke, backed by Senator Johnson and other anti-court leaders. At this writing incomplete returns indicate that Shortridge was victorious by a considerable plurality. Lineberger, anti-court and wet, was trailing far behind. Lieut. Gov. C. C. Young, also supported by Johnson, was leading Gov. Friend W. Richardson and the four other candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Congressman Florence P. Kahn, who is decidedly wet, was renominated, and the wets were leading in several other congressional districts.

On the Democratic side John B. Elliott, who was indorsed for senator by William Gibbs McAdoo, was leading Isador Dockweiler, whom he accused of complicity in a Tammany Hall plot to capture California democracy. But Carl Alexander Johnson, San Diego, dry, also bearing the McAdoo indorsement, was trailing Justus S. Wardell in the gubernatorial race. Wardell also was accused by the McAdoo candidates of trafficking with Tammany.

SENATORS TRAMMELL of Florida and Gooding of Idaho, both of whom voted for American entry into the world court, have changed their minds and are now ready to vote for withdrawal of the ratification. Mr. Trammell said he would offer a resolution for such action when the senate meets in December. The defection of these two would not materially affect the situation, and at the summer White House it was made known that President Coolidge does not anticipate a victory by the anti-court forces. It may be mentioned that Col. Theodore Roosevelt, speaking in the Middle West, declared himself against the world court, though supporting the Coolidge administration in all other respects.

"MA" FERGUSON lost her chance to be governor of Texas for another term when she was defeated in the run-off primary by Dan Moody by nearly two to one. The attorney general, whose nomination by the Democrats is equivalent to election, said the klan was not an issue and Jim Ferguson had found it impossible to make it one.

It appears at this writing that a run-off primary will be necessary September 14 in South Carolina where neither Senator E. B. Smith, Edgar A. Brown nor N. B. Dial had a clear majority for the senatorial nomination. They were standing in the order named.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS delegates were trying hard to find some way to satisfy Spain and Poland and at the same time admit Germany to membership and a permanent seat in the council. The commission at work on plans for reorganization of the council decided that Spain could not have a permanent seat. It adopted Lord Cecil's scheme giving Spain and Poland semi-permanent seats the tenure of which is three years, with a declaration of their re-eligibility.

It seems likely, however, that Spain will quit the league entirely as a result of the refusal of Great Britain and France to attend a conference on the status of Tangier. As was recounted last week, Spain insists that the Tangier district be added to her Morocco protectorate, and the Spanish foreign minister has said flatly that Spain will withdraw from the league unless this is granted. In the house of commons Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, said Britain was willing to discuss with Spain and France the former's request for a league mandate over Tangier, but with due regard for existing treaties. He did not think Geneva was a good place for such a discussion.

Italy is now tied up with Spain by a new treaty of alliance which it is admitted is a direct threat to France in so far as the rule of the Mediterranean basin is concerned. European diplomats were wondering if Mussolini and De Rivera would try to sabotage the meeting of the league.

OVERRIDING the veto of Governor General Wood, the Philippine house of representatives passed the senate bill providing for a plebiscite in the islands on the question of independence. The measure is now up to President Coolidge, who will have six months in which to act after it reaches him. He will have reports from both Governor General Wood and Col. Carmi Thompson, his personal investigator there, to help him make up his mind. In Washington it is believed he will support Wood.

FAYAL, chief of the Azores islands, was hit by a disastrous earthquake that ruined most of the homes in the town of Horta and that was followed by a tidal wave that caused great damage in the village of Feteira. Though probably not more than a score of persons were killed, the injured number several hundred and material losses were immense. Fortunately the temblor came in the daytime when most of the inhabitants of the island were out of doors. The quake was the severest ever experienced in the archipelago.

At about the same time there were earthquakes in several regions of Mexico, and a little earlier Maine had some shocks.

AMERICA has lost two more of her best aviators through airplane accidents. Commander John Rodgers of the navy, hero of the Hawaii flight, fell with his plane into shallow water and was fatally injured. Lieut. Cyrus K. Bettis of the army, who crashed into a mountain in Pennsylvania in a fog, died in a hospital in Washington from spinal meningitis which developed after it was thought he was on the way to recovery.

SERIOUS labor trouble broke out in Manville, R. I., where a mob of 1,800 striking textile mill workers fought a battle with a small force of state police and deputy sheriffs, after an attempt to set fire to a mill. The officers used tear gas bombs, revolvers and riot guns and a number of the rioters were wounded, as were three of the officers. The governor sent a detachment of state troops to maintain order.

In Chicago another open and closed shop struggle impends. A strike of structural iron workers was called on a skyscraper in course of construction as a starter, and the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis award promptly called in strikebreakers to take the places of the union men. Other artisans' unions are likely to become involved. The committee announced it would support any contractor in Chicago who desired to erect steel on the open shop basis.

The long-standing fight between President Lewis of the United Mine Workers and President Farrington of the Illinois miners' union, has resulted in the suspension of the latter by the state executive board. He was forced to admit that he had contracted to enter the employ of a big mining firm whenever he should quit office.

IF RUDOLPH VALENTINO had any sense of humor he must be laughing in his coffin over the outburst of mushy sentimentality and mawkish emotionalism that has followed his lamentable death. Enough here to say that after funeral ceremonies in New York, the remains of the screen star were transported in a special car to Hollywood for burial.

GERTRUDE EDERLE did not long maintain her supremacy as a swimmer of the English channel. Her feat was duplicated by Mrs. Clemington Corson of New York, the mother of two children; and a few days later Ernst Vierkoetter of Germany swam across from France to England in the record time of 12 hours and 42 minutes.

DURING the second year of the operation of the Dawes plan, just ended, Germany met nearly 54 per cent of its reparations payments by means of deliveries of materials. The total payments amounted to 1,220,000,000 gold marks (about $290,360,000) and the deliveries in kind 656,800,000 gold marks (about $156,318,000).

New Place Selected as Cradle of Race

The cradle of the human race may once more be transferred, this time to Australia, where what is declared to be the most archaic known skull was unearthed more than a year ago. Australian scientists say it antedates by unknown ages all other human remains, including the Rhodesian, Piltdown and Tagal skulls, and the Neanderthal relics, which are said to be comparatively modern when put beside the Cohuna skull, so called because it was found near Cohuna. This prehistoric skull was found in red surface loam and the interior was filled with fine reddish sand resembling that of arid regions where there are sand drifts. On the surface of the skull was a thin iron-stained incrustation similar to the drift within, but containing carbonate of lime. Prof. Colin MacKenzie, director of the National Museum of Australian Zoology, now in possession of the skull, believes it belongs to a direct line of the human ascent. The upper jaw projects from the forehead to an extent exceeding that of any known skull, resembling the living anthropoid. The floor of the nose is not defined from the rest of the face, as in modern man, and the bony arches at the side of the face for the support of muscles of mastication are large and prominent. —New York Times.

Scientists Now Read Corn Plant

Secret Code Solved in Which Food Wants Are Very Plainly Written.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The corn plant writes an order for food when there is a shortage in the soil, and it writes in colors. G. N. Hoffer, pathologist of the United States Department of Agriculture, co-operating with the Purdue agricultural experiment station, has solved the secret code in which the food wants are written. His method can be used in the field and requires but a few minutes.

Test Late in Season.

The test is made during the latter part of the growing season, after the ears are well developed. A stalk is cut and split open lengthwise. A solution of sulphuric acid containing a few drops of what the chemists call "diphenylamine" is applied to the cut surface of the stalk. If the plant has had sufficient nitrogen the tissues will turn blue. If the plant has been starved for this food the tissues will be of a yellow-green color.

A lack of potassium in the soil may be detected by examining the tissues at the nodes or joints of the stalk. If the tissues turn red when a solution of potassium thiocyanate is applied, the soil needs potassium. The amount of red color indicates the relative amount available.

Need of Phosphates.

In soils found to be acid in reaction, undersized or stunted plants indicate the need of phosphates, providing climatic conditions were normal during the season. On such soils both lime and phosphates can be profitably used.

Using these means of determining the needs of the corn plant, a field survey was conducted in several states of the corn belt last fall. According to the results many fields in southern Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, do not carry adequate supplies of available potassium for corn. Fields differed markedly in their relative supplies of nutrients, and in many cases the effects of growing corn continuously was shown by a deficiency of either nitrates or potassium.

The fact that the specific needs of the corn plant can be detected in this manner, says Mr. Hoffer, should make the method of great practical value.

Difficulty in Getting a Stand of Red Clover

The increased difficulty in getting a stand of red clover, experienced in late years by growers in many sections of the country, is largely due to improper soil conditions, disease, nonadapted seed, wrong methods of seeding, or to the use of harmful nurse crops, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Improper soil conditions result from constant cultivation and the consequent loss of lime, phosphates, potash and organic matter, making the soil unsuited to the growth of clover.

Such conditions can be remedied by applying the elements lacking and by working in manure and other forms of organic matter.

When clover failure is caused by disease, a disease-resistant variety should be used if available, or some other legume substituted for red clover. If red clover fails on land well supplied with lime, sweet clover can often be used instead.

Location for Trees

Trees are preferably located to one side of the house rather than directly in front of it. Groups of shrubs are placed about the foundation of the house and around the border of the lawn area. Lower shrubs are used about the house and taller ones in the border groups. Sod should not be allowed to encroach upon the shrub areas. The perennial beds and shrubbery groups should be cultivated three or four times during the season.

FARM NOTES

Better put the harvester in the machine shed now rather than next winter.

The round worm is the little pig's worst enemy. Maneuver the pigs to fresh ground.

Sowing wheat before the Hessian fly free date hastens the time when a farmer can retire and live on the interest of his debts.

The time has come for the landlord and tenant to begin working together—the stock-share-lease plan is advantageous to both.

• • •

When the spraying season is over, take the machine apart, wash it out, and clean and oil every connection and wearing surface.

Milk pails and cans should be rinsed with cold water before the milk has a chance to dry on them, and then they should be washed thoroughly in boiling water.

• • •

A high average egg production is much to be desired, but it is still more desirable to keep the cost of the eggs produced to the lowest possible minimum.

A new pocketbook being put on the market has a strip of abrasive-like leather along one side, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The reason? So that the pocketbook will adhere to the side of the pocket if a thief tries to lift it, thus attracting the owner's attention. The purse can be taken out easily by anyone knowing its construction by inserting the fingers between the strip and the pocket.

ONCE WILD FAMILY GREETS TOURISTS

Tourists who register at Traverse City State Park may be met at the door of the caretaker's cottage by a crowd, a chipmunk or kitten, comprising the family circle of B. A. Wolfe, caretaker. "Pigeon," the young crow, grew up in a nest in a pine tree near the rear door; the chipmunk moved into his garage quarters early this spring, and Bozo, the kitten, was rescued from a fox farm where kittens are choice tidbits of food. The chipmunk comes to the door when breakfast is cooking, gorges his share then fills his cheek pouches to capacity and scampers away to his family. He is provided a pound of peanuts each week for storage supply. Strawberries in season were his favorite food. With cheeks almost bursting and juice seeping out, he'd scamper to his favorite woodpile and enjoy his treat.

'Tis said that wild chipmunks are untamable, their bite poisonous and they fasten their sharp teeth with such force that only choking or death can unfasten their hold, but Mr. Wolfe, through kindness, coaxing and feeding, has brought this little wild ground-squirrel into his home where he sits on his lap, eats from his hand and scampers around like a kitten at play.

Deserts Family as Flies Vanish, Then Rears 2nd Brood

After deserting her first fledglings one rainy cold day when no flies were on the wing, a shy Phoebe flycatcher returned to her nest on a rafter of the porch of the caretaker's cottage at the Traverse City State Park a week later, then successfully reared a second family of four.

"I determined she should not sit on that nest again," declared Birney A. Wolfe, caretaker, "after burying her brood that had cried for two days. I threw everything loose about the place at her, stove wood, stones, dirt, sand, but in spite of my bombardment she began sitting on four eggs with assurance of an old hen. Her timidity had vanished. She'd fly down to the porch where I sat, with the defi, 'I am not afraid of you. Hit me if you can.' This time she proved a good mother. Sand flies and moths were shoed into their throats from daylight till dark, often a large moth proving a tidbit for four.

"As they grew larger their small nest looked perilous, but upon examination each tiny claw was found securely caught in the nest lining."

Boy, 11, Helps Father In Kent County Raids

Raymond Wiest, 11-year-old son of Deputy Sheriff Jack Wiest of Grand Rapids, made his debut as a law enforcement officer when he accompanied his father on a raid on a shack in a woods.

Two stills, three 50-gallon barrels of mash and six whisky jugs were destroyed by the deputy and his son.

Onekama Supplies Big Share of Red Raspberries

Red raspberries that fill refrigerator express trains, supply business for two boat lines, meet the needs of four canning factories and in numerous other ways reach the nation's markets, make up the principal business of Onekama, Mich.

A few years ago few raspberries were grown in the vicinity. Strawberries really started the community in the raspberry business. The earlier berries were grown commercially 15 or more years ago. Gradually more and more farmers started raising them. Then it became generally known that black raspberries could be shipped from this community to Chicago and Milwaukee by boat and arrive in fair condition. Subsequently the business grew prosperous.

SMALLEST SEEDS FROM BIG TREES

Michigan landholders who are co-operating with the state department of conservation in replanting land to trees will find of interest the bulletin recently issued by the department, showing the number of seeds to the pound.

Many of the largest forest trees have the smallest seeds, the bulletin indicates. The white birch, which may still be found in some sections attaining such sie that a single bark would make a large canoe, has the smallest seed of all, there being 710,000 such seeds to the pound.

The black spruce comes next, with a half million seeds to the pound, and the yellow birch third with 400,000.

At the far extreme in the list comes the black walnut, 25 of whose seeds weigh a pound. The hickory is near this end of th elist, as are the chestnut and the butternut.

State Savings Accounts Show Record Increase

Michigan has the largest percentage of increase in savings bank accounts since 1925 of any state of the Seventh Federal Reserve District, says the monthly report for the district, but all of the states are still below the average mid-year levels.

Michigan shows a gain of 7.2 per cent compared with the condition of a year ago.

According to the International Geodetic and Physical union, the earth is exactly 7,926 miles and 678 thousandths of a mile in diameter at the equator and 7,899 miles and 464 thousandths of a mile through the poles. This calculation, which was made by a professor at Northwestern university, has been accepted as correct by the scientific world.

It is not generally realized that the insides of windows catch more dirt than the outsides. Try rubbing them inside every day with a clean cloth, and you will find that they will not require washing nearly so often.

Powder should never be used to clean rough or chased brass. Wash the articles well first and dry them. Then rub the surface with half a freshly-but lemon. When quite clean rinse thoroughly in warm water. Let dry and polish with a chamois skin.

It is easy to tell when egg whites have been whipped enough. They are dry and will "point." If you lift the beater out of the mass, a piece of the egg white, or pieces, often an inch long or more, will hang from it and decrease in size to a point.

Long brewing robs both tea and coffee of their flavors. In the first minute of contact between hot water and finely ground coffee you extract about 80 per cent of all the qualities and ingredients you want. Three minutes is the limit for brewing either tea or coffee.

Few spots in America can boast of even one tower to view nature's wonders but near Brooklyn in the Irish Hills are two great towers soaring skyward wherefrom the visitor can see for miles the beautiful region settled more than 150 years ago by the sons of Erin who were brought to this country by a missionary namd Leister.

Chemists at Cornell university have discovered a way to make sandless glass by using a compound of germanium, a rare, newly discovered metal, as a substitute for the usual silica. The metal, extracted from zinc oxide, is a flaky crystalline substance, hard and extremely brittle, and is worth many dollars a gram.

DESCRIBES FIRE SWEEPING FOREST

Giant pines crashing with deafening sounds and the crackling of hot ashes falling in burning flakes on the roof of a log house set in a thicket of virgin pine on a hill by the side of Indian River, aroused Ray Muscott, owner of Muskrat Landing, Michigan's famous "Muskie" fishing grounds, from his midday nap in the cabin.

"I threw open the door and looked out and instantly saw that I was hemmed in by forest fire. A smoke-screen hugged the ground and about my feet swirled white hot ashes that entered the door like wind-swept snow. Two young birds in a tiny nest, which was woven fast to a pine branch, fell in a flaming mass at my feet. Mingled with the roar of the flame and the hiss of burning pine needles, were cries of fear from the throats of both beast and birds of the forest. I ran toward the river a hundred yards distant. A rabbit scurried past me, and I heard another to the left of me, crying like a hurt child, perhaps struck down by a tree. A burning branch struck my shoulder and my shirt was aflame. Just in time I plunged into the cooling waters of the river.

"How the fire started is not known. Some campers are careless with camp fires. Some never break a match, nor put out a camp fire. Fire is the only thing we dread up here. If it once gets a start it takes hours of labor to stop it, and oftentimes not until some of Michigan's playground has been destroyed."

A new vacuum tube for radio receiving sets has been invented in France having two filaments. One is used at a time, but when a filament burns out the tube is so constructed that the other tube can be "cut in" on the "Aa" battery circuit, and the set continues to operate.

MICHIGAN IS BEING DENUDED OF TREES

Thirty or forty years ago lumbermen predicted that the generation of that time would not live to see the last of the pine timber in Michigan, particularly in Montemorency, Alpena and Presque Isle counties. But those who made the prophecy reckoned only with the primitive methods employed in the hauling of logs—the horses and sleigh to the banking ground and then the log drive down the river to the mills. Their dreams were spoiled by the advent of the steam railroad, steam log loaders and other devices which speeded up the work of stripping Michigan of its pines. The pine was then practically extinct for nearly a quarter of a century, and the hardwood and hemlock is being taken off at a rate which will in a few years leave Michigan a treeless state, so far as big timber is concerned, according to conservation reports.

Three of the counties of northeastern Michigan that have been the scene of heavy lumbering activity for the last 50 years are Alpena, Montmorency and Presque Isle. For the last five years there has not been any lumbering in Alpena county worthy of mention.

Montcalm Hospital To Come to Vote in Nov.

Agitation for a county hospital for Montcalm is expected to culminate in a vote on the proposition at the general election in November.

The matter will be placed before the board of supervisors at its next meeting. Plans for the building are expected to include the erection of a fireproof hospital large enough to accommodate patients from the entire county.

Delmer E. Stone

For Sheriff

"To the Voters of Hillsdale County—

I have personally known Delmer E. Stone for more than twenty years. During the period that I was sheriff of Hillsdale County Mr. Stone was my Chief Deputy.

I know Mr. Stone to be a high class officer and I have never known a better one.

He will make an ideal Sheriff and knowing him as I do, I am going to vote for him and I respectfully urge all citizens of Hillsdale County to do likewise.

With Mr. Stone in the Sheriff's office we will have a high class and fearless officer and one who will do his utmost to enforce the law without fear or favor."

SCIENTIFIC FARM MISSIONARY'S AIM

A modern scientific farm, where embryo missionaries to Africa will learn the principles of agriculture which they will later impart to the natives, is the aim of the Marianhill Missionaries who recently acquired a large tract of farm land at Brighton, Mich., near Ann Arbor.

"We believe in teaching the natives to work as well as to pray," declares the Rev. Fr. Thomas, R. M. M., of Detroit, director of the farm. "When they once have learned the dignity of labor it is not difficult to win them over to Christianity. In Africa, especially in Rhodesia, we have transformed thousands of acres of jungle into arable land."

NEW FAIR BUILDING TELLS FARM STORY

A story of Michigan farm life, covered from all angles, will be told in the exhibits at the new agricultural building on the State Fair Grounds, September 5 to 11.

Final check of the organizations and groups which will exhibit in this newest unit of the State Fair equipment, shows that all leading farm interests of the state will be represented. The result, according to Prof. J. F. Cox of the Michigan State College, who is chairman of the agricultural committee of the fair board, will be the most complete story of Michigan farms ever told in exhibit form.

Among the groups which are completing their exhibits this week are: Michigan Farm Bureau, the Grange, the Gleaners, the Michigan State College, the State Department of Agriculture, the Upper Peninsula, the State Crop Improvement Association, the Canners Association, the Detroit Market Gardeners Association, the Michigan Florists Association, and the agricultural press of the state.

Competitive exhibits in horticulture and crops will also be housed in this building, which is said to be the largest agricultural exhibit building in the world.

FAIR VISITORS WILL CAMP IN STATE PARKS

Michigan state parks near Detroit will be used as camp grounds by many of those who drive to the State Fair at Detroit from September 5 to 11, according to P. J. Hoffmaster, superintendent of parks.

Those who tour to Detroit for the Fair, and who wish to camp out on the trip, will find the parks of great convenience. Several of them are within driving distance of an hour or so from the Fair Grounds.

Among the state parks within easy reach of Detroit are: Island Lake State Park, near Brighton on M-16; Dodge Brothers State Park, one-half mile off Woodward Ave., near Birmingham; Bloomer State Park No. 2, one and one-half miles southeast of Rochester, at the head of John R. street; Dodge Brothers State Park, six miles south of Utica, near Gratiot avenue.

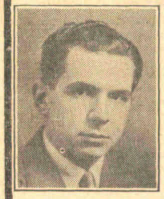
GEORGE ALBERT EMERICH
Pittsford, Michigan
Republican Candidate for the Nomination of
STATE REPRESENTATIVE
PRIMARIES — SEPTEMBER 14, 1926

A man of excellent character, high morals, and capability. He believes in:—A pay-as-you-go policy; an equalization of taxation, so the farmer will not be unjustly burdened; Equal rights for all, special favors for none; Government by the people. He will listen to suggestions from any or his constituency and will honestly endeavor to be a Representative of all the people of Hillsdale County.
A supporter of Green for Governor, but if Groesbeck is elected, will support him as much as is consistent.

YOUR SUPPORT GREATLY APPRECIATED



"I pledge myself to the impartial and fearless enforcement of the laws of the State and Nation. To that end I will, if elected, devote the full measure of whatever ability I may possess, the result of years of study and training. I believe that the welfare of society demands that every breach of the peace of the state, whether trivial or serious be given the unbiased and immediate attention of all officers who are charged with the duty of law enforcement. That is what the tax-payer has a right to expect. That is what he should be given." Your endorsement of this statement may be indicated at the PRIMARY ELECTION, SEPT. 14, '26

By marking your ballot thus: ☒ FOR PROSECUTING ATTORNEY KENNETH G. PRETTIE

Thomas H. Midgley

ACTING SHERIFF

I took my oath of office and I have lived up to and carried out the principles of that oath in my office.

I believe in and practice equal rights to all. Likes and dislikes are not entertained. My friends and my enemies have all been treated alike.

I have been a supporter of Prohibition all my life. I am for Prohibition by principle and not to get votes.

During my first year in office we have confiscated and dumped more liquor than has been confiscated and dumped in the history of the Hillsdale jail. All liquor was dumped under the personal direction of the Commissioner of the Department of Public Safety.

Value of liquor and automobiles confiscated during my first year in office, $7,380.00, and during the eight months of this year $1,761,00.

There Has Been Some Talk About My Expenses

During the last eighteen months of the former Sheriff's administration he made 131 arrests and the city officers of Hillsdale made 37 arrests that were confined in the county jail. During my 18 months in office we have made 214 arrests and the city officers of Hillsdale have made two arrests that were confined in the county jail. The last arrest made by the city officers was made by Ora Kline on March 17, 1925. There were about 100 other arrests made during the present administratration that the parties were taken directly to the Justice's office, by the Sheriff's officers.

The Sheriff's department is now being operated at no extra expense to the tax-payers. All criminal fees are now paid through the Board of Supervisors and uot direct to the officers as under the previous administration. The county records will substantiate these statements.

I have been too busy with my Sheriff's duties to do any campaigning.

Your vote at the Primaries September 14, 1926, is your stamp of approval of the present administration and will be appreciated.

A big Cadillac touring car driven by parties from Akron, Ohio, turned turtle on the highway east of North Adams Sunday morning. The driver turned out to avoid another car and in doing so, got too close to the edge of the road and the clay acted as grease. The car turned over, splintering the windshield and the doors. Three men and a woman were riding in the car. The driver was quite seriously injured in the chest and knee by the impact of the steering wheel. The woman was badly frightened and shaken up and all were more or less cut by flying glass. Dr. McFarland was called and rendered first aid and Bentz Brothers cleaned up the wreck.

That the two weeks of the practical life of a soldier, together with the drill and the discipline of their regular hours of military training throughout the year, help to make better men and better citizens we may not doubt. We may disagree concerning the desirability of military training. That is to be expected in these days when we so much hope that the world is on the border line of a reign of universal and permanent peace. But with the example of these fine upstanding young soldiers before us we are constrained to acknowledge the practical value in every day life of this organization and training.—Port Huron Times Herald.

Old Landmark Cut down

The many citizens of Pittsford will be surprised at the wonderful sight they see as they look south on Main street from the 4 corners. For many years the view from the corners was an old dilapidated hotel and an ugly silver poplar. Since the fire nearly two years ago when the hotel and corner burned the old tree looked more forlorn than ever. Wednesday of this week, the telephone linemen cut the old tree down and this removed the last land mark. The view now is only of the Reporter office. Just as soon as the old cellars can be filled up and this corner cleaned up Pittsford will have the champion "Backyard Golf" court of the "Bac.k There will also be room to work some of the thousands of autos that whiz thru the village.—Pittsford Reporter.

Save Money-Fence Now

THE easily driven "RED TOP" steel drive post has made fence building possible at this season. With this post there are no post holes to dig, so it doesn't matter how hard or dry the ground may be. With the "RED TOP" One Man Driver you can drive 200 to 300 of these superior steel posts a day.

At the low prices we are quoting on "RED TOPS" and fence there's a double advantage in building new fences and repairing old ones now.

A good many farmers around here are doing the bulk of their fencing during the fall season—right now. When the spring rush of work comes on they will have that much less to do.

"RED TOPS" for Low Cost Temporary Fences

We've been selling lots of "RED TOPS" for temporary fences this season. They are easily driven and the wire quickly attached. They can be pulled and the fence moved with so little labor and in such a short time.

It is a pleasure for us to sell you "RED TOP" Posts. We know they will give you lasting satisfaction. They have been doing it in this community for years.

Come in right away and arrange for the posts and fence you will need to put your fence lines in tiptop shape this fall. We are always glad to help you get the biggest value going for every dollar you spend with us. "RED TOPS" are one of our best offers today.

BRITISH SIMILAR TO MOTORISTS HERE

A letter in serio-comic vein, signed "Rugby," published in the Autocar, an English periodical, has a certain parallel in the automobile driving practiced all too often in Michigan. It is quoted herewith in the hope that automobile drivers who read it will, if it applies to them, quit their foolishness.

"We have been told that any fool can drive a car and most fools do." No doubt this is right, up to a point Any fool can drive a car, but it is in stopping the beast that they come unstuck. Ninety per cent of accidents are caused by fools who drive but cannot stop. Through towns, over crossroads, in passing and in overtaking, they drive on their hooter (that is, sounding the horn without slackening speed(and trust to the other fellow giving way. It is when two of the same species meet that trouble comes.

"The man past middle age who takes to motoring and buys a big, fast car is the most dangerous man on the road. He tells his friends that he learned to drive in three days. He has no idea of pace or distance, and has no road sense whatever. His one idea of getting out of trouble is to jam his foot on the accelerator instead of slowing down.

"The time arrives, sooner or later, when he finds himself in such a position that neither violent 'hooting' nor acceleration will help him. After the crash, which, of course, was the other fellow's fault entirely, what is left of him either becomes a motorist and courses all those who are then what he was before his crash, or he gives up driving altogether. In either case, the safety of those who use the highways is much increased."

State Closes Kill of Partridges for Year to Save Bird

Following closing of partridge shooting in certain counties of Michigan last year, the State Conservation Commission has issued an order closing the entire state this year. This action is in line with the recommendation of the American Game Protective Association that during the prevailing scarcity of ruffled grouse, closed seasons be invoked to prevent destroying all the brood stock.

The shortage of ruffled grouse in some states is really alarming and great care should be exercised to preserve what few birds there are, otherwise their restoration will be indefinitely delayed. The region of the most serious losses from disease, or whatever may have been the cause of the sudden disappearance of the partridges, seems to include Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Tax Rate Lower as Same Financial Goal Is Sought

Michigan tax rate for the coming year will be 2:21, the state administrative board decided. The amount to be raised will be $17,800,000, the same as a year ago, when the tax rate was 2.44.

The board also directed the auditor general not to spread a levy to cover $3,300,088 appropriated by the legislature, the money to cover these appropriations beings raised by fees, etc.

ELEVEN YEARS OF SUCCESS

The CITIZENS' MUTUAL AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE COMPANY of Howell Finished Eleven Years of Success on Aug. 30th.

The company started in 1915 and has developed a state-wide automobile insurance organization. The company now has around 60,000 policy holders and assets of over $800,000 and has an organization to handle claims in every county of Michigan.

The company is finding 1926 its banner year and you can find a local agent in every city and cillage in the state.

TURTLE TRAPPING REVIVED BY BOY

Carter, a Mottville, Mich., boy, has developed an unusual business this summer by exploiting the meat of snapping turtles as a table delicacy. To secure funds for his collegiate course he hit up on the idea early in May and now has regular customers that insure his objective.

The young man has a number of "hoop" traps which he sets in a mill pond and several small stream tributaries to the St. Joseph river and captures his turtles with comparative ease. The hard part of his job comes in cleaning the amphibians, certainly no easy task.

He splits the shells on the under side, making his breaks at the sutures, and then, with a sharp knife, cuts the flesh away from the upper shell. He then cleans it thoroughly and, after icing it, carries it to nearby towns where he disposes of it at the rather fancy price of 40 cents a pound.

Turtle-trapping, according to stories on file in county newspapers bearing dates as far back as 50 years ago, was a common pursuit. But during the last 25 years it had been neglected until Carter took it up again.

Four Noted Men to Be Honor Guests

Four men of national reputation and their families will be honored guests at the Louis Campau centennial celebration in Grand Rapids, September 23 to 26. Their names, proposed to the city commission by the general centennial committee, have won offical approval. They are Martin A. Ryerson, Chicago, donor of Ryerson library at Grand Rapids; Anton G. Hodenpyl, Locust Valley, L. I., who occupies a leading position in public utility enterprises; Stewart Edward White, Burlingame, Calif., son of Mrs. T. Stewart White, of Grand Rapids, and an author and sportsman of international renown; Will Howe Foote, Old Lyme, Conn., an associate of the National Academy and landscape and figures painter.

Ryerson is a grand nephew of Louis Campau, the city's first settler. He was also donor of the Ryerson physical laboratory at the University of Chicago, from which two Nobel prize winners have been selected.

Hodenpyl, who presented the cty with the park along Reed's lake, known as Hodenpyl woods, began work with the lumber firm of L. H. Withey and company.

White recently was a member of the expedition which hunted big game in Afrca with bow and arrow. Among his first stories which placed him prominently before the public were those based upon the lumbering industry in Michigan.

Foote, a graduate of the Grand Rapds high school and a son of E. H. Foote, won, in 1902, the third Hallgarten prize in the National Academy of Design. He took a silver medal at the San Francisco exposition in 1915 and was a medal winner at the St. Louis exposition in 1904.

Three Charlevoix Towns Unite for Good Roads

Through the untiring efforts of "Uncle" George H. Van Pelt, who has been known to Charlevoix residents as an advocate of good roads for 43 years, the three cities of Charlevoix county have united in an effort to have the road around Lake Charlevoix paved with concrete. A committee composed of citizens from the three cities, together with the county road commssioners, recently framed a resolution to be sent to Lansing, asking the state's aid on certain portions of the road.

There are parts of the projected highway on which, under the law, it will be impossible for the state to give aid. Because of this, the Charlevoix County Good Concrete Roads Association, voted that it would be necessary to invoke the authority of the Covert act to finance the building. Under this law, the most of the construction costs are paid over a long term of years by property owners who receive the greatest benefit from the road.

Admiral Given Snow's Place from Michigan

Rear Admiral George Rock, promoted to that rank when Rear Admiral Snow retired July 31, is a former Hastings, Mich., boy. He graduated from the local high school with the class of 1884 and was appointed to the naval academy in Annapolis.

Upon graduating from Annapolis he was given his choice of going to Massachusetts Institute of Technology or to Glasgow, Scotland, for further work. He chose Glasgow and studied naval construction there.

The strictly tailored costume, either in one piece or in jumper style, of chiffon in white or delicate colors is one of the contradictions of the mode that Paris and New York sponsor with enthusiasm.

DETROITERS ARE IN $700,000,000 DEAL

Announcement has been made of a monster deal to develop the power of the St. Lawrence River, involving an immediate payment of several million dollars, an initial development expenditure of $60,000,000 and an eventual outlay of $700,000,000.

The project which threatens to disrupt the plans of the so-called "water power trust," including the General Electric and Westinghouse interests, is in the hands of New York, Detroit and Ohio financiers.

The new development may lessen Canadian interests in the international movement to dam the St. Lawrence through co-operation of New York State and the Province of Ontario.

STATE HOLSTEINS GROW IN VALUE

The name "Holstein" may mean much or little to the shoe clerk and the stenographer and the garage mechanic of Michigan's cities. If they were born on a farm, the word will stir recollections of a most intimate sort, such as the time when Daisy kicked over the milk pail, about 4 o'clock one frosty morning; their knowledge of Holsteins may be limited to observations, made while speeding through the country at 40 per, of black and white animals outlined pleasingly against a green summer landscape; or they may not know whether "Holstein" is the name of a breed of cows or a cigaret.

Whether or not they know, and whether or not they care, they, along with some 4,000,000 other citizens of Michigan, are part owners of the biggest and most valuable aggregation of Holstein cattle in the world.

These Holstein cattle, 1,600 in number, constitute the herds at 13 State institutions. Their total value is in the neighborhood of $500,000.

It was back in 1895 that the first of the State-owned herds was started at the Pontiac State Hospital. Since that time, many animals famous in the dairy world have been developed at the various institutions.

Their blood is now distributed through virtually all the high grade strains in existence.

For many years the State herds were managed as separate units. The establishment of the State Department of Agriculture, however, made it possible to place them all under one supervision. To H. W. Norton, Jr., director of the bureau of animal industry and the son of a widely known Livingston county breeder of Holsteins, fell the task of looking after them.

"The herds are kept primarily for the purpose of supplying milk to the inmates of these institutions and the officers and attendants in charge," said Mr. Norton. "To be sure, the necessary milk supply could be purchased without much difficulty in most cases in the vicinity of the institutions, but many complications might arise from such a system and the most satisfactory results can only be secured where the source of supply is directly under control and supervision of the institution management."

Phone Rate Cuts Are Announced by State Commission

Reduction in telephone rates on certain classes of calls was announced by the Michigan public utilies commission, the most important change being the advancement of the time of beginning of the evening rate to 7 o'clock. It has been effective in the past after 8:30 p. m. The new rates become effective October 1.

The order also makes provision for the reversal of charges on station to station calls where the amount of the charge is more than 25 cents.

The evening rate on calls of an initial day rate of 35 to 50 cents will be 35 cents under the new order, while on calls of an initial rate of more than 50 cents the rate will be approximately 75 per cent of the initial day rate, figured on five-cent divisions. The order also makes slight changes in the person to person rate.

The commission also ordered the United Home Telephone company and the Bell Telephone company to appear before it September 23 and show cause why the toll facilities between Muskegon and Grand Rapids should not be increased. The Bell company is ordered to appear the same day and show cause why the Detroit exchange rate should not be extended to the territory of the former village of Redford, now a part of Detroit.

Golf Course at Grand Rapids Pays Cemetery Debt

Grand Rapids' experiment with the operation of municipal golf courses has been completed. The result of the xperiment is that there will be more of them and that, specifically, the bonds issued for the payment of Woodlawn cemetery, the city's most recent burial ground, will be met by the profits from golf.

Three years ago there was a 10-acre grass plot in John Ball park, which seemed to have no particular place in the park's general scheme. Eugene V. Goebel, municipal superintendent of parks at that time, announced his intention fo building a Lilliputian course there. He received some encouragement, but there were many skptical city officials who were of the opinion that the Kent, Highlands, Cascade Hills and Masonic Country Clubs of Grand Rapids would accommodate all those persons within the city who knew how to play golf or were interested.

Undaunted, Goebel completed the little nine-hole course with is total of 868 yards. The fees were fixed at 5 cents for nine holes, or 25 cents for 18 holes. Then the city hall discovered that Grand Rapids' citizens would play golf fi given the opportunity.

GIRL, UNCLE SAM'S WEATHER PROPHET

"Fair and Warmer." Did you ever stop to think how this little message ever came to your attention or who it was who seemed so certain of its meaning? It is just a good guess?

Miss Phyllis Day, the only woman ever to have this post in the Grand Haven weather bureau, is daily becoming one of the prphets that Uncle Sam pays to tell you and me just what may be expected in the line of weather and by an exchange of messages keeps you informed as to what they are having in Idaho or the great northwest where weather is supposed to be made.

Miss Day is just 17 years old and was to have graduated from the local high school next year.

"My father died last year leaving my mother with four children, two of whom are only four and six years old," said Miss Day, "and I wanted to do something to help. So if I was going to try to take a man's place in the family why not go after a man's job? I knew this position would soon be open and so I went to the observer, Mr. Heyer, and told him I would like to try for it.

"'Well, well! do you think you can climb a ladder when the wind is blowing 50 miles an hour and fix those lanterns and flags in all sorts of weather?' he asked, with a twinkle in his eye.

"I had not thought of all those things when I first thought about getting the position, but I had to be game and so I said, 'O, yes, I could always climb to the ceiling in the gym.' But I'll whisper to you that this is not like the gym.

"You see I had made up my mind to help the other children get their education and I just must get this opportunity for it may lead to better things and is about the only profession where they teach you as you go along."

Pair Fight for Life In Hospital Where Romance Began

Fighting galalntly for life in the hospital where their romance started 20 years ago, in Battle Creek, when Lucy Pearce was a pretty student nurse and her cavalier, a young attendant at Nichold Memorial hospital, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bartram are making a brave stand against the grim reaper.

Seriously injured in a motor accident which cost Mrs. Hilda Carveth her life, the Bartrams have been confined to Nicholas.

Lucy Pearce entered training at Nichold Memorial hospital more than 20 years ago and her sunny personality attracted the interest of Charles Bartram, one of the men nurses. Shortly after graduation from training school wedding invitations were issued.

REGAINS MEMORY TO FIND WIFE WED

A story resembling Tennyson's "Enoch Arden" has been unfolded in Petoskey woven around a Petoskey girl still in her early twenties. The husband she thought was dead turned up last week to claim their two children .one of whom was born after he left Petoskey and whom, until then, he had never seen.

The girl is the former Dorothy Scheidel, who, when 14 years old, was so anxious to fight Germany that after her bother had joined the army she took his old Boy Scout uniform and hiked and "bummed" rides all the way to Grand Rapids, where she tried to enlist. She was caught and sent home to her mother, Mrs. Sarah Scheidel, but later was allowed to aid in canteen work in New York city.

It came to pass that when the boys came home she me Sergt. William E. Davis from the battle-scarred fields of France, where he had suffered shrapnel wounds and had been shell shocked and gassed. He had been in the hospital six times, but had recovered sufficiently so that after his marriage to Dorothy he entered the employ of the Petoskey Portland Cement company, and for a time all seemed well.

But not long after the birth of the first baby the doughty ex-sergeant was obliged to go to the Walter Reed hospital in Washington, D. C., for another operation.

The second child was born three weeks after he left Petoskey.

Later, when the young mother endeavored to locate her husband at the hospital she was informed that there were three William E. Davises enrolled there. One had died, one had walked out when no guard was watching and the third was not her man. The two who had not died were reported to have blank minds and it was thought that the Davis, Dorothy wanted was the one who had died. By this time the new baby was seven months old.

Dorothy went to Flint to work to support her little children. For a long time she believed their father was alive and wandering from place to place with no remembrances of her or of their little ones. She tried broadcasting appeals by radio and had her story and his picture printed in many newspapers, but three years after she had seen him she filed a bill in Flint for a divorce, obtained it and was awarded the custody of the children. That was two years ago.

Not long after Dorothy was married to Paul Pringle of Flint. Now he and Dorothy have a pretty little baby of their own.

But Davis was not dead. He was the man who had eluded the guards and quietly walked away from the Walter Reed hospital in Washington. He had forgotten Dorothy and that he was the father of two children. He obtained an assignment at the arsenal at Rock Island, Ill., and went from there to Cheyenne, Wyo. Then he reenlisted in New York city and after a while was assigned to duty in Detroit.

It was in Detroit that the miracle happened. He was struck hard on the head by a golf ball while out on the course and was knocked unconscious. When he came to he remembered Dorothy and wanted her and the children.

Newaygo Man Scion of Oldest Family In Michigan Vale

Newaygo boasts of a resident who represents one of the oldest families that settled in the Muskegon Valley. Tom Aiken, in whose veins flows the blood of two races, French and Indian, is the grandson of Etienne Lamandier, who built a trading post on Muskegon lake early in the nineteenth century.

During the war of 1812 Lamandier was seized by the British, taken captive to Detroit, and held there until the cessation of hostilities in 1814. Returning to Muskegon lake he reopened his post. His son, Alexander Etienne Lamandier, was born at the post in 1810. When he reached manhood he went to the Old Womans Bend, two miles below Newaygo, and establishel a trading post.

It was here that Tom Aiken was born, and he still lives at the site of the first settlement in the Muskegon valley. The white settlers found the word "Etienne" hard to pronounce and they corrupted it into "Aiken."

Church Survey Shows Membership In State Declines

A decreasing number of church members in proportion to the population, especially out in the "open country," where in many cases there is no resident pastor, was found to be the general situation in five counties of lower Michigan in a "church and Sunday school" survey conducted by the department of sociology, at Michigan State college.

Results of the study in Clinton, Eaton, Livingston, Ingham and Shiawassee counties conform in general to the data obtained by the Institute of Social and Religious Research in four other Michigan communities, according to Dr. Eben Mumford, head of the college sociology department.

In the five counties there are 335 churches, divided among 28 denominations. One-fourth are without resident pastors. One-half of the 334 have memberships of less than 000. About 29 per cent of the people in these counties were church members in 1916, and onyl about 24 per cent in 1925.

2 Boys Are Barred From Trip Home as Runaway Sequel

The lure of the bright lights and billowing tent tops of a circus have drawn many an adventure-craving lad from his too-peaceful home, only to have dissillusionment and a tired body send him hime with a fervent "Never again!" on his lips. But James Swan and Thomas Bunting, both 18 years old, and to whom circus life has become anathema through bitter experience, are finding their way home blocked by the immense barrier of United States immigration laws.

They entered the office of the Detroit imigration authorites, after having hiked from Hamilton, Ohio. Footsore and hungry, they told of having joined a circus, Swan in Chatham, Ont., and Bunting in Toronto, his home town.

The two youths deserted the circus at Hamilton and started for Detroit, securing automobile rides for part of the distance. When they reached Detroit they had no money and could not cross the river to Windsor. Thinking thta the authorities would send them across once they heard their story, the two boys gave themselves up.

Instead they are being held while the well-oiled, but extensive machinery of the federal government proceeds with their deportation.

Man in Jail Refuses to Leave Due to Hurts

Joe Coleman is in the Isabella county jail without a charge lodged against him and Sheriff George Richmond cannot put him out.

Coleman, who is Polish, was badly injured when the car he was driving took to the ditch several miles from Mt. Pleasant. The doctor found that the only hospital in town was filled to capacity so he had Coleman carried on stretchers to the jail.

DEARDORN VOTES ON BIG BOND ISSUE

In preparation for an inflow of 70,000 population within the next three years, Dearborn, the magic city in the shadow of Ford's great River Rouge plant and the home of the Ford Motor Company, will vote October 4, on a bond issue of $2,440,000 for a system of trunk sewers.

The lack of adequate sewer facilities has long been one of the most serious handicaps to the growth of the Dearborn district, and it is expected that with the removal of this handicap by the commencement of sewer construction, Dearborn will grow at a rate, exceeding even the most optomistic estimates.

The plan to be voted upon provides for the construction and financing of trunk sewers only, together with the Rouge intercepter and the pumping station and treatment plant. Lateral sewers to which house and building connections are to be made, and which will be constructed in streets or alleys and joining to the trunk sewers will be installed and financed by special assessment districts in the same manner that storm sewer laterals were installed within the former limits of Dearborn.

As soon as the master plan has been approved by the voters, it will be possible for the Commission to receive petitions for lateral sewer construction. If any district is so located as to be able to obtain a temporary outlet, lateral sewer construction can commence in that district immediately and such lateral sewers can be connected to the trunks as the contractors complete them.

This system will provide trunks for practically all the developed area in Dearborn.

The commission also submitted to the people the question of issuing $500,000 in bonds for further water main extensions. This issue will not only extend water mains to practically every residence in Dearborn, but will also finance a main to connect with the Detroit system. Detroit will pay for the major portion of this connection. It will remove every possibility of a water shortage in Dearborn.

Good Elimination Is Essential to Good Health.

THE kidneys are the blood filters. If they fail to function properly there is apt to be a retention of toxic poisons in the blood. A dull, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backaches, headaches, and dizziness are symptoms of this condition. Further evidence of improper kidney function is often found in burning or scanty passage of secretions. LUXURIOUS UTILITY COATS; AUTUMN MILLINERY IS HERE

COMES now autumn with winter not far away and what has fashion to say in regard to the coats we will wear to protect us from chilling winds? Briefly let the answer be—luxurious plaids, fur-collared, and if it so please you, fur-lined.

An increasing difference in styling is manifesting itself between the sports or utility coats and the dressier types for more formal occasion. While the latter is taking on all sorts of new vagaries in the way of fanciful sleeves and decorative features, the coat which we will serve for play, for work, for school and for all practical daytime affairs is remaining loyal to the regulation slim silhouette, stressing warm deep-pile fabrics and wondrous fur collars and sometimes long revers at the front opening. An interesting item about some of the lighter weight fur-lined cloth coats is that they are reversible.

Deep, roomy useful patch pockets are a prominent feature for the coming season's practical coat. The picture defines a very stylish model of handsome wool plaid, its brilliant colors accented in contrast to the wide, plain but very elegant sealskin collar. The cleverly designed pockets and cuffs add a pleasing note of variation in that plaid-on-the-bias is used for trimming.

Among coats for motoring, traveling and general sports fur-lined suede models are appealingly styled.

To much cannot be foretold in regard to lavish fur trimmings, but for the present many of the fall models show merely the fur collars. Coats of fur fabric with trimming of genuine fur are proving an interesting new subject in the realm of later winter wraps.

Not this season will madame or miss be expected to put on a hat and wear it, becoming or not becoming. It is the yield-to-the-touch chapeau which is making its debut for autumn and winter. With a deft pull here, a clever kink there and a dimpling or denting-after-it-is-on of the crown milady tunes her headwear to her own individual style of beauty from now on or at least until further notice.

The new exquisitely fine felts and velours let their modishness be accented through rippling brims and adjustable crowns. Just as important as the felts and even more so, are the muchly bestitched, besmocked and beshirred velvet hats, most of which are as limber as a wireless, unstiffened shape can be. The millinery group in the picture records some vastly important style items.

The little hat in the lower left corner of this collection has three outstanding features, namely, it is smocked, is styled of smart-looking suede cloth and exploits the popular beige coloring.

Stitching is one of the stressed treatments for velvet. Sometimes the stitching is so close that when done in thread contrasting the velvet the effect is of a solid coloring. The graceful velvet hat shown last in the picture shows a profuse stitching, also one of the new whimsical soft brims.

The center model to the left, too, is of velvet and being of the extremely stylish vagabond type it may be bent to become.

It is everywhere apparent that brim bindings are featuring the newer felt shapes. Note with what nicety the brim is bound and the crown be-ribboned in the hat illustrated first.

Hatter's plush, please do not forget, is to be a leading medium for the styling of hats. Note its use for the model shown to the right center.

Chicks Knew the Call

The perplexing problem of identifying 135 stolen chickens from a flock of 5,000 was solved by Mrs. Alfred Garand at Williamstown, N. J. When the police asked her to prove ownership, Mrs. Garand stood in an adjacent field and began to whistle "There's no place like home." One by one the chickens hopped out of the flock and came over to her until 135 chickens, looking very much like brothers and sisters, stood peeping and crowing at her feet. The woman explained that every morning before feeding her flock she whistled that tune in the poultry house, a signal for straying chicks to crowd around the cracked-corn hopper.

Big Speedway Planned

What is projected as the largest motor speedway in the world is being planned for Sydney, Australia. The track will be on the outskirts of the town, two miles in length and 100 feet wide. It will be a part of Blacktown, a suburb of Sydney.

Etruscan Study Planned

The Etruscans, predecessors of the Roman civilization in the Italian peninsula, are to have their little-known history investigated by a group of Italian scholars, who organized for this purpose at a national Etruscan congress recently held at Milan. Present knowledge of the Etruscan race and its culture is very fragmentary, though they had a high civilization and proud cities in Italy when Rome was a mere collection of huts beside the Tiber. Their influence was strongly felt in the days of the early republic, and survivals of their religion probably held in the cults of Rome to the very end of paganism. It is believed by one of the Italian scholars interested in the movement that the famous buried city of Pompeii was originally an Etruscan settlement.

Lusitania Still Cruising

Every once in a while you will read in the newspaper that some treasure-seeking expedition is about to raise the Lusitania. But you never hear it has been raised. A French salvage expert holds the opinion that the big ship never went to the bottom.

The sea where it sank is very deep, and the tremendous pressure from below, he thinks, kept the great liner afloat many fathoms down. Its great hull has probably floated hundreds of miles distant in the 11 years that have passed since the German submarine fired its fatal torpedo that sent so many women and children to a watery grave.—Capper's Weekly.

First 24 Hours of Life Baby's Hardest Time

By MARIE K. JOHNSON

Marie K. Johnson

Undernourishment is one of the most common of the causes of infant mortality, according to a survey recently undertaken in Chicago. Statistics show that of 4,522 babies under one year of age that died in 12 months, 988 died in the first 24 hours.

Eight hundred and seventy-six died in the first six days, exclusive of the first 24 hours, and 1,798 died from the seventh day to the sixth month. Eight hundred and sixty died in the last six months of the year. The survey indicated that a surprisingly large number of infants are artificially fed, which condition, doctors agree, had a marked bearing on their undernourished conditions. Naturally, no one food may prove satisfactory in every case, although the survey showed that evaporated milk in many cases had proved an excellent substitute for mother's milk. This may be explained by reason of the fact that evaporated milk is simply pure, concentrated cow's milk from which 60 per cent of the water has been removed. It contains practically every element necessary for good health and is consequently an excellent builder of bone and tissue.

Although authorities on health recommend evaporated milk as a baby food, like other substitutes for the natural supply, it should not be considered as a food complete in itself. Addition of orange or tomato juice, barley water or lime water is important in providing adequate diet for the infant.

For babies, milk of dependable purity is essential. Market milk will not keep for any length of time and is also liable to contamination, especially in hot weather, while evaporated milk, hermetically sealed in sterilized containers, remains as fresh and pure as on the day it was canned.

Sterility in evaporated milk, authorities agree, is one of the most important points in its favor. In processing, evaporated milk is subjected to 240 degrees heat for a half hour, thereby removing all possibility of bacterial life being present in the milk. Heat is the only preservative for this type of milk and the heat has the further beneficial effect of making the curds of milk more flocculent and easier to digest.

NOTES OF THE STATE FAIR

The 1926 Michigan State Fair will be the 77th in the history of the great state exposition.

The first Michigan State Fair was held in 1849. It has been held annually since, with the single exception of 1893.

Livestock premium lists for the 1926, Michigan State Fair rate with the leading three or four in the country, from the point of view to correct balance in allotments, according to Prof. G. A. Brown, of the Michigan State College.

PARISH GREETS NEW PASTOR

Fr. McQueen, Formerly of Flint, Honored With Reception

DETROIT—An informal reception in honor of the Rev. Fr. F. W. McQueen, the new pastor of St. Vincent's Church, was held recently in the church hall at 14th and Dalzelle streets. The program included several entertainment numbers as well as addresses of welcome by representatives of various organizations in the parish.

Father McQueen, who succeeds the late Rt. Rev. Msgr. J. G. Doherty as pastor of St. Vincent's, one of the oldest parishes on the west side, was pastor of St. Matthew's Church in Flint, Mich., for six years and prior to that rector of St. Joseph's in Kalamazoo. He was ordained priest 27 years ago.

As a spiritual token of their appreciation of his services, several hundred members of St. Matthew's Parish societies received Holy Communion at his farewell Mass there. In the evening more than 400 persons, including local and visiting clergy and Protestant as well as Catholic laity, attended a complimentary dinner in the Hotel Durant in his honor.

While pastor in Flint, Father McQueen completed the new St. Michael's Church and School and took a leading part in founding St. Joseph's Hospital.

State Farmers Get New Fair Building

That Michigan agricultural organizations and interests have been given a wonderful opportunity to tell the vital story of quality production in all farm products, through the medium of the new agricultural building at the state fair, is the opinion of experts from the M. S. C.

The new building was formally dedicated at Detroit last week, taking rank as one of the finest exhibit buildings in the world. L. Whitney Watkins, chairman of the board of managers of the state fair presided at the presentation ceremonies, President Kenyon L. Butterfield of M. S. C. accepting on behalf of the farmers of the state.

Good indication of the value of the building in making possible the graphic display of Michigan's farm stories was given last week. Practically all of the state's leading organizations were included in the list of those who had attractive exhibits.

Flowes, fruit, and grains filled the floor space in the center of the building, all being arranged around a central fountain, beside which an orchestra played during the afternoon and evening hours.

The state farm bureau, the grange, the gleaners, the crop improvement association, the M. S. C., the State Department of Agriculture, the Detroit market gardeners association, the canners association, and the Upper Peninsula were all represented by educational displays which told stories of great interest to Michigan farm folk.

The appointment of John C. Smith, N. D. as a director of the Federal Land Bank of Saint Paul is another instance where the Federal Farm Loan Board has appointed a farmer as a district director. Announcement of Mr. Smith's appointment was contained in news dispatches from Washington a few days ago, and today Mr. Smith was here to attend his first meeting. He succeeds Paul A. Preus who recently resigned because of ill health. Mr. Smith was born on a Cook county, Illinois farm, and he has lived almost continuously on a farm ever since. It was in 1902 that he purchased a farm in North Dakota, while still working a farm in Illinois. Investment in North west farm land was inspired by a conviction that a bright future was in store for this section. In 1910 Mr. Smith moved to North Dakota and located on a farm near Mandan which he had purchased the year before, and for the past fifteen years he has been actively engaged in the successful operation of his farm lands. He is looked upon throughout the Northwest as a competent authority on all farm problems and as such is regarded as a valuable addition to the land bank board,

Twenty States Send Dairy Judging Team

Twenty vocational high school dairy cattle judging teams selected in competition among their respective high schools in as many states, will participate in a cattle judging contest at the National Dairy Exposition in October, according to E. E. Gallup, state supervisor of agricultural vocational education. The winning team will be adjudged the Smith Hughes championship.

The De Laval Separator Company will award a $400 scholarship to the vocational student making the highest number of points in judging all breeds of dairy cattle The American Jersey Cattle Club also offers a $400 scholarship to the individual ranking first in judging Jerseys. The Holstein-Friesian Club offers a like reward.

On Saturday evening, October 9, The Michigan State Farm Bureau is banqueting the teams at the Detroit Y. M. C. A. Dr. C. H. Lane of the Federal Board of Vocational Education, Washington, D. C. will be the toastmaster.

East is East, and West is West, but the "twain" will meet at the National Dairy Exposition in October. Entries were received a few hours apart from Lee's Hill Farm, Morristown, New Jersey, and the Billiwhack Stock Farm, Santa Paula, California. They are the leading stock farms in their respective sections, and are splendid examples of the high-class dairy cattle that will be at America's premier dairy gathering.

Gen. Andrews Will Stay On The Job

Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, who reached New York, August 14, on his return trip from London, makes the gratifying announcement that he will not give up his position as prohibition enforcement chief, but will resume his task with renewed zeal and confidence. It will be recalled that before he sailed for England he presented his resignation to Secretary Mellon, to be accepted after he had gotten the enforcement machinery in shape, but he was prevailed upon to withhold it Now, we are told, he may remain indefinitely.

"I am quite optimistic over the enforcement outlook," Gen. Andrews is reported as saying. "I have as much enthusiasm for the job as I did when I first came in here. I believe Congress will pass the essential legislation needed to dry up our borders and we have other plans to stop the smugglers. Once this phase of the enforcement is taken care of, our work will be much simplified."

Gen. Andrews said he had reports from his administrators showing that contraband liquor was being sold in the larger cities, particularly Chicago, Detroit and Pittsburgh, but that "enforcement conditions in these cities were improving." He said the reports indicated the administrators were building up "very efficient organizations" aimed chiefly at stopping the "largest leaks." He will make an inspection trip of both the Mexican and Canadian borders late in September. He may also visit Florida to inspect the dry entrenchments erected there against smugglers.

A new prohibition enforcement program, based upon the erection of a bone dry wall along every American border and including an intensive campaign against all liquor smugglers, will be placed in effect. The new policy will be drafted upon the anti-smuggling agreement negotiated in London recently and upon the actual experiences of the newly appointed district administrators throughout the nation in the last six months.

Congress will be asked next December to help the program along by enacting the prohibition legislation, which failed of passage in the last session. This will include measures intended to suppress smuggling, strengthen the coast guard and give the prohibition bureau authority to use all other federal border agents in the suppression of liquor smuggling. If given the aid of narcotic, immigration and customs agents, treasury officials declared, they will be able virtually to stamp out the smuggling of contraband across the borders.

Gen. Andrews reports himself as highly elated with the results of his trip to London. "I believe we are now on the high road to effective enforcement," he said. "Foreign governments are working with us to eliminate smuggling and we are making good progress toward the absolute control of the diversion of industrial alcohol. My first work in Washington," he said, "will be to build up the machinery that will put into practical effect the compacts we now have with Canada, Mexico, Cuba and the European countries, and especially the agreement just consummated with England."

All this will hearten the friends of prohibition, but will be "cold comfort" to the nullificationists.

1163 Herds Placed On Herd Honor Roll

Eleven hundred and sixty three Michigan herds will be placed on the National Herd Honor Roll, according to a report made by A. C. Baltzer, state supervisor cow testing associations, to W. E. Skinner secretary of the National Dairy Exposition to be held at Detroit, October 6 to 13.

The report covers 99 cow testing associations out of a total of 102 which completed a testing year from July 1, 1925 to June 30, 1926 In this total of 1163 herds, there are 1017 averaging from 300 to 400 pounds of butter fat; 136 from 400 to 500 pounds, and 10 herds averaging over 500 pounds of butter fat.

The National Dairy Association will award diplomas to the owners of these superior herds in recognition of their efforts to increase the number of profitable dairy herds. Last year, Michigan was surpassed only by Wisconsin in the number of herds recognized, and is expected to rank first this year.

The Herd Honor Roll is fostered by the National Dairy Association. Any person certified by the state supervisor of cow testing associations, or the state superintendent of advanced registry, as the owner of a herd of five or more cows that have produced 300 pounds or more, of butter fat per cow per year, is eligible to have his herd placed on the Herd Honor Roll.

The House in the Arctic.

Loading Ship for Trip.

Byrd in Airship and Doughnut Boat.

A MODERN home built in the Arctic defied the death-dealing cold of the Polar Regions and proved an invaluable aid to Lieutenant Commander Richard E. Byrd in his successful flight to the North Pole, which he circled three times in a record breaking flight of 1,500 miles in 15 hours and 30 minutes at an average speed of 98.75 miles an hour.

It was at the Spitzbergen base, King's Bay, where this first modern house was constructed amid the snow and ice of the Arctic immediately upon the arrival of Lieutenant Byrd and his companions, as a permanent home and observation station for the explorers. The house, which rose up on the horizon of the frigid north in marked contrast to the igloo of the eskimo, was equipped with a complete radio outfit that those who remained at the base while Lieutenant Byrd made his thrilling dash to the Pole in his speeding Fokker might keep in touch with their chief and the outside world, which they kept informed as to the progress and success of the flight.

It was to this same home that he returned after his hazardous trip and from which some of the first messages were sent to the waiting public, telling them through the lanes of the air that Byrd had circled the pole three times and had returned to his Spitzbergen home in safety, adding one of the most memorable pages to the history of Arctic exploration.

Sugar Cane Fights Polar North.

When Lieutenant Byrd left the Brooklyn Navy Yard on the ship Chantier he declared he had the best and most scientifically equipped expedition that ever had started for the North Pole. Special plans were made for the erection of his Arctic home. Boards of celotex insulating lumber made from bagasse (sugar cane fiber after all sugar juices have been extracted) were carried along with the latest inventions to aid in polar exploration. This building material is very light and is filled with millions of air cells, which give it great insulation value and resistance to change in temperature, especially the severe cold. One odd circumstance in connection with the use of this material is that the sugar cane of the south was utilized to fight the cold of the north.

Celotex was selected instead of lumber because tests made by the United States Bureau of Standards and its universal use in building construction all over the world, had demonstrated that this insulating lumber would keep the quarters of the explorers warmer and protect their living conditions more securely than ordinary building material.

It was only after careful investigation by the scientific men in the expedition that celotex was selected. These authorities pointed out that the protection afforded by its insulation efficiency was three times as great as ordinary lumber and nearly twelve times as great as that of brick and other masonry material. The ship Chantier also was lined with celotex as an added precaution to keep the ship warm while the explorers used it in the preliminary stages of the expedition.

In practically every other way this expedition was more scientifically prepared than any of its predecessors. These included inventions of Commander Byrd himself. A simple sun compass conceived by Byrd and developed by Mr. Bumstead of the National Geographic Society, superseded the complicated German device, developed three years ago for Amundsen. The drift indicator also was Byrd's invention. The bubble sextant by which the navigator obtains his bearings while in flight was another one of his inventions. Still another scientic development was a quick method of telling when one is at the North Pole. This has been worked out by G. W. Littlehales, the navy's hydrographic engineer.

Device Locates the Pole.

Byrd and others contributed to a chart of the magnetic lines flowing toward the magnetic North Pole, which is in Bolthia Land, 1,200 miles south of the Pole. Between Bolthia Land and the Pole the campass points south instead of north and over much of the Arctic it is badly disturbed by the discrepancy of position between the geographical North Pole and the magnetic North Pole.

This chart of the magnetic lines, flowing to the magnetic North Pole, although it was far from complete, was such as to enable the navigator to tell in what direction the compass should point from any spot in the Arctic. With this knowledge, the erratic behavior of the compass becomes orderly and it is once again a useful instrument.

A third type of compass used was a device of infinite sensitiveness—a revolving electrical coil, which is adjusted to a given relation with the magnetism of the earth. This, the sun compass, and the magnetic compass were each used to correct the other.

Lieutenant Byrd in his flight used a quick method of telling when he was actually at the Pole. This was the invention worked out by Mr. Littlehales, the U. S. Navy hydrographic engineer. It shows the sun's position from the North Pole at every hour of the day and every day of the year. When the flyer is near the Pole he can, by ascertaining the exact position of the sun, prove that he is near the Pole.

Flies 3,000 Miles Over Arctic.

The expedition, backed by such men as John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., had three main objects.

1—To prove that air navigation in the Arctic is feasible and that freight and messenger travel over the top of the world is certain to come.

2—To hunt for new land in the unexplored areas of the Arctic.

3—To conquer the North Pole from the air as a sporting adventure and as a demonstration of what a plane can do—not a geographical study, as the Pole was bagged for all time by Admiral Peary.

Probably no one knows more about Arctic flying than Commander Byrd. From the Greenland base of the MacMillan expedition at Etah last year he flew 3,000 miles over the Arctic, studying the behavior of oil, motors, compasses, and other navigation instruments at great altitudes over the Polar sea.

With him this time Commander Byrd took a noted fuel expert, who is Flying Commander G. O. Noble, as it requires great skill and pains to prevent the freezing of lubricating oil and stiffened action of the motors, if forced to work on the plane in the open at great altitudes with the thermometer at 60 to 70 below zero. The points which favored the month of May were that the Arctic fog had not begun to rise and heavy snows still covered the land and afforded many good landing places.

A factor of safety pointed out by Commander Byrd in connection with the use of the Fokker machine is that it carries a reserve engine. It has three engines. With a light load one is expected to be sufficient to maintain the plane in flight. With a normal load, two engines will do the work. If two engines break down at one time, when the plane is not too heavily loaded, it may fly with the use of one engine. The Fokker machine has a wing spread of slightly more than 64 feet. It is said to be a marvel of airship construction.

The other airplane—the Curtis Oriole—was to have been used chiefly in finding landing fields so that if the fliers found their main landing place covered with a fog they might go elsewhere.

The Chantier was equipped with a powerful radio transmitter to send back the news of the expedition. The Fokker also is equipped with a receiving and transmitting set. Commander Byrd not only kept the world informed of the progress of the expedition, but received through the Chantier weather warnings to guide him in his flight.

How Expedition Was Equipped.

Forty-five hundred pounds of whole beef were included in the rations of the Byrd crew of forty-seven fliers, seamen and technicians. Also four hundred pounds of pemmican (meat fats and raisins), huge quantities of bacon, dried milk, erbswurst (pea soup) and other supplies in proportion were carried along. Cod liver oil was included for its healthful properties. Herbert Griggs, who had charge of provisioning Peary's expedition in his famous dash to the Pole, worked out the rations for the Byrd explorers. Two pounds per man per day was the allowance to take care of all emergencies.

No amount of clothing is really sufficient when flying 1,000 or more feet in the air in the Polar regions, but every possible precaution was taken by Commander Byrd against exposure. The men were equipped with the warmest and lightest of reindeer suits and with fur parkas, a garment that reaches to the knees and has a hood covering the head. Plenty of goggles were found to be an absolute necessity to protect them against the glare of the snow.

In spite of all the precautions the undertaking was full of unseen danger. None of this equipment would be of the slightest avail against some unexpected and unprecedented situation which might arise. There is always the danger of snowblindness, exhaustion, freezing, some mishap to the engine. Lieutenant Byrd and his companions, however, were particularly fortunate in escaping with practically no ill effects except the exhaustion due to such a perilous trip.

Pick Up Ice Pilot.

The ship Chantier's first stop was at Tromso, Norway, where an ice skipper was taken on to pilot the Chantier and its crew through the ice-filled waters around Spitzbergen to King's Bay, where preparations for the first flight to the Pole were made. The planes, the instruments and the various oil mixtures used in connection with the airship tests, were carefully examined and tested. Lieutenant Byrd's original plans called for six flights as follows:

1—A 400-mile flight from Spitzbergen to Peary Land to unload oil, provisions and equipment at a place that looks promising for a landing.

2—A 400-mile flight back to Spitzbergen.

3—A second 400-mile flight from Spitzbergen to Peary Land base with further food, fuel and equipment.

4—An 850-mile flight to and around the Pole and back to the Peary base.

5—An 800-mile round trip flight to the northwest over unexplored areas in search of new lands.

6—A 400-mile flight from the Peary Land base back to Spitzbergen.

It was his plan in his second flight to attempt to discover new land, but when he received the report of the flight of Amundsen in his dirigible, in which it was stated that the Norge had failed to find any trace of new land, Lieutenant Byrd decided to abandon further flights and the trip over land on sleds he had planned in his search for new land in unexplored areas. Now he has decided to try to accomplish by airship at the South Pole what he did at the North. As he left the Spitzbergen base he stated that he would have just as well an equipped expedition for his southern flight as he had in his recent adventure in the North.

Training Camps

Wherever the colors of the United States are unfurled—in Alaska, Panama, Hawaii and the Philippines as well as in the home country—native sons of Michigan are to be found garbed in the distinctive olive drab uniform of the Regular Army. Even in the Orient, where the Stars and Stripes wave beside the vari-colored standards of the Chinese Republic, Michigan men are on duty guarding the interests of America.

For more than three quarters of a century the sons of the Wolverine State have contributed much to the military forces of their country. They fought fiercely to wrest the Northwest territory from the British; in the war with Mexico they battled side by side with the men of the Lone Star State; Cuba saw many of them in '98; so too did the shell torn fields of France in '17 and '18.

Today there are hundreds of them in the Regular Army. In the commissioned grades alone, there are two hundred and seventy nine. Those include three brigadier general, fourteen colonials, eighteen lieutenant colonels, sixty three majors, ninety one captains, fifty one first lieutenants, and thirty-nine second lieutenants.

Ninety three of the officers representing the Wolverine State have risen from the ranks. Once they served as lowly "buck" privates or in the various non-commissioned grades. By diligent attention to their duties and by hard study, they qualified themselves and succeeded in winning their commissions in the examinations held at every Army post each year.

Eighty-four other Michigan men are graduates of the United States Military Academy at West Point. Quite a number of these were appointed to this world famous institute direct from the Army. The remainder of the two hundred and seventy nine were commissioned from the State at large, the National Guard, or the Organized Reserves.

Titus Foundry

In the year 1824, Lucius B. Titus, a resident of New York State, decided to follow the good old Yankee maxim, "Young Man Go West." He came to Coldwater Michigan, just 72 years ago, and established there one of Michigan's pioneer industries, the Titus Foundry.

Today it is owned and operated by succeeding generations of the Titus family. It is the oldest manufacturing business in Branch County.

First products of the foundry were plows, drags and cultivators and at other times in the year kettles and stoves. Many of the old time high oven cook stoves which were in almost every home at that time bore the Titus trade mark. Then came horse powers, drag saws and buzz-saws, and later still wood furnaces, for which there was a great demand. Gradually, however, the foundry discontinued the manufacture of any stated article and turned its attention to the jobbing of gray iron and semi steel castings for outside firms.

In 1910, having outgrown the original Chicago street locations, the foundry was installed in a new building at the corner of Clark and Crippen streets, Coldwater, and there it is today. Since that time, however, there have been many additions and improvements notably greater cupola capacity, a new core room and another large building room.

Notable examples of the firm's work since pre-Civil War days are scattered throughout Michigan and the Middle West. Business traditions of good workmanship and fair prices, formed by the elder Titus, have been maintained throughout the years by his descendants, and as a result the books of the foundry today show records of customer firms whose patronage has been continuous while three generations of executives have come and gone.

Lucius B. Titus founded his company upon the principle that a business must run all year and every year if it is to be operated at a profit. Since its inception the foundary has enjoyed an enviable reputation as a company that operates steadily even in times of general depression. A notable example of this occurred during the big slump after the great war. Nearly every foundry in the country at that was shut down, but the Titus plant was running as usual.

Early in the firm's business career, Thurlow Titus became associated with his father, and now the two sons of Thurlow Titus have become associated with him. The present officers of the company are: Thurlow Titus, president Walter Titus, general manager, and Lucius C. Titus, superintendent.

There are not many towns besides Coldwater that can boast an industry that has operated as long as the 72 year old Titus Foundry. For any company to remain in business for such a period is remarkable enough—but it is rather startling that the ownership of the company should remain entirely in one family during that time.

Single Sleeve Valve Engine Is Praised

Charles Brimlow, chief engineer of the Argyll Motor Company, Ltd of Glasgow, who has been in Detroit conferring with the Continental Motor Corporation, is of the belief that the single sleeve valve engine will rapidly take a prominent place in the automotive industry in this country. Although it has been in use in Britian for a number of years its appearance in America has been delayed until recently when the world rights were obtained by Continental Motors.

In discussing some of the advantages of the engine Mr. Brimlow said, "The simplicity of the single sleeve valve engine is apparent and probable the most obvious advantages which it possesses over the poppet valve type lie in the mechanical silence and reliability of the valve mechanism.

"The whole of the valve operating mechanism is enclosed and runs in oil, therefore wear is infinitesimal. Although the sleeve is larger and heavier than the poppet valves, less power is absorbed in its operation than is required to raise poppet valves against their springs and in the case of the poppet exhaust valve, against the compression of the exploded gases in the cylinder.

"Carbon does not accumulate on the single sleeve valve engine as quickly as on an ordinary poppet engine as it will not readily collect on the polished symmetrical combustion heads. Any carbon deposited on the large wearing surfaces of the sleeve tends to work its way into the annular space between the cylinder and heads and helps to maintain the seal for the sleeve ports during the compression and firing strokes by automatically taking up any slight wear."

The fourth dry well in the Saginaw oil district was reported when no oil showed at the location of Charles V. Murrin and Alex La Croix on the banks of the Tittabawassee river. This well was five miles west of production and is the farthest west in the present development. It was drilled to a depth of 2,082.5 feet in the Berea sand without any trace of oil.

Coxey's Army To Washington

Those of our readers who will recall the famous pilgrimage of several thousand hoboes to Washington under the leadership of Jacob Coxey 32 years ago will also remember that quite a lot was accomplished by this crusade inasmuch as things and matters at Washington were stirred up to the highest pitch and while the hobo army camped on the W. Capitol grounds at Washington. "General" Coxey made a determined effort to address the mob from the steps of the Capitol but was arrested and rushed off to the jail to await the decision of magistrates as to whether he had performed a criminal act or not. The motley array which followed him lost their leader and wandered homeward by little squads here and there begging as they went and returned to the home places much weaker but wiser.

We are led to ask what was the direct result of this crusade. We have found that as the years have come and gone, men have objected to various policies pulled off at Washington and have tried to sway public opinion but have failed to make any impression on the rock-hard morals of the men in charge at Washington. The Coxey crusade was the climax of one of the most famous deals ever put over to force legislation, but it failed miserably because the men composing the army were mostly nobodies—the riff-raff of society—men who had perhaps been faithful workers in their different lines of work, but of no great standing in their communities. Mr. Coxey lives today at Massillon, Ohio, a city of 30,000 population, where he is enjoying a green or ripe old age—as you wish to call it.

Coxey was the one prophet accepted in his own home. In Massillon he was known as a business man of broad views and sound public spirit. He had the reputation of a man who paid his bills promptly who did what he could to nourish the life of his community, who was interested in local institutions, a good citizen, in a word. So, when he propounded his theories, holding aloft his fragment of truth, there were ears to hear. And this is what came to pass.

The Results Of Election In Michigan

Governor Groesbeck so long a competent and faithful executive in the Governship of Michigan was turned down at the Primaries in favor of Fred Green of Ionia who it is claimed obtained the nomination by a large majority of the electorate. This sounds paradoxial but yet it is true.

With the wonderful prosperity which Michigan has enjoyed under Groesbeck's administration, and the system of good concrete roads everywhere abounding, all mostly conceived and built under this administration, one would naturally wonder what the electorate could possibly be expecting from a man of Green's stamp who had absolutely no understanding of the necessities of road work up to a short time ago.

No doubt road building will go on and on but it has without doubt received a check, something which will hold it for a time at least—and we are sorry to learn the voters think best to try a new executive. This is not saying Mr. Green is not a good man for the job, but it is a fact that each time a new official goes into office many changes have to be made. Men of various opinions usually operate differently in office, and throughout all this changing and turmoil there is sure to come to the front much that is disparaging. But with the change in officials at Lansing we hope and trust our road work will not suffer, We hope that Michigan can go on and on building splendid highways, and putting forth every effort to place the summer resort advantages highest in the country. In years gone by Michigan's natural advantages have far excelled those of other states but nothing had been done to further the summer resort business which we are so much entitled to until the advent of Alexander Groesbeck. On this account as well as that of the road work we feel that the electorate has made a serious mistake.

Good School Lunches

Here are some things you may not have tried in the school lunches; sliced meat loaf; rolls hollowed out and filled with chopped meat or fish, moistened with salad dressing and seasoned; salad; cheese straws; stuffed eggs; tomatoes and whole fresh fruits; cut-up fruit; brown sugar or maple sugar sandwiches, made with crackers or hot biscuit so as to melt the sugar; sausage turnovers; stuffed prunes or dates or figs; cup custard; a small box of raisins; a cake of chocolate; little tarts, cookies or frosted cakes; sandwiches of two kinds of bread; a bottle of orange or grape juice; lemon juice sweetened ready to make into lemonade at school.

See that sandwiches, cookies, slices of cake, fruit—in fact, everything that goes into the lunch box are wrapped separately in waxed paper. This not only prevents crushing, but keeps them moister or crisper, as they happen to require. Provide paper napkins, to keep hands and clothing clean, and to spread on the desk under the lunch

Tornadoes Are Common in Oil Fires

Tornadoes, smaller than the twisters that often work so much havoc, but true tornadoes just the same, were one of the effects of a great oil fire at San Luis Obispo, California, recently, according to a report of the U. S. Weather Bureau by J. E. Hissong, of the local weather bureau of the California city. We read in Science Service's Daily Science News Bulletin:

"The fire was started by lightning and burned for five days, desstroying nearly six million barrels of oil. Two persons were killed and the total property loss was estimated at $15,000,000. However, the unique feature of the fire was the great number of tornadoes which it started, one of which was responsible for the two deaths.

"Before these whirls started says Mr. Hissong, strong southerly winds prevailed. which shifted to west and then to northwest. Then four tanks, each containing 750,000 barrels of oil boiled over. They threw out an immense quantity of hot, burning oil, he says, 'which spread with remarkable rapidity over an area estimated by the engineers present at about 900 acres.

"From the time the wind veered into the northwest and the large reservoir boiled over, hundreds of whirlwinds formed in and around the edges of the fire until the last tank boiled over.

"Many of them had all the characteristics of true tornadoes. The gyrating, writhing, funnel shaped clouds with the white condensing vapor in the vortices were plainly visible against the background of black smoke.

"It was one of these twisters that caused the casualties for it left the fire, traveling east-north east to a cottage about a thousand yards away. It picked up the cottage, lifting it several feet in the air and carrying it about 150 feet north. There the cottage was dropt in a field, a total wreck, and the owner and his son who had been in it at the time were killed. A few minutes later a whirl. which Mr. Hissong believes might have been the same one, unroofed a house about a quarter of a mile northeast of its first victim. Debris, evidently carried by other whirlwinds was found as far as three miles from the fire.

"Since the whirlwinds started just after the wind veered, Mr. Hissong suggests that they may have been caused by the convectional currents over the fire being started rotating by the northwest wind."—Literary Digest.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage given by Hiram Livermore, widower, of the township of Wheatland, Hillsdale county, Michigan, to Corwin Cox, of the said township, which mortgage was dated January 50, 1908, and was recorded in the affice of the Register of Deeds of Hillsdale County, Michigan, Janiury 16, 1908, in liber 133 of mortgages, on page 579:

And whereas, no proceeding either at law or in equity have been brought to foreclose said mortgage and whereas, there is due and unpaid on said mortgage at this date, in principal and interest, the sum of Nine Hundred Thirty three and 90—100 ($933.90) Dollars.

Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, Notice Is Hereby Given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of the premises therein described at public auction at the west front door of the court house in the city of Hillsdale, in said county, on Friday, the 3rd day of December, 1926, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that date, to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage and costs, including an attorney fee of $25 as provided for by statute.

The premises are described in said mortgage as follows: The north half of the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 16, excepting about one and one half acres out of the northwest corner now owned by J. M. Livermore, and this mortgage conveys about 18 acres of land in the above description, also five acres of land on the east end of the above described land, and being the same width north and south as above land, all situate in the township of Wheatland, County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan.

Dated September 1, 1926. Corwin Cox, Mortgagee.

Happy Wedlock Sure Thing If Bride Is Cook

By KATHRYN ST. JOHN

Haphazard meals yearly ruin thousands of marriages. Most marital ships would maintain an evener keel if brides knew cooking.

Many of the first year's troubles between newlyweds would be avoided if the wife were capable of preparing foods with an experienced hand. Wives are to blame for the failure of many business men in the final analysis. The business man's health depends a great deal on what he eats. And it's up to his wife to see that he gets the right kind of food. A healthfully balanced diet goes a long way toward making the tired business man less fatigued.

The expert home manager sees to it that her husband never comes home to a delicatessen lunch. There is a carefully planned meal waiting for him. The real housewife knows that an unbalanced diet means trouble and avoids it. Likewise, she appreciates the fact that variation in her menus is important. In this connection the following recipes have been selected as an aid to the home manager:

Frozen Salad.

¼ cup mayonnaise dressing
¼ cup diced pineapple
4 tbsp. pineapple juice
½ cup cream
¼ cup candied cherries
½ cup diced bananas
2 tbsp. lemon juice
½ cup evaporated milk

Mix the fruit and juices. Combine milk and cream, chill and whip; then fold in the fruit and mayonnaise. Pour into a mold and pack in equal parts of salt and ice. Serve on lettuce leaves. This serves eight.

Orange Bavarian.

1 tbsp. gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1 cup orange juice
3 tbsp. lemon juice
⅛ tsp. salt
1-3 cup evaporated milk
1-3 cup whipping cream
¾ cup sugar

Soak gelatin in cold water, add fruit juices, sugar and salt. Heat in the top of a double boiler until gelatin dissolves. Strain and set in pan of cold water. When mixture begins to set, fold in the evaporated milk and cream which have been beaten stiff.

Banana Ice Cream.

6 very ripe bananas
¼ cup lemon juice
2¼ cups sugar
2 cups evaporated milk
2 cups cream
⅛ tsp. salt

Scrape off adhering fibrous portion on surface of peeled bananas. Mash and rub through a sieve. Add the rest of the ingredients in the order given and stir until all are well blended. Let stand for 20 minutes so that all sugar may dissolve. Freeze in a 1 to 6 salt-ice mixture. This recipe makes ½ gallon cream.

His name was called. Cox's secretary had come after him.

"Your proposition, as we understand it," said Cox, "is that you should be paid one hundred thousand dollars for your project—after it has been approved by our engineers and declared practical—and that you are given due acknowledgment of yourself as originator of the project, with a position as consulting engineer during the completion of the work?"

Caleb nodded.

"That is it."

"It's a lot of money," said Marlin, apparently addressing the smoke of his cigar.

"It's a lot of water," replied Caleb good-humoredly.

"You'll turn over your invention to the company?" This was Marlin again.

"You mean the pipe junction? I'll give the company free use of it. I am applying for patents. I shall hold those. I will allow the Crystal Springs corporation free use of it anywhere on the Pacific coast."

Marlin grunted.

"We'll agree to your terms, Warner," said Cox. "The engineer's salary will be ten thousand dollars per annum. We'll make contract with you for five years at that sum, if you wish?"

Caleb shook his head.

"For the duration of this work," he said. "I appreciate the honor but I should prefer to be foot-loose after that. Will you put the rest of your agreement in writing?"

A pair of steely eyes bored into him. They belonged to Morse of the Lumber interests.

"We are going to make it a motion, young man. That should satisfy you."

"If I can have a copy of the minutes."

Cox laughed.

"Are you a lawyer as well as a civil engineer, Warner? You shall have a copy of the minutes—certified—if you wish. You Yankees!" he ended humorously.

Marlin walked over toward Caleb who had moved to the door. He nipped Warner's elbow familiarly. "We're glad you came out here, Mr. Warner. You're the kind of man we want. We'll make a Westerner out of you in no time. Don't let the climate get you. It sometimes affects our second generations. Good-by."

Caleb went out warm in his feeling toward these men. He had won. He was the Water-Bearer, on no small scale.

He left the elevator elated, his head up, turning to the entrance, when he felt a touch on his arm. It was the stenographer, Mary Morgan.

"Mr. Warner," she said hurriedly. "I want to see you alone. It is important. And it is your business, not mine. Though I am connected with it. Will you meet me at Haight's at a quarter after five, that will be as soon as I shall have time to get there after work this afternoon. In one of the upstairs compartments. The captain will tell you which one."

He looked at her uncertainly. Haight's was the fashionable restaurant. There was nothing disreputable about the place. Still the compartments—in the afternoon especially—were generally reserved for couples that had reason for seclusion, that were accepted as intimate and not always conventional.

"You will be sorry if you don't come," she said. "It is the best place."

Her eyes challenged his seriously. They held a portent that communicated itself.

"All right. I'll be there," he said. And half regretted the determination before he reached the street.

He turned up Grant avenue towards his office. A landaulet braked at the curb. The door opened and Betty Clinton stepped out directly in front of him. Caleb took off his hat. His pulses had jumped. Then they stopped for an instant. She had cut him, deliberately, cruelly, looking at him as if he had been a stranger who had halted to let her, his superior, pass.

CHAPTER XI

At Haight's

Once again with Caleb the question of Betty Clinton became paramount. He had come out of the offices of the Water company a deserving conqueror, pardonably elated, a bright road stretching ahead of him. Now the vistas of his life were drab. Inspiration, the desire for success, seemed to have flowed out of him like water out of a drain. The reason was plain enough, the fact one that he could not overcome nor set aside. Betty Clinton had gone out of his life and, without her, life hardly seemed worth bothering about.

She had given him less attention than she would have bestowed upon a street beggar. There at least some charity would have shown in her gaze. But for Caleb her eyes had held nothing—as if he had never existed.

Something had happened within the last forty odd hours. It was inconceivable that the affair at the Vedders was responsible for the deliberate slight she had put upon him. She had heard something, a slander, that had turned her utterly against him.

And that meant Baxter. No one else. The pointer of Circumstance infallibly swung toward him. He might still imagine that Caleb could have loaned him the money, had deliberately deserted him at the time when he most needed help. In revenge he had carried a tale to Betty Clinton. But what sort of tale was it that she had listened to upon so short acquaintance? She was not the type to listen readily, to pass a hasty judgment.

He paced up and down his little office, the sweets of victory turned bitter, trying to bring logic to bear upon the situation, without avail. At five o'clock he started for the cafe to meet the stenographer, holding a vague idea that she might be able to throw some light upon the matter.

He entered the foyer of the restaurant, filled with people coming from the matinee, and mounted the stairs to meet the deferential captain of the waiters. Caleb gave him his card.

"A lady should be waiting for me," he said.

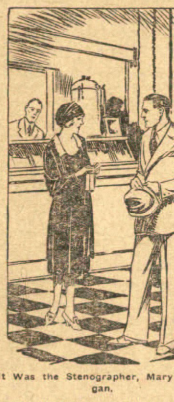
The man glanced at the card and returned it, receiving in exchange a crinkly bill that was deftly palmed and vanished. Then he led the way, cat-footed, down a soft-carpeted corridor, stopping before a certain pair of drawn curtains and touching a bell in the partition frame.

"It is monsieur," he announced, withdrew and glided down the passage. Caleb entered the alcove.

It had an arched opening that looked out over the main floor of the cafe. The opening was partially blocked with artificial orange trees, the fruit represented by small electric bulbs. By the side of the opening, unseen from below, angled in the corner behind the curtains, sat the stenographer. The glow from the mock oranges gave the oval of her face a weird quality.

It robbed her of all benefit from rouge and powder and turned her features to a tragic mask of weariness and strain. She was only a shadow of the blooming picture that had once held the "place of present honors" on Baxter's bureau.

"You will have to order something," said the girl. Her voice was toneless. She had made no motion since he entered. He touched a bell and a sleek waiter almost instantly tapped and appeared.



It Was the Stenographer, Mary Morgan.

"A sandwich," said the girl languidly. "Chicken sandwich, Emile—Some tea—strong—in a cup. Kiros cigarettes, straw tips."

"Just tea for me," said Caleb.

"Yes sir. In a cup, sir?"

"Of course."

It was plain that the girl had been in the balcony alcoves at Haight's before. The fact was more evident when the tea—"strong, in a cup," arrived. It was Scotch whisky. After she had sipped it down a little sparkle came to her eyes. She took a cigarette, tapped its end and lit it.

"If you don't mind I'll smoke before we talk?" she said and inhaled avidly. It seemed to restore her animation somewhat. She folded her long-fingered hands on the cloth and looked directly at Caleb.

"Ted Baxter is a great friend of yours, I suppose?"

There was a sneering quality to her voice that made it harsh. The sparkle in her eyes had changed to a steady glitter.

"We have been friends for a great many years," Caleb answered.

She gave a low, short laugh. Evidently she knew about the quarrel.

"I have come here to sell you something," she said. "As I told you, it is to your interest to listen to me. I want money enough to leave Golden, to go East for a while. You can imagine why. It'll take fifteen hundred dollars. My information should be worth many times that."

"Knowing I am a friend of Baxter's, why do you apply to me for the money? Isn't he the one to supply it for that purpose? Doesn't he intend to?"

"I don't know whether he does or not. You know all about his mother and the stock deal? He's broke. Even if he puts over his land deal he'll need it all to square his debts—of honor."

Her voice was acid with satire. "Suppose we leave him out of this for a bit," she said almost fiercely. "This affair is between you and me."

"What is it?"

She eyed him narrowly, lighting another cigarette. With the curious cadmium tint of the mock orange globes on her face, the spark of the cigarette as she inhaled it, the glitter in her eyes, her attitude, she appeared jaded, over worldly, cynical, rapacious.

"If I should tell you that there are parties who plan to block your plans with the Water company, if I should tell you who they are, what knowledge they possess, how they expect to use it, will you give me the money?"

"It depends upon whether the information is valuable enough. Whether their plans are really dangerous to my interests—and to those of the company."

"I am dealing with you, Mr. Warner. I've made carbons of the minutes of the meetings. I want your word that you'll give me the money before I give away my information. I'll go further," she went on as she saw hesitancy in Caleb's eyes. "You have other interests than just with the Crystal Springs crowd. This affects those as well."

"What do you mean?"

She lowered her voice. "You are interested in Miss Clinton."

Caleb hardened. But the girl was staring at him and he felt that somehow he had betrayed himself, for she gave a little satisfied smile.

"We'll leave her out of it," he said. She shook her head.

"We can't. I'm another woman. Not a man. I'm not saying anything detrimental to her. But this touches her as well as you. Now will you give me your promise and listen?"

Caleb reflected rapidly. He could manage the fifteen hundred. It was a big sum. Even with his attained hundred thousand, with his promised salary, it still seemed large. He could not undo in a moment the instincts due to heredity and training. But the girl had struck the right note. He felt that she held the key to Betty Clinton's conduct towards him. And, as he realized that, the money lost all value.

"All right," he said. "I promise."

"You propose to dam Hermanos valley. That is a main point in your plan. To hold back the storm waters. It shows on the model and in your specifications. Well, you can't get Hermanos valley."

"Why not? Public utility can command condemnation proceedings."

"It can't supersede a previous contract to sell."

Caleb stared. The girl was no ordinary employee. She was clever enough to have a good grasp of the affair. He saw immediately that, in her semi-confidential position of assistant to Cox's secretary, she had had access to details. She had seen the model. And she had been the one to supply the parties she spoke of with their information. Baxter was in it, of course.

"What is this contract? Who holds it?"

"It is a year's option of sale. Baxter holds it."

For a moment Caleb saw red but he controlled himself under the girl's watchful eyes.

"I'll tell you how he got it. He has been looking for an acreage to suit certain clients who want to locate near here. You told him about Hermanos. He thinks he was clever to get it out of you. Though I don't think you two had quarreled then. But you did. And he wanted to get even. He met Miss Clinton and her father. He learned that Mr. Clinton had been thinking of selling, but with reservations, holding back the home ranch and the place where all the Clintons were buried. That gave him his idea. Oh, he's smart enough. At first I think he just wanted to tie up the valley to spite you and ruin your plans by selling it to his clients. But this opened something more. A chance to put you in absolutely wrong with the Clintons, with Betty Clinton. He knows you are in love with her. And so is he!"

Little Hope for Universal Tongue

All hopes of a universal language have received a serious setback, if they have not been completely shattered. Once German, French and Russian represented such hegemony as existed in Europe. Today a hundred different languages demand recognition as the voices of nations.

"Official languages" now exist for Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Finland, a part of Poland, the Ukraine, Georgia, Azerbaijan and Armenia. There is an attempt to revive Gaelic in Ireland, and in Spain the Catalonians are demanding the right to teach Catalonian in the schools. There is a struggle in Czechoslovakia, in Schleswig-Holstein and in the Balkans for supremacy or at least autonomy among Czech and German, Danish and German, Croatin, Rumanian, Serbian, Greek, Bulgarian; between the Latin and Cyrillian alphabets. In Palestine, where they are seeking a national language, there is contest among Yiddish, Hebrew and Judeo-Espanol, the latter much used by Spanish Jews of Constantinople and Saloniki.

Evil of Prejudice

It is no exaggeration to say that the greatest obstacle to human progress along every line is to be found in human prejudices. It is our prejudices that blind us to the truth, and it is truth alone that can ever make men free.—John Herman Randall.

Bird Knows Its Business

The wings and tails of the Argus pheasants are studded with scores and scores of large and very perfectly marked "eyes," and it is from these that he has earned his name. He knows that it is useless to try to court his sweetheart while she can still see his hopelessly plain face (His features suggest a small and degenerate cousin of a bald-headed vulture.) When, therefore, he goes a-wooing, he displays his handsome clothes, and at the same time hides his face in his feathers, taking occasional peeps to see if he is making any progress, says the London Mail.

Eradication of Tubercular Hogs

Noticeable Decline of Disease in Swine Reported From Iowa.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With current progress in eradicating tuberculosis from cattle, a noticeable decline of the same disease among swine is taking place. This announcement by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, is based on field observations and by records of the federal meat inspection service.

Economic Loss.

A striking example of the effect of the work has been received by the department from an Iowa packing company which has "kept books" on such losses for the last seven years. In 1919 the average loss per hog caused by tuberculosis infection was 75 cents. This figure is the economic loss for hogs slaughtered in the plant. In 1920 the loss declined to 66 cents, in 1921 to 49 cents, and in 1922 to 32 cents. Since 1913 the loss has declined further to 26 cents.

"We have actual knowledge, through experience," the company adds, "that the tuberculin test applied to cattle has reduced bovine tuberculosis among cattle and hogs following them, and has cleaned up the hogs from the disease."

Report for Hardin County.

Further evidence is given by the packer's report for Hardin County, Iowa, which is an area accredited as free from bovine tuberculosis. During a nine-month's period more than 11,000 hogs were shipped from this county and slaughtered, with an average economic loss, caused by tuberculosis, of only 4.7 cents each. This figure is less than a fifth of the general average, which in turn is about a third of the loss in 1919 when systematic tuberculosis eradication was just begun.

An important development of the work is the discovery that throughout the Central West especially, many poultry flocks are tuberculous, and some infection among swine is traceable to that source. Fowl tuberculosis yields readily, however, to methods of control and eradication. Thus the outlook for the complete suppression of tuberculosis among all kinds of live stock is encouraging, federal veterinary officials assert.

New Strain of Cabbage Is Resistant to Disease

Cabbage growing on a commercial or lesser scale in the corn belt has been seriously hampered the last few years by a disease known as cabbage yellows which lives over in the soil for as long as 11 years and causes from a half to almost total loss of the crop.

Various attempts to control the disease by soil treatments or crop rotation have failed, but a strain has recently been developed by the Iowa Agricultural Experiment station, Ames, which seems to be quite resistant. In various trials on infested soils it has produced satisfactory crops during the past two years. The strain is called Iacope and was bred up from the Copenhagen Market variety. Bulletin No. 235 describes this strain.

Meat Scrap in Ration

Meat scrap or some other animal feed high in protein is one essential constituent of the mash. In some experiments a pen of pullets, on free range, which did not get meat scrap or any other protein feed, laid only 90 eggs each in a year, compared with yields of from 125 to 150 eggs from pens fed rations containing meat scrap. The eggs from the pen where no meat scrap was fed cost 2.2 cents more a dozen for feed. Eggs add to the return from the farm.

Pasture for Ducks

As to a good pasture for ducks, short bluegrass is good, but, better yet, short alfalfa or clover. For egg production supply a ration of three parts corn meal, three parts finely ground oats, three parts wheat bran and one part fine flour middlings. Add to every 100 pounds of this mixture one pound of fine sand, two pounds of grit and fifteen pounds of beef scraps. If they are on pasture no other green food will be needed. They do not need running water.

Breeds of White Geese

There are two varieties of white geese, the Emden and the Chinese. They are both large varieties. The Emden, however, is more common and more generally raised for market than the Chinese. There is little difference in the two kinds as to the hardiness. It is generally believed that the Emden are a little more domestic than the Chinese. The Chinese are the ones which have a knob on the head at the base of the beak.

Three Strawberry Pests

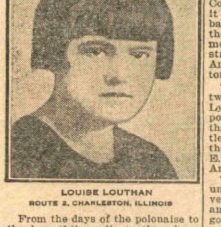
There are two major and one minor group of pests of the strawberry—insects, diseases and birds. Birds are not often serious, yet they are extremely irritating. Perhaps because other food is scarce early in the spring, several kinds, notably the catbirds, mocking birds and robins found in Maryland, peck many of the first ripening berries. As the first berries are commonly the largest and bring the highest price or are most prized in the home garden, the damage is keenly felt.

Ration for Hens

Measured in terms of general health and egg production, the fundamental requirements of a suitable ration for laying hens are few number, according to results of recent poultry feeding experiments which have been made at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. These requirements can be met in a number of different ways, but each and every one must be met fully if profitable results are to be secured.

GIRLS OF SCHOOL AGE LEARN VALUABLE LESSON

Find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Dependable Medicine



LOUISE LOUTHAN
ROUTE 2, CHARLESTON, ILLINOIS

From the days of the polonaise to the days of the radio, mothers have given this dependable medicine to their daughters. School girls are often careless. They get wet feet. They overstudy or they tire themselves with too many dances and parties. They get run down.

Many an active girl of today, like the demure maiden of the 1870's, has found that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is helping her to find better health and energy.

"I gave my fifteen-year-old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She had been out of school for four months. I read the advertisements of the Vegetable Compound, and since she has taken it she has improved and has gone back to school again. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be."—MRS. ALICE LOUTHAN, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

"My daughter was out of school two terms. I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all my life and finally decided that she should try it. Three bottles helped her in various ways for the next couple of years."—MRS. W. E. GILLETTE, 936 E. 52nd Place, Los Angeles, Calif.

"I have always been sickly, and until I was fourteen my father was very strict about my perfect attendance at grammar school. I have gone to school through hard storms and often taken cold. When I was fourteen I took to my bed and did not get up for eighteen months. Everyone thought I could not live. Just four months ago I began taking your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I could notice a great change almost at once. Now I feel like a new person. I wish all girls would try Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful medicine."—MRS. C. M. SMITH, Union Village, Vermont.

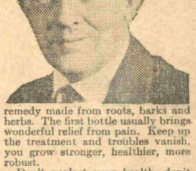
House and Lot Offered as Payment for Health

Tanlac Instead Returned Health Lost by Indigestion and Run-Down Condition



Herbert Fisher, 1265 Crawford Avenue, Detroit, says: "Above all things a glassworker must have good health. When I was run-down, nervous and unable to keep going, I would have given my house and lot for good health.

"Was not able to eat without suffering from pains and indigestion. Sluggish liver and constipation sapped my strength, and wore me down. Still I dragged through the days, getting weaker, more discouraged and all tuckered out. Vacation and time off failed to help me.

"My brother-in-law from Wisconsin told me to try Tanlac which I did. The results amazed me. I began to sleep better, eat my food with relish and without suffering from indigestion pains. I gained weight and have again the thrill of good health.

"I sleep like a child, and work all day at high speed without tiring. But I have not stopped taking Tanlac for it is the one remedy for continued good health, for keeping strong."

Tanlac has helped thousands of men and women. It is Nature's own remedy made from roots, barks and herbs. The first bottle usually brings wonderful relief from pain. Keep up the treatment and troubles vanish, you grow stronger, healthier, more robust.

Don't neglect your health, don't suffer from pain needlessly, begin taking this wonder tonic now. Ask your druggist for Tanlac—today! Over 40 million bottles sold.

If thou sustain injustice, console thyself; the true unhappiness is in doing it.—Democritus.

PROTEST 'BURIAL' OF SHIPS IN LAKE

Protest against the use of the middle channel of St. Clair flats as a marine "graveyard" has been made to the conservation commission, by the Middle Channel Improvement Association.

The association is composed of residents in the flats colony living along the middle channel and they declare their protest to be brought forth by community feeling.

For some time, they point out, ships that are too old for service have been towed into the channel and abandoned. Addition of another hulk, recently, brought the official protest from the association.

It says residents along the middle channel are spending thousands of dollars in beautifying their Summer homes and the district, only to have their efforts counteracted by an unsightly ship grave-yard to use for a main thoroughfare.

Members of the association were advised the case is one for investigation by federal authorities as the conservation commission is without jurisdiction, according to John Baird, director of conservation.

Detroit Raiders Solve Lost Button Mystery

What becomes of the buttons off the shirts of customers of a Detroit laundry came to light when four Chinese were arraigned on gambling charges. A cigarboxful of the buttons were being used as counters, $109 was on the table, and the defendants were all very busy when police arrived.

Boy Awaiting Trial in Motor Fatality Is Dead

Paul Threadgal, 19 years ald, awaiting trial in superior court on a charge of negligent homicide in connection with the death last January of Frank Gressler, 57-year-old furniture worker, died at a Grand Rapids hospital. Gressler was killed almost instantly when struck by an automobile driven by Threadgal.

Detroit Employment Is Reported on Increase

Employment figures, compiled by the Employers' Association of Detroit, show an increase of 883 over a week ago, with a total of 239,099 men employed. The figures include two-thirds of the factory workers in the Detroit district.

Lead Is Found in Fish Sent from Michigan

The U. S. department of agriculture has been asked to investigate whether some Michigan fish dealer is making unwarranted profits by selling lead to New York housewives at 45 cents a pound.

In a shipment of yellow pike, recently received in New York, seven ounce sinkers were found in the stomachs of two fish. The origin of the shipment was not made public.

Weather Prophet Correct on Crops

Herbert Janvrin Browne (above), long-range weather forecaster of Washington, D. C., predicted last year that there would be a world shortage of about one billion bushels of grain in 1926. Now the U. S. Department of Agriculture issues a statement to a large extent bearing out Mr. Browne's forecast.

Hears from Stolen Car When Girl Is Arrested

Alexander San of Grand Rapids has heard the first word from his car which is said to have been stolen from him a week ago by Mrs. Catherine Hartsell, 17, after he had taken her for a ride. Mrs. Hartsell is being held in Troy, N. Y., as the result of being involved in an automobile accident there.

San said he had left Mrs. Hartsel, who is blonde and pretty, in his car while he went to his room for cigarets and that when he returned, she and the car had vanished.

When she was in the accident she was accompanied by a white collie dog which she asserts she stole from a farm near Windsor, Vt., where she claims she visited her grandmother.

Alma Man Captures Host of Flower Prizes

To win flower honors in a state show is not necessarily an unusual thing, but to capture prizes the way Homer Dunham of Alma captured them in the state gladiolus show staged by the Michigan Gladiolus society at the Horticulture building, Michigan State College, East Lansing, is a feat that is highly unusual. In the amateur classes he won 16 firsts, including the Hunter silver cup for the best display and the Vaughn achievement medal for greatest number of points scored, and two trophies offered by the American Gladiolus society for seedlings, best single spike and best collection. Five second prizes completed his winnings in the amateur classes.

Homesickness Drives Girl To Leap Out of Window

Miss Emma Leitner, 24, who arrived in Grand Rapids three weeks ago from Germany, jumped from the roof of the home of Peter Karstens, at Hudsonville, fracturing her arm.

According to acquaintances, Miss Leitner had become homesick and was planning to leave for overseas. She visited a sister who lives near Hudsonville and she is believed to have started back to Grand Rapids when she suddenly dashed into the Karstens' home, where she was not known, ran upstairs, climbed through a window and upon the roof, and leaped.

A SCANDAL IN BOHEMIA

By A. CONAN DOYLE

To Sherlock Holmes she is always the woman. I have seldom heard him mention her under any other name. In his eyes she eclipses and predominates the whole of her sex. It was not that he felt any emotion akin to love for Irene Adler. All emotions, and that one particularly, were abhorrent to his cold, precise but admirably balanced mind. He was, I take it, the most perfect reasoning and observing machine that the world has seen; but as a lover, he would have placed himself in a false position. He never spoke of the softer passions, save with a gibe and a sneer. They were admirable things for the observer—excellent for drawing the veil from men's motives and actions. But for the trained reasoner to admit such intrusions into his own delicate and finely adjusted temperament was to introduce a distracting factor which might throw a doubt upon all his mental results. Grit in a sensitive instrument, or a crack in one of his own high-powered lenses, would not be more disturbing than a strong emotion in a nature such as his. And yet there was but one woman to him, and that woman was the late Irene Adler, of dubious and questionable memory.

I had seen little of Holmes lately. My marriage had drifted us away from each other. My own complete happiness, and the home-centered interests which rise up around the man who first finds himself master of his own establishment, were sufficient to absorb all my attention; while Holmes, who loathed every form of society with his whole Bohemian soul, remained in our lodgings in Baker street, buried among his old books, and alternating from week to week between cocaine and ambition, the drowsiness of the drug and the fierce energy of his own keen nature. He was still, as ever, deeply attracted by the study of crime, and ocupied his immense faculties and extraordinary powers of observation in following out those clues, and clearing up those mysteries, which had been abandoned as hopeless by the official police. From time to time I heard some vague account of his doings: of his summons to Odessa in the case of the Trepoff murder, of his clearing up of the singular tragedy of the Atkinson brothers at Trincomalee, and finally of the mission which he had accomplished so delicately and successfully for the reigning family of Holland. Beyond these signs of his activity, however, wheih I merely shared with all the readers of the daily press, I knew little of my former friend and companion.

One night—it was on the 20th of March, 1888—I was returning from a journey to a patient (for I had now returned to civil practice), when my way led me through Baker street. As I passed the well-remembered door, which must always be associated in my mind with my wooing, and with the dark incidents of the Study In Scarlet, I was seized with a keen desire to see Holmes again, and to know how he was employing his extraordinary powers. His rooms were brilliantly lighted, and even as I looked up, I saw his tall, spare figure pass twice in a dark silhouette against the blind. He was pacing the room swiftly, eagerly, with his head sunk upon his chest, and his hands clasped behind him. To me who knew his every mood and habit, his attitude and manner told their own story. He was at work again. He had risen out of his drug-created dreams and was hot upon the scent of some new problem. I rang the bell and was shown up to the chamber which had formerly been in part my own.

His manner was not effusive. It seldom was; but he was glad, I think, to see me. With hardly a word spoken, but with a kindly eye, he waved me to an armchair, threw across his case of cigars, and indicated a spirit case and a gasogene in the corner. Then he stood before the fire and looked me over in his singular introspective fashion.

"Wedlock suits you," he remarked. "I think, Watson, that you have put on seven and a half pounds since I saw you."

"Seven," I answered.

"Indeed, I should hae thought a little more. Just a trifle more, I fancy, Watson. And in practice again, I observe. You did not tell me that you intended to go into the harness."

"Then how do you know?" z

"I see it, I deduce it. How do I know that you have been getting yourself very wet lately, and that you have a most clumsy and careless servant girl?"

"My dear Holmes" said I, "this is too much. You would certainly have been burned had you lived a few centuries ago. It is true that I had a country walk on Thursday and came home in a dreadful mess; but as I have changed my clothes, I can't imagine how you deduce it. As to Mary Jane, she is incorrigible, and my wife has given her notice; but there again I fail to see how you work it out."

He chuckled to himself and rubbed his long nervous hand together.

"It is simplicity itself," he said. "My eyes tell me that on the inside of your left shoe, just where the firelight strikes it, the leather is scored by six almost parallel cuts. Obviously they have been caused by some one who has very carelessly scraped round the edges of the sole in order to remove crusted mud from it. Hence, you see, my double deduction that you had been out in vile weather, and that you had a particularly malignant boot-slicking specimen of the London slavey. As to your practice, if a gentleman walks into my rooms, smelling of iodoform, with a black mark of nitrate of silver upon his right forefinger and a bulge on the side of his top hat to show where he has secreted his stethoscope, I must be dull indeed if I do not pronounce him to be an active member of the medical profession."

I could not help laughing at the ease with which he explained his process of deduction. "When I hear you give your reasons," I remarked, "the thing always appears to me so ridiculously simple that I could easily do it myself, thouh at each successive instance of your reasoning I am baffled, until you explain your process. And yet, I believe that my eyes are as good as yours."

"Quite so," he answered, lighting a cigarette, and throwing himself down into an armchair. "You see, but you do not observe. The distinction is clear. For example, you have frequently seen the steps which lead up from the hall to this room."

"Frequently."

"How often?"

"Well, some hundreds of times.'

"Then how many are there?"

"How many? I don't know."

"Quite so! You have not observed. And yet you have seen. That is just my point. Now, I know there are seventeen steps, because I have both seen and observed. By the way, since you are interested in these little problems, and since you are good enough to chronicle one or two of my trifling experiences, you may be interested in this.' He threw over a sheet of thick-tined note paper which had been lying open upon the table. "It came by the last post," said he. "Read it aloud."

The note was undated, and without either signature or address.

"There will call upon you tonight, at a quarter to eight o'clock,' 'it said, "a gentleman who desires to consult you upon a matter of the very deepest moment. Your recent services to one of the royal houses of Europe have shown that you are one who may safely be trusted with matters which are of an importance which can hardly be exaggerated. This account of you we have from all quarters received. Be in your chamber, then, at that hour, and do not take it amiss if your visitor wears a mask."

"This is indeed a mystery" I remarked. "What do you imagine that it means?"

"I have no data yet. It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data. Insensibly one begins to twist facts to suit theories instead of theories to suit facts. But the note itself —what do you deduce from it?"

I carefully examined the writing, and the paper up which it was written.

"The man who wrote it was presumably well to do," I remarked, endeavoring to imitate my companion's processes. "Such paper could not be bought under half a crown a packet. It is peculiarly strong and stiff."

"Peculiar, that is the very word," said Holmes. "It is not an English paper at all. Hold it up to the light."

I did so, and saw a large E with a small g, a P and a large G with a small t woven into the texture of the paper.

"What do you make of that?" asked Holmes.

"The name of the maker, no doubt, or his monogram, rather."

"Not al. The G wtih the small t stands for 'Gesellschaft,' which is the German for 'company' It is a customary contraction like our 'Co.' P, of course, stands for 'Papier,' Now for the Eg. Let us glance at our 'Continental Gazetteer." He took down a heavy brown volume from his shelves. "Eglow, Eglonitz—here we are, Egria. It is in a German-speaking country—in Bohemia, not far from Carlsbad. 'Remarkable as being the scene of the death of Wallenstein, and for its numerous glass factories and paper mills.' Ha! ha! my boy, what do you make of that?" His eyes sparkled, and he sent up a great blue trium' phant cloud from his cigarette.

"The paper was made in Bohemia," I said.

"Precisely. And the man who wrote the note is a German. Do you note the peculiar construction of the sen' tence —'This account of you we have from all quarters received'? A Frenchman or Russian could not have written that. It is the German who is so uncourteous to his verbs. It only remains, therefore, to discover what is wanted by this German who writes upon Bohemian paper, and prefers wearing a mask to showing his face. And here he comes, if I am not mistaken, to resolve all our doubts."

As he spoke there was the sharp sound of horses' hoofs and grating wheels against the curb, followed by a sharp pull at the bell. Holmes whistled.

"A pair, by the sound," said he. "Yes," he continued, glancing out of the window. "A nice little brougham and a pair of beauties. A hundred and fifty guineas apiece. There's money in this case, Watson, if there is nothing else."

"I think I had better go, Holmes."

"Not a bit, doctor. Stay where you are. I am lost without my Boswell. And this promises to be interesting. It would be a pity to miss it.

"But your client——"

"Never mind him. I may want your help, and so may he. Here he comes. Sit down in that armchair, doctor, and give us your best atention.

A slow and heavy step, which had been heard upon the stairs and in the passage, paused immediately outside the door. Then there was a loud and authorative tap.

"Come in," said Holmes.

A man entered who could hardly have been less than six feet six inches in height, with a chest and limbs of a Hercules. His dress was rich with a richness which would, in England, be looked upon as akin to bad taste. Heavy bands of astrakhan were slash-across the sleeves and front of his double-breasted coat, while the deep blue cloak which was thrown over his shoulders was lined with flame-colored silk, and secured at the neck with a brooch which consisted of a single flaming beryl. Boots which extended halfway pu his calves, and which were trimmed at the top with rich brown fur, completed the impression of barbaric opulence which was suggested by his whole appearance. He carried a broadbrimmed hat in his hand, while he wore across the upper part of his face, extending down past the cheek-bones, a black visard mask, which he had apparrently adjsted that very moment, for his hand was still raised to it as he entered. From the lower part of the face he appeared to be a man of strong character, with a thick, hanging lip, and a long, straight chin, suggestive of resolution pushed to the length of obstinacy.

"You had my note?" he asked, with a deep, harsh voice and a strongly marked German accent. "I told you that I would call." He looked from one to the other of us, as if uncertain which to address.

"Pray take a seat," said Holmes. "This is my friend and colleague, Doctor Watson, who is occasionally good enough to help me in my cases. Whom have I the honor to address?"

"You may address me as the Count von Kramm, a Bohemian nobleman. I understand that this gentleman, your friend, is a man of honor and discretion, whom I may trust with a matter of the most extreme importance. If no., I should much prefer to communicate with you alone."

I rose to go, but Holmes caught me by the wrist and pushed me back into my chair. "It is both, or none," said he. "You may say before this gentleman anything which you may say to me."

The count shrugged his broad shoulders. "Then I must begin," said he, "by binding you both to absolute secrecy for two years; at the end of that time the matter will be of no importance. At present it is not too much to say that it is of such weight that is may have an influence upon European history."

"I promise," said Holmes.

"And I."

"You will excuse this mask," continued our strange visitor. "The august person who employs me wishes his agent to be unknown to you, and I may confess at once that the title by which I have just called myself is not exactly my own."

"I was aware of it," said Holmes, dryly.

"The circumstances are of great delicacy, and every precaution has to be taken to quench what might grow to be an immense scandal, and seriously compromise one of the reigning families of Europe. To speak plainly, the matter implicates the great House of Ormstein, hereditary kings of Bohemia."

"I was also aware of that," murmured Holmes, settling himself down in his armchair, and closing his eyes.

Our visitor glanced with some apparent surprise at the languid, lounging figure of the man who had been, no doubt, depicted to him as the most incisive reasoner and most energetic agent in Europe. Holmes slowly reopened his eyes and looked impatiently at his gigantic client.

"If your majesty would condescend to state your case," he remarked, "I should be better able to advise you."

"The man sprung from his chair and paced up and down the room in uncontrollable agitation. Then with a gesture of desperation he tore the mask from his face and hurled it upon the floor.

"You are right," he cried. "I am the king. Why should I attempt to conceal it?"

"Why, indeed?" murmured Holmes. "Your majesty had not spoken before I was aware that I was addressing Wilhelm Gottsreich Sigismond von Ormstein, Grand Duke of Cassel-Felstein—and hereditary King of Bohemia."

"But you can undertsand" said our strange visitor sitting down once more and passing his hand over his high white forehead "you can under- that I am not accustomed to doing such business in my own person. Yet the ma'ter was so delicate that I could not confide it to an agent without putting myself in his power. I have come incognito from Prague for the purpose of consulting you."

"Then pray consult," said Holmes, shutting his eyes once more.

"The facts are briefly these: Some five years ago, during a lengthy visit to Warsaw I made the acuaintance of the well-known adventuress Irene Adler. The name is no doubt familiar to you."

"Kindly look her up in my index, doctor, murmured Holmes, without opening his eyes. For many years he had adopted a system for docketing all paragraphs concerning men and things, so that it was difficult to name a subject or a person on which he could not at once furnish information. In this case I found her biography sandwiched in between that of a Hebrew rabbi and that of a staff commander who had wrtten a monograph upon the deep-sea fishes.

"Let me see!" sad Holmes. "Hum! 1858. Contralto—hum! La Scala—hum! Prima donna Imperial Opera of Warsaw—yes! Retired from operatic stage—ha! Living in London—quite so' Your majesty, as I understand, became entangled with this young person, wrote her some compromising letters, and is now desirous of getting those letters back."

"Precisely so. But how——"

"Was there a secret marriage?"

"None."

"No legal papers or certificates?"

"None."

"Then I fail to follow your majesty. If this young person should produce her letters for blackmailing or other purposes, how is she to prove their authenticity?"

"There is the writing."

"Pooh-pooh' Forgery."

"My private note paper."

"Stolen."

"My own seal."

"Imitated."

"My photograph."

"Bought."

"We were both in the photograph."

"Oh, dear! That is very bad. Your majesty has indeed committed an indiscretion."

"I was mad—insane."

"You have compromised yourself seriously."

"I was only crown prince then. I was young. I am but thirty now."

"It must be recovered."

"We have tried and failed."

"Your majesty must pay. It must be bought."

"She will not sell."

"Stolen, then."

"Five attempts hae been made. Twice burglars in my pay ransacked her house. Once we dierted her luggage when she traveled. Twice she has been waylaid. There has been no result."

"No sign of it?"

"Absolutely none."

Holmes laughed. "It is quite a pretty little problem," said he.

"But a very serious one to me," returned the king, reproachfully.

"Very, indeed. And what does she propose to do with the photograph?"

"To ruin me?"

"But how?"

"I am about to be married."

"So I have heard."

"To Clothilde Lothman von Saxe-Meiningen, second daughter of the King of Scandinavia. You may know the strict principles of her family. She is herself the very soul of delicacy. A shadow of a doubt as to my conduct would bring the matter to an end."

"And Irene Adler?"

"Threatens to send them the photograph. And she will do it. I know that she will do it. You do not know her but she has a soul of steel. She has the face of the most beautiful of women and the mind of the most resolute of men. Rather than I should marry another woman, there are no length to which she would not go—none."

"You are sure she has no sent it yet?"

"I am sure."

"And why?"

"Because she has said that she would send it on the day when the betrothal was publicly announced. That will be next Monday."

"Oh, then we have three days yet," said Holmes, with a yawn. "That is very fortunate, as I have one or two matters of importance to look into just at present. Yo rumajesty wil, of course, stay in London for the present?"

"Gentlemen:-

"Replying to yours of the 11th instant, will say that I am glad to add one more testimonial to the praise of HIMALYA. I am 44 years old and when I was 15 years of age I began to suffer with Asthma, and the paroxysms got worse and more frequent for the next ten years, until I could rest no way when an attack was on; but thanks to 'HIMALYA' I am well and I suffer no more from Asthma, and as it has been ten years since I was cured, I feel that the cure is permanent, but should it ever recur, I would send for another treatment of HIMALYA. I had used every remedy I could hear of, all to no good, but HIMALYA gave me relief from the start. HIMALYA is the one great boon for Asthma and Hay Fever sufferers, and I will always be glad to recommend it to all who suffer with same. As ever,

"Yours truly,

A recent tornado in Florida which has ruined so many splendid summer homes and killed in the neighborhood of 1500 people is probably one of the worst in the history of the Gulf Coast states. It will take some time to rebuild these towns which have been completely ruined by the wind.

A couple of young fellows landed in our village on Monday claiming to be ex-soldiers of the World war. They were dressed as Scotch Highlanders in plaids and kilts and one played very creditably on a tenor drum while the other was an expert with the bag-pipe. They marched up and down Main street playing all the popular airs of the day, and were first class musicians. They were soliciting funds and claimed to have been seriously hurt in the war and unable to otherwise gain a livlihood. Most of our citizens donated.

The Advantages of Good Fire Protection

The small villages of Southern Michigan are to-day up against a hard proposition for fire protection, as it becomes absolutely necessary to take in the farmers of the surrounding country as partners in the transaction. Most of the little towns are so hard pressed for funds to finance their affairs, and taxes are so high that it would seem well-nigh out of reason to expect to own and operate anything in the way of a large-sized fire fighting outfit such as cities own and operate. So under these conditions the manufacturers have been experimenting and planning with the result that they have perfected and produced an up-to-date efficient fire fighting chemical apparatus at a minimum cost, so constructed as to travel the roads under all conditions.

Such an outfit is produced and put out by the Obenchain-Boyer Company of Logansport, Indiana, and guaranteed to throw a stream 70 feet from the nozzle for 15 minutes with one charge.

The village expects to own one of these outfits in partnership with the farmers of the surrounding township, and it might be well to remind the patrons that after the machine is bought and paid for there will still be a small expense for upkeep and hiring a driver and care taker. Such a driver will have to be paid and must at all times be near the engine house.

We believe that something should be done to increase the limits of our protection in the way of cisterns. We already have some good cisterns and we need more.

Altogether, the fire engine project seems quite feasible and we are determined that it will go through. Mr. Reed reports the outside signers as about rounded up and all indications point to a real efficient and satisfactory service for North Adams and the surrounding country.

312 IN MICHIGAN ARE MILLIONAIRES

Michigan has 312 of the 11,000 millionaires in the United States today, according to Joseph S. McCoy, government actuary, United States treasury. Mr. McCoy further points out that one American out of every 10,450 has accumulated a million dollars and that the nation now has its first billionanre.

Seventy-four persons acknowledged net incomes of more than $1,000,000 in income tax returns for 1924, their joint incomes, less allowable deductions, totaling $154,852,709 or an average of more than $2,000,000 per person, the article states.

"In addition to those with annual incomes in excess of a million dollars, there are those who are actually worth a million though their incomes may be much less," Mr. McCoy continues.

"An American with one million dollars cash capital invested in government bonds at par, paying the Liberty loan rate of interest of 4¼ per cent, would have an income of only $42,500. The individual who receives an annual net income of $50,000 exclusive of personal servcie, it would seem safe to say, is a millionaire.

"The internal revenue report for 1923 shows that, of 7,698,321 returns, 8,600 were made by individuals whose wealth was probably in excess of $1,000,000. In 1914 there were probably about 4,500 millionaires in the United States. This number increased to about 6,600 in 1915, to about 10,900 in 1916, and to about 11,800 in 1917, the maximum number of American millionaires at any one time, due probably to war conditions."

The three wealthiest citizens according to latest returns own $33,811,500 of the obligations of states and political subdivisions thereof; $82,691,850 of obligations of the United States not taxable and $3,823,589 partially taxable. In addition they hold corporate securities from which the dividends in 1924 amounted to about $30,000,000. Thus these three persons hold stocks and bonds totalling from $750,000,000 to $800,000,000 from which they receive about $34,500,000 interest and dividends.

Tern Is Declared Not Enemy of Game Fish

The common tern is charged by commercial fishermen with destroying game fish. Scientists say ths isn't true. The birds, called "pigeon gulls" by the fishermen, feed almost exclusively on shoal water minnows.

On Lone Tree Island, a heavy storm washed away thousands of tern nests. But the birds promptly laid more eggs and raised the usual quota of young. The tern s protected by federal law.

STATE IMMUNE TO FLAPPER KNEE

And now comes flappers' knee.

The campaign for governor, the National league baseball race, the fall of the franc, all pale into insignificance compared with the latest ailment causing consternation in flapper ranks.

Here's something more serious. Here's a knee that was cool and dimpled—now it's dry, chapped, baked!

Extremely short dance frocks, moonlight, still nights, ripping waters and east winds are the cause of the latest fashionable flapper ailment, but it seems to have affectd only frequenters of salt water bathing beaches. Girl's knees in Michigan are in the pink of condition; the terrible ailment has not traveled this far west yet.

This new malady lately has come to the attention of doctors at various eastern beach resorts. It has nothing to do with housemaid's knee, which comes from doing a lot of hard work that is most distasteful. But flapper's knee is obtained in a much more pleasurable way, although the resultant effect is no less painful. Girls in the latest above-the-knee, flimsy, shimmery dance frocks go out-of-doors all heated to meander along the beach or rest along the oceanway. The breeze strikes their tender, unacclimatized knees. Result, a crimp—and that's "flapper's knee."

10,000 IN DETROIT IS OLD FORECAST

Predictions that Detroit would some day have a population of great numbers, and forecasting 10,000 residents for the state's metropolis by the succeeding January 1, is made in an interesting almanac published in 1838 and owned by George A. Payne, of Jackson.

In 1837, when the last count was taken, the book shows a population of 9,763 persons and comments on its remarkable growth since 1818 when it had but 1,110 inhabitants.

The entire state had a population of 87,278 in 1835, according to a chart, and 4,528 in 1810. Of the latter number 24 are listed under the heading of "slaves."

Steven T. Mason is listed as governor of the state when the pamphlet was printed; other state executives being Edward Mundy, lieutenant-governor; Kin Pitchette, secretary of state; Robert Abbott, auditor-general; Henry Howard, state treasurer; John D. Pierce, superintendent of public instruction; Edward N. Bridges, bank commissioner; Douglass Houghton, state geologist; John E. Schwartz, adjust-general; Daniel Goodwin, quartermaster-general; Calvin C. Jackson, private secretary to the governor, and John Chester, governor's military secretary.

Henry Howard was mayer of Detroit; Ross Wilkins, recorder; Spencer Norvell, city clerk; A. H. McArthur, marshal; Alex W. Buel, city attorney, and James Cicot, collector.

There were 39 counties in Michigan, the old document shows, showing the population in 16 of them as follows: Wayne, 16,638; St. Clair, 2,244; Branch, 764;; Calhoun, 1,714; Oakland, 13,844; Kalamazoo, 3,124; Monroe, 8,542; St. Joseph, 3,168; Jackson, 1,856; Macomb, 6,055; Machilimackinac, 891; Washtenaw, 14,920; Berrien, 1,787; Cass, 3,280; Lenawee, 7,911, and Chippewa, 526.

The old almanac is still in excellent condition.

Magnate's Wife Plans to Run "Intimate" Theatre for Chicago Elite

Mrs. Samuel Insull, wife of Chicago's public utilities magnate, has plans for the creation of a repertoire theatrical company under her own management. If her project becomes a reality the Studebaker theatre, on Michigan Boulevard, will become a "stock" theatre of an unusual and intimate type. Mrs. Insull is seen here in her character as Madame Teazle in the production of "The School of Scandal" which she sponsored last season.

THE PLAN OF OUR SOULS

HARRY J. MALONE, JR.

Ere the moon and stars shine out tonight,
Numberless souls will come forth for their fight,
They know not whence they come or go,
Nor awaiting them the joys or woes,
The many heart-throbs that will fill their life
The constant struggle for ease over strife.
The glassy tears that will be shed
By following the paths that are easily led,
They know naught of the Divine Plan—
That was made to guide the soul of man.

But as the hours mould days into years—
And destiny tests their lives with fears—
The fears that have caused many a man—
To fall out of line of the Divine Plan,
And take the things so easily found,
Instead of following the path beyond.
By weakening to these tests that come
Many a soul lost where he would have wone,
And a gifted soul with its birth-right—
Lost out in its bitter struggle of life.

The struggle is bitter and hard no doubt—
But each one of us can gaze about—
And see the souls that won the fray—
Whose task to them is now merely play.
But don't forget that soul of theirs—
Evaded and fought the many snares—
That await th ebeginner as he goes out
And will test his life with fears and doubts—
Only to learn if he will withstand,
The attacks upon his gifted plan.

So the souls that are born this day or night—
Come from a plan that's only right,
And it was written long ago—
That they must fight as along they go—
But after the struggle, if well done—
Their goal is reached and laurels won,
And the world pays homage to another man—
For he struggled and won his given plan
A plan that awaits both you and I—
And our to be had, but we "must try."

Landmark of Days When Lumber Meant Prosperity Vanishes

The last concrete reminder of the days when lumber was king and lumberjacks in calked boots stalked the streets of Bear Lake and swapped amazing yarns of Paul Bunyan, has disappeared. The old freight and passenger depot of Bear Lake and Eastern realroad, only remaining relic of "the good old days" when Bear Lake was a busy lumbering town, has been torn down and the lumber used for a building to house some of the boats of the summer residents.

In the days when the village was born in the midst of a virgin forest and the lumberjacks began to invade the woods with saw and axe and peavy, a mill for cutting the logs into lumber was built at the edge of the lake. In those days transportation systems were limited and the nearest outlet to the outside world was by way of Lake Michigan. It was then that the lumber road known as the Bear Lake and Eastern was built. Its western terminus was the village of Pierport and from Bear Lake a spur line reached out into the woods to bring the logs to the mill.

A sensible woman seldom wastes her time on a handsome man.

Steel observation towers are to be erected in the various timbered areas of Alabama and an aid in combating fires. In rough territory a fire may burn for a considerable time before it is discovered, and additional range of vision is obtained from towers which afford the added elevation necessary to quick fire detection.

Tells of Possible Cure for Cancer In Lead Injections

A more hopeful outlook for treatment of cancer than has existed previously has been found in the recent use of intravenous injections of lead, Dr. Richard R. Smith, a Grand Rapids surgeon, announced, following his return to Grand Rapids after an eight wekes' tour of hospitals in Liverpool, Glasgow, Edinburgh and the Scandinavian countries with members of the American Gynecological club.

The injections, which have been sed in Liverpool, but only in advanced cases, seem to offer more than a local cure, said the surgeon, who qualified his report by explaining that there are many obstacles which must be removed if the treatment is to become popular. The dangers in the use of lead injection are so great that Blair Bell, who is the leader in the experimentation, has not advised its use by the medical profession, Dr. Smith pointed out. So far it has been utilized only in advanced cases which would otherwise be regarded as desperate or hopeless.

Wild Berries Blamed For Children's Death

Coroner L. B. Lee of Muskegon county has expressed the belief that wild berries caused the death of Teressa, 9 years old, and William, 18 months old, children of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Erb, of Updyke.

The coroner found wild berries of a poisonous nature near the house and was told by the Erb children that they head eaten some of them.

SINGING SANDS ARE AT TAWAS POINT

Michigan nas a Cape Cod in Tawas Point near East Tawas, according to Prof. J. F. Cox(head of the agricultural crops department at the Michigan State College.

"The singing sands of the east coast are here," he says. "As you walk on the beach a sound like singing can be heard.

"The lighthouse and the coast guard station add their touch of adventure and picturesqueness. Instead of a clock striking the hour we have a ship's bell on the coast guard station ringing four bells and eight bells as though we were at sea.

"The natives keep marten houses just as they do in the east. Sailboats dot the bay. Hardly anywhere else on the Great Lakes is the surf so like the sea surf as it is here.

"But I am not speaking of this one section in particular. The whole of Michigan's east shore provides far more of the reality which artists look for than the average summer resort can offer.

Prof. Cox explained the "singing sand" which he had emphasized as among the paralleis with Cap Cod.

"The particles of sand are so spherical and of so hard a quality that as one steps they rub together and squeak under the feet, producing a sound not at all un-musical in quality," he said.

Which is probably as good an explanation as any, why the sand—so hard that at the Mich-e-ke-wis Park at Alpena motor cars are raced over it—provides an obligato in minor key for the major majesty of Lake Huron's symphony of surf.

All things come to those who stop waiting and go after them.

ONCE THRIVING CITY SELLS OUT, MOVES

Unlike the once thriving village of Sherman, a few miles north of Mesick, now abandoned and fallen into decay, Coline, a village of several hundred inhabitants at the intersection of Wexford and Manistee counties, sold out and moved away bag and baggage the other day. The last house was trucked 80 miles to Northport. Applications came for the 3-room portable houses from all section of the country, Chicago and Maywood desiring many for summer colony homes.

Three years ago the Consumers Power Co., of Grand Rapids, employing a force of several hundred workmen on their dam project on the Manistee river, now the largest completed dam project in the state, erected the town of Coline. Streets, a sewer system, electric lights and basements were in readiness when the sawmill delivered its "grist" of houses, 150 portables all alike. The community moved in; boarding houses, hotels and a postoffice soon following.

AUTHOR of "A MAN TO HIS MATE" "RIMROCK TRAIL"

—16—

Her face blazed dull crimson, the glitter in her eyes concentrated to flames of jealousy. Here was the real reason—aside from mercenary interest—for her revelation.

"How do you know he is in love with her?"

"How do I know?" She laughed scornfully. "Because I am a woman. Because I know Ted Baxter. Because I know that he never loved me, has never loved any girl. We've been amusements for him. But he's in love now. He couldn't deny it when I taxed him with it.

"Baxter's rotten, clean through. I'll tell you what your 'best friend' did. Not because you wouldn't lend him money—or couldn't. But because he saw a chance to do away with you as a rival and a chance to make money at the same time. He couldn't resist that combination.

"So he told her and her father all about your schemes, that you had made friends with them to cover your prospecting, your surveys and your photographing. It seems that one of their men, a Mexican, had been watching you. He saw you early one morning where you had been testing rock. He reported to Mr. Clinton and that made Clinton suspicious. The girl stuck up for you at first. But now—you know better than I do the kind of man Clinton is. But he was furious. He says you abused his hospitality, that you intended to desecrate the graves of his dead. He called you a Yankee spy. And he gave Ted Baxter a purchase option for agricultural purposes. Principally, of course, as a protection for himself against condemnation.

"Now Ted is laughing at you. The representative of the colony is in town. Ted takes him to Hermanos valley tomorrow. And you are the fool. Unless . . ."

"Unless what?"

"Baxter thinks he is going to marry that girl. I don't know what kind of a girl she is. She may take him on the rebound, if she was in love with you. But she won't marry him. Baxter is going to marry me."

"I thought you were going away."

"After he marries me. After he makes our child honest." The flame leaped again in her eyes. "He dared—he dared to pretend that he was not the father of my baby. And he knows—oh, he knows different. I was a little fool when I met him but—I was a good girl. I wanted fun—and I got it. But, if I pay, he'll pay, too. I'm not going to live with him. He's a liar and a cheat. My baby may inherit that. If it does I hope it dies.

"I've got to give up my position soon, the girls are beginning to notice things. I'll go away. I can get another place after it's all over. But I'll not go on his money. Even if he came through. Now, Mr. Warner, have I earned my fifteen hundred dollars?"

"You shall have it," said Caleb slowly. Resentment was swift, mounting to rage, within him but he kept a grip on himself—until he met Baxter. "You've earned your money. You shall have it tomorrow."

She saw little muscles bunched about his lower jaw, the clean, firmest line of it, light like that reflected from polished steel in his eyes. Into her own eyes admiration entered.

"You've got something up your sleeve," she said knowingly. "I'd like to watch your session with Baxter. Don't kill him." She laughed, off key, recklessly.

"I won't," Caleb promised grimly. "How'll I get the money to you?"

She took out a pencil and a card and scribbled.

"Here's my address. Send it there. Now, let me go away first while you settle the check. It might spoil your reputation if we were seen going out together," she added, bitterly. "Good-by."

She parted the curtains and was gone as Caleb touched the bell. The waiter came promptly and he paid the bill and started for the street.

As Caleb entered the foyer the swinging doors from the main cafe opened and Clinton and his daughter emerged.

Automatically, without thought, he raised his hat. Betty Clinton was looking in his direction and she did not evade his glance. Neither did she answer it. But Caleb saw a faint color stealing up from neck to brow, saw her eyebrows contract in annoyance. Then her father saw him. Clinton's eyes blazed while Caleb bit his lips as he replaced his hat, furious at his action yet not certain that he would not have repeated it. He was unconscious of anything that he had done that should cause him to retract courtesies towards the Clintons. To do so would be an acknowledgment of a shamefacedness he was far from feeling.

"Go on and join Baxter," Clinton said in a low voice to his daughter. She went through the open door held for her by an attendant. Baxter had been with them. He had gone ahead to the car. Baxter must have been sitting beneath the alcove where Caleb and Mary Morgan had held their interview. And Betty Clinton had seen the pale face and shrinking figure of the stenographer on the stairs behind Caleb. He was sure of that as Clinton advanced toward him threateningly while the thoughts shuttled swiftly through his brain. He faced Clinton coolly.

"You are impudent, sir," said Clinton, his breath almost fuming with the temper he held in uncertain leash. "I have only one arm left, sir," went on Clinton, "but, if you have the impertinence to again salute me or my daughter, I shall find it sufficient to horsewhip you, you sneaking Yankee!"

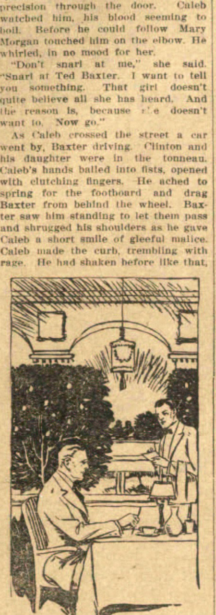
Caleb did not flinch. His voice gritted.

"You will apologize to me some day, sir. I . . ."

"Pah!" Clinton wheeled, his straight, spare form marching with military precision through the door. Caleb watched him, his blood seeming to boil. Before he could follow Mary Morgan touched him on the elbow. He whirled, in no mood for her.

"Don't snarl at me," she said. "Snarl at Ted Baxter. I want to tell you something. That girl doesn't quite believe all she has heard. And the reason is, because she doesn't want to. Now go."

As Caleb crossed the street a car went by, Baxter driving. Clinton and his daughter were in the tonneau. Caleb's hands balled into fists, opened with clutching fingers. He ached to spring for the footboard and drag Baxter from behind the wheel. Baxter saw him standing to let them pass and shrugged his shoulders as he gave Caleb a short smile of gleeful malice. Caleb made the curb, trembling with rage. He had shaken before like that, waiting for the zero hour in the trenches, before he lunged over the top with righteous murder in his heart. If he had had the instant opportunity he would have smashed Baxter to a pulp or choked him. He swung off uptown, revenge deferred, anger master of his brain.



The Waiter Came Promptly and He Paid the Bill and Started for the Street.

Caleb had no immediate means of tracing Baxter. But, sooner or later, the other must show up at the apartment-house to change his clothes—or at the club. Caleb went to the latter place first. He held only one fixed desire, to come face to face with his false friend and have a reckoning with him. Baxter's actions had been deliberate, despicable. Caleb might have passed over the land deal with contempt. It was shyster, underhanded business, but many might consider it merely smart and consider that Caleb should have protected his own interests. But, to treacherously use stolen knowledge from the Water company to undermine Caleb with Betty Clinton—her father did not seem to enter into the immediate problem—to proclaim Caleb as an abuser of hospitality—worse—to make him out a scoundrel in the eyes of the girl he loved—for Baxter to endeavor to gain for himself the love of that girl, was beyond all forgiveness. It clamored for punishment, physical, amply sufficient.

The recollection of many times when he had pulled Baxter out of a scrape, often to his own detriment, added fuel to the fire of his resentment. For the first time he saw his friend clearly—selfish, unprincipled, spoiled—to use Mary Morgan's stronger term, "rotten."

Marlin stopped opposite to him and broke into his musings.

"Hinckley wants to get in touch with you," he said. "Promised him I'd tell you if I ran across you. He's probably home by now."

"All right." Caleb's answer was apathetic. For the moment business seemed a dead issue but he roused himself and went to the telephone booths. Hinckley's voice came to him, eager, stimulating.

"I want to go over the ground with you right away," he said. "Just a preliminary, personal survey. We haven't any time to lose. Will tomorrow morning be convenient?"

Caleb responded to the engineer's energy.

"Surely," he replied. "Make it noon."

"Then the Ferry building for the one o'clock Broad Gauge boat. It connects with the Coyote Canyon train."

Caleb went back to his seat. The clubrooms began to thin out and he ordered his dinner. There was no sign of Baxter. When the meal was announced he called the head boy.

"If Mr. Baxter comes in, let me know. I shall be at dinner."

"He won't be in, sir. He telephoned a little while ago to tell Mr. Henley he'd meet him at ten o'clock. They had an appointment outside."

Henley was a man patterned to Baxter's caliber. Caleb had met him and never cared to press the acquaintance. Henley had been Baxter's companion on trips with Mary Morgan and Henley's own special flame. Tonight meant some similar expedition. It probably meant also that Baxter would get drunk.

He finished his dinner with a cigar and walked up to Semaphore hill. There were a few unimportant letters waiting for him, and a small package. He opened it. The jade pendant was inside, the sign of Pisces, returned from Betty Clinton without a word. He held it for a little in the palm of his hand, his thoughts bitter, before he put the trinket away in his desk drawer, which he locked.

Baxter did not materialize. Caleb was up before the night man went off and made certain of that fact. After he had taken his bag to the office and added to it what he needed, he dropped in at the club before he went to the bank. And he met Doctor Fields coming up from the dining room. The physician stopped him.

"Suppose you know about Baxter?"

"No. What?"

"Nothing serious, though this might be a good chance to make him think so. You share a suite with him, don't you? And he didn't show up last night? For cause. Henley brought him home from the beach poisoned—that's the only word for it. They are selling the crudest kind of stuff out at the resort. It's got to be stopped. Baxter arrived literally blind drunk. Eighty-eight per cent crude alcohol with glycerin, a little carbolic acid to give it the bite, burnt sugar for coloring.

"And I'm going to try and put the fear of God and whisky into his heart—or his liver—while he's here in the club under my eye. Let Ted Baxter keep up this game and he'll practically lose his reason, be purely bestial, he might commit any crime—even murder. You're his friend. Do what you can. He'll be fairly fit by tomorrow. The stuff hasn't really got him yet. We'll keep him quiet today with bromides, or something stiffer. You're closer to him than any one else just now, I fancy."

"I'm sorry, doctor," said Caleb, "but we've had a row. Pretty serious one. And I don't know. . . . I've got to go out of town on urgent business for a day or two. . . ."

"Hah! Had a row? Then you can't do a thing. Just aggravate him. Confound him, he's rowing with all his best friends. Not quite responsible perhaps. Good-by, Warner."

Form Your Own Idea of "Outstanding" Man

Somebody signing his name "Me" writes: "I frequently see the phrase 'an outstanding man.' So I went to Webster and found that 'outstanding' meant 'uncollected' (as of a debt). Now, uncollected means not received, and if a man is not received, he is unaccepted. So an outstanding man is an unaccepted man. Is that right?"

No. You have got sidetracked somewhere, the Cleveland Plain Dealer points out. Uncollected means scattered, dispersed. Dispersed means diverged, a divergence is a variation, variation is dissimilarity. A man who is not similar to other men is either superior or inferior. But his dissimilarity is marked only when he is superior—that is, when he stands out above the rest. Therefore, an outstanding man. Thus we come full circle.

But an outstanding man is an egregious man (Latin, "e," out of; and "grex," a herd—one who stands out from the common herd). Anything that is egregious is eccentric, and therefore absurd. The absurd is despised and looked down upon; the despicable is small and insignificant. You can hardly notice what is significant. Therefore, an outstanding man is a nonentity.

You can prove anything by the dictionary.

Link Faith With Charity

Shut not thy purse strings always against painted distress. Act a charity sometimes. When a poor creature (outwardly and visibly such) comes before thee, do not stay to inquire whether the "seven small children" in whose name he implores thy assistance have a veritable existence. Rake not into the bowels of unwelcome truth, to save a halfpenny. It is good to believe him. If he is not that he pretendeth, give, and under a personate father of a family think (if thou pleasest) that thou hast relieved an indigent bachelor.—Charles Lamb.

Modern Dyestuffs

Modern dyestuffs can be just as fast and give just as beautiful colors as any used in past times, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It is sentiment chiefly that makes us cling to the idea that the natural dyes obtained from plants and animals are best. Many of them are lovely colors it is true, and the time that has passed since the cloth was dipped in the dye pot has in many cases mellowed the tones and made them even lovelier. Many of the so-called artificial dyes used now are exactly the same from the chemical standpoint as those from berries and bark and other natural sources. In some cases the new dyes are better than the old. The modern manufacturer of dyestuffs knows exactly what is in them, and for that reason is surer of results.

Reindeer Characteristics

It may be said that reindeer have some of the characteristics of sheep, cattle and horses. They flock together like sheep, but graze more like cattle, and in intelligence and activity they more nearly resemble the horse. Reindeer are much more intelligent than cattle, but not so intelligent as the horse.

Say Mass in Honor of Spirits of Elephants

A Buddhist mass was recently held in Tokyo for the spirits of all elephants that have supplied ivory for ivory carving in Japan. Members of the Tokio Art Objects Dealers' association and ivory carvers assembled at Kokoku temple for the ceremony. Fifteen prizes opened the service with the reading of Buddhist prayers. A large monument was also unveiled in honor of the spirits of the departed elephants. The president of the association said: "We who obtain our living from this ivory cannot help feeling grateful to the elephants which have been furnishing materials for us to work with. It is for this reason that we comfort their spirits by holding a mass for them. We think we also do honor and comfort to the spirits of our ancestors, who were likewise in the ivory trade. We wish all artists and dealers in ivory objects to visit the monument as a shrine when they come to Tokyo."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Canada Institutes Bird Sanctuaries

With the progress of settlement the Canadian prairies are losing those special characteristics generally associated with them. Their isolation, their treelessness, their lack of social amenities, are becoming things of the past.

Yet certain developments need to be regulated. For example, the Department of the Interior has just set aside a number of public shooting grounds, and has added eleven bird sanctuaries to those already established. These regions contain the most important breeding grounds on the American continent for wild fowl, which, from time immemorial, have found in marsh and reedy lake food and security. The advent of civilization, with its attendant draining of swamps, tends to reduce the size of the breeding grounds and this, together with increased facilities for sport, has reduced the number of birds to an alarming extent, some species, indeed, being threatened with extinction.

Where It Went

It was well after midnight and dark as pitch when the car stopped before the farmhouse.

Though there was no sign of a light the motorist blew and blew in the hope of arousing some one. Finally an indistinct figure appeared at the door, and inquired as to the cause of the trouble.

"Where does this road go to?" bellowed the motorist with more vigor than politeness in his tone.

"I've lived here seven years, and so far as I've been able to see it hain't never gone anywheres," replied a peevish voice as the door slammed.

Hindu Boy Scouts

The boy scout movement has penetrated well into India, where several good working organizations have already made themselves felt with the youth of the land. The Hindu boy scouts recently held an exhibit showing the results of their work in camping, pioneering, handicraft, bookbinding, carpentry, and many indoor as well as all of the outdoor arts. Strangely enough the boys have not adopted any of the Indian games for scouting games.

Shell Fossils in Well

In drilling an oil well recently near Medicine Hat, a stratum of fish and shell fossils was found. The fossils were struck at a depth of 3,720 feet, and it was apparent that they were being washed into the well. Other finds were reported. Iron pyrites and talcum were found at varying depths, the talcum rock being about 750 feet down.

FIRST to adopt DUCO

THE General Motors Research Laboratories cooperated with E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company, Inc., in the development of Duco—an achievement ranking in importance with the invention of the self-starter.

DUCO is not only far more lasting than paint and varnish; it is finer, more beautiful and more economical to apply in factory production.

DUCO was first adopted by Oakland, and immediately thereafter by the rest of the General Motors cars.

BUYERS of General Motors cars have profited by the development of this finer, more enduring finish. Their cars wear well longer.

TASK IS BROADENED

The Right Rev. Msgr. Edward Jones, director of the Society of the Propagation of the Faith in the Catholic Diocese of Detroit for more thar a year, has been placed in charge of this work for the entire United States, according to a recent announcement.

SERBIA QUIET, SAYS PRELATE

Balkan Country Needs Loan To Develop Its Rich Natural Resources

Serbia, now Jugoslavia, the country where the shot that started the World War was fired and which even today is sometimes called "Europe's most peaceful spot in the world, powder magazine", is in reality the according to the Most Rev. Nicholas Dobrecic, Archbishop of Antivari and Primate of Serbia, who visited Detroit recently. Only a loan—a good American loan—is necessary to complete the happiness of his country, the primate said.

Firmly refusing to discuss politics, the primate gave a brief description of the present peaceful situation in Serbia. He stressed the distinction between the problems of the state and those of the church.

"The pastor takes care of the spiritual welfare of his flock and does not interfere with political matters," he said. "The majority of the Jusoslav population is Greek Orthodox, but we also have many millions of Roman Catholics and Mohammedans. All religious groups work in harmony. The entire country is now enjoying a reign of political as well as religious peace and harmony."

Jugoslavia was ruined industrially by the World War, the primate declared, and its recovery since the war has been slow. Rich natural resources of gold silver, iron and platinum, however, are lying unworked for lack of capital and the United States is the only country which can supply this need.

Archbishop Dobrecic came to the United States to attend the Eucharistic Congress and has spent two months in touring the country.

CLERICAL APPOINTMENTS ANNOUNCED BY BISHOP

Mt. Clemens to Get New Parish Headed by Father Renaud

A number of changes among the diocesan clergy were announced recently by the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, Bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Detroit. The Rev. Fr. Victor Renaud, formerly assistant pastor of St. Peter's church, Mt. Clemens, has been assigned the task of establishing a new parish in the Bath City, to take care of the overflow from St. Peter's, especially near the lake where a considerable growth has been experienced.

The Rev. Fr. Thomas Beahan, a newly-ordained priest, has been appointed assistant pastor of St. Paul's church, Owosso. The Rev. Fr. David Duncan, assistant pastor of St. Vincent de Paul's, Detroit, has been relieved of his parochial duties and appointed a faculty member of Sacred Heart Seminary. The Rev. James P. Welsh for the past seven years rector of St. Charles church Coldwater, has been brought to Detroit and soon will be assigned to a parish in that city.

Additional appointments announced recently are as follows: Rev. Fr. Erwin A. Lefebvre, assistant pastor of Holy Rosary Church, Detroit; Rev. Fr. James J. O'Brien, assistant pastor of St. Ambrose's Church, Detroit; Rev. Fr. Joseph J. McIsaac, assistant pastor of St. Gabriel's Church, Detroit. It was announced last week that Father McIsaac had been appointed to St. Peter's Church, Mt. Clemens. This was an error. The Rev. Fr. George J. Cairns, for some time instructor in mathematics at the Sacred Heart Seminary, Detroit, has been appointed to that post.

MANY CONGRATULATE BISHOP ON ELEVENTH ANNIVERSARY

The Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Detroit, recently celebrated the eleventh anniversary of his elevation to the episcopacy. He was consecrated coadjutor bishop of Grand Rapids, in that city, Sept. 8, 1915. In July, 1918, he was appointed Bishop of Detroit and was installed in November of the same year by the late Most Rev. Henry Moeller, D. D., then Archbishop of Cincinnati.

During the eight years of Bishop Gallagher's tenancy of the see of Detroit the dioceses has grown tremendously. Many new parishes have been established and among the large projects which he has initiated are the Sacred Heart Seminary, the finest of its kind in the country, the proposed cathedral soon to be erected and the new episcopal residence in Palmer Woods.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Why Probition?

One of the most effective weapons for use in defense of the Eighteenth Amendment, and the necessary enforcement laws, is the widest possible diffusion hrough the press and other available means, of the reasons why the alcoholic liquor traffic should be outlawed.

When we remember that in order to amend the Constitution of the United States an amendment must have the favorable vote of two-thirds of both Houses of Congress and be ratified by both houses of the legislatures of three fourths of the several states, we must conclude that the Eighteenth Amendment had back of it a vast preponderance of public sentiment, and an insistent public demand for its existence in the fundamental law of the nation. Such was indeed the condition regarding the Eighteenth Amendment and that condition was not obtained in any brief period of time or by the use of any surreptitious methods. Agitation and what might be termed organized efforts against the use of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes date back to 1775. More than a hundred years previous strong measures were taken against drunkenness, in some cases those found guilty being publicly whipped and heavy fines assessed against unlicensed liquor dealers. With the beginning of the Eighteenth century organized work for total abstinence began; certain churches came out strongly against the use or sale of strong drink, and President Jefferson, in a message to Congress, urged that body to prohibit liquor selling among Indians. From these early days on down through the years there were ceaseless efforts to curb in one way or another the traffic in alcoholic liquors and to promote total abstinence. Various temperance societies sprang into being and did good work in reclaiming drinking men and promoting sentiment against the "public house", later the "saloon," With the organization of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union a new and untried force entered the field of action. Systematic work was begun "to educate the young and form a better public sentiment." Temperance societies were formed in Sunday schools and the thought of temperance instruction in the public schools soon took form. To the promotion of this idea the W. C. T. U. gave itself with tireless zeal until every state legislature and the United States Congress had enacted laws requiring instruction in all public schools concerning the true nature and effects of alcohol. Then and there began the downfall of the rum rule in the United States.

The millions of children in our schools began to learn that "abstinence from alcoholic drinks is not a form of self denial. It is door to the highest form of personal liberty—self control."

Some of the greatest scientific authorities of the world undertook the study of the nature and effects of alcohol upon the human being It was found that alcohol is a narcotic drug. It is not a stimulant as men long supposed, but a depressant. Its characteristic action is to check or paralyze activity and is closely allied to that of either or chlorotorm. Many experiments were carried out to indicate the true effect of alcohol on alertness of mind, precision of movement, and the power of self-control. The quantities of alcohol were small—"equivalent to that contained in two or three small glasses of 3.5 percent beer but were sufficient to disarrange the safety-valve of conduct." It was proved that one can not safely use alcoholic liquors any more than he can safely use any other narcotic drug. It was discovered too, that the average abstainer lives longer than the drinker and is more "fit". During the world war drinkers and other drug addicts were not accepted for service nor was liquor furnished the soldiers.

It was discovered also through scientific tests that alcoholic liquor injures health: contributes heavily to certain forms of heart disease and other maladies. It impairs bodily resistance and the drinker becomes more susceptible to various diseases and is less likely to recover. It impairs the action of brain and nerve cells, long before the individual suspects any danger. It increases danger from excessive heat and cold. It was discovered that many victims of heat exhaustion had been using alcoholic beverages, and the same was true of many who perished, supposedly, from cold. It was found that the successful athlete did not use alcohol; nor the successful marksman, nor runner, nor bookkeeper, nor machinist, nor locomotive engineer. Three and one half times as many accidents happened among insured drinkers as among all insured workers. These and myriad other reasons were adduced to prove that, as regards alcohol, the only safe rule for the individual is that of total abstinence. These facts were carried from school and college, into homes, churches, Sunday schools, lodges, labor organizations, clubs, social circles and finally worked out into the laws of the land. It was the sober, sane, educated, aspiring second thought of a great nation, that for the protection of its homes its little children, its men and women, its own national stability and power, and as a rightful example to all the world, placed the Eighteenth Amendment in its Constitution. God grant that for the sake of our national future, and the welfare of the world—"It is There to stay."—National W. C. T. U. Publshing House.

Discovering Relics Of The Past

An expedition from the University of Michigan is on the site of ancient Antioch exploring the ruins of that city and bringing to light the beautiful sculptures and splendid carvings and all the buried statutes which have lain so long under the debris. In many places can be found three or four layers, representing af many epochs of time. As digging progresses it becomes evident that that Antioch has been cleared of all building material above the ground which could be handily carried away. The main effort of the searchers was to uncovor the early christian church or basilica, acting upon the suggestion that a still earlier building had stood on the same site only considerably lower down. The digging was resumed with great caution. Water pipes in Antioch today are found in good condition, and fully capable of carrying water after nearly 2,000 years. The supply came in a large aquaduct under arches, over hills and ravines, and through tunnels from the Mountains six miles away. Great numbers of old coins, broken statues and other relics were uncovered which will make an unexcelled collection for the Ann Arbor museum.

A large display was held at the recent State Fair in Detroit, and attracted much attention. The visitors at the fair, representing both the large cities and rural districts, were much interested in the library—the city people because many of them did not know that through the medium of the State Library the men, women and children of the rural districts and small towns enjoyed the same library privileges that do the people of the large cities through their fine city libraries.

One feature of the exhibit at the State Fair that attracted special attention was a miniature farm house, snow covered and isolated. Two tiny dolls, representing little children, were waiting for the post man who approaches with a package from the State Library. Surrounding this feature were groups of books, traveling libraries, maps pictures, lists of statistics, etc.

The New York physician, who left a legacy of $25,000 to a little East Side girl whose smile had kept its place in his heart, belongs to a class of benefactors seldom seen these days. We have met them in fiction—these busy elderly gentlemen, usually rough in manner, who write wills bequeathing fortunes to honest and worthy young men who snatch them from in front of street cars or help them across difficult thoroughfares. Occasionally the benefactors are elderly ladies who leave their fortunes to hardy adventurers who rescue pet parrots and poodle dogs from precarious positions. This fiction is pleasant to read and there may be some gallants who perform their acts of gallantry with one eye on the elderly gentleman's or elderly lady's pocketbook. But there are thousands of others who perform trifling acts of kindness toward strangers with no thought of reward save the satisfaction it gives the doer.—Dearborn Independent

Farmers Will Judge Cattle At National

Fifteen states and Canadian provinces are sending teams to the third annual farmers' judging contest at Detroit, October 6 to 13, in connection with the National Dairy Exposition, according to George Girrbach and J. G. Wells, Dairy Extension Specialists, M. S. C. in charge of the contest.

Professionals are barred from this event at the Exposition. Any man or woman who has never acted as a judge at a fair or show, or served as college instructor, agricultural agent, teacher, or represented a college at an inter-state or national contest, is eligible. In other words, entrants must be strictly amateur. Awards are made for each breed to both teams and individuals.

Over a hundred farmers from thirteen states took part in last year's contest. This educational event is of great value in improving the selection and development of the proper types of dairy cattle

A three-act play entitled "Joe Guess" will be presented daily at the National Dairy Exposition in October. "Joe Guess" is a real show, with four live characters. Joe Guess the old dairyman who does everything by guess, is the comedian and chief hero of the play. The other characters are Bill Know, Mr. Shaw and Bob Profit. The play puts across a forceful message on better dairying in a humorous and entertaining manner

NAME BEST ROUTES TO REACH DETROIT

GOOD ROADS AVAILABLE FOR MOTORISTS FROM ANY PART OF STATE

Best road routings to reach the State Fair at Detroit from any section of Michigan have been prepared by the state highway department.

By following these road directions to the point where the routes join the highway system in the Detroit area, motorists from any part of the state will have an easy, comfortable ride to the big exposition, from September 5 to 11.

Special State Fair markers have been installed on the highways to make it still easier for visitors to reach the fair grounds. Arrows have been painted on the pavement in the Detroit district, marking the turns to the fair grounds. Metal signs are also being posted at all turns where a doubt might arise as to the proper route.

Thousands of visitors from all over the state are expected to drive to Detroit for the Fair this year. Ease with which the motorist can avoid the heavy city traffic in getting to the fair grounds, and the generally good condition of state roads combine to make the trip an attractive one.

Definite routes are recommended by the Highway Department as follows:

Northwestern Michigan

From Elmira north follow M-13 to Elmira; M-32 Elmira to Gaylord; M-14 Gaylord to Lansing; M-16 to Detroit.

From Beulah, Manistee, Ludington, Pentwater and Shelby, follow M-11 to Grand Haven; M-16 Grand Haven to Detroit.

From Traverse City, Cadillac, Reed City, Big Rapids, Howard City, Baldwin and Newaygo connect with M-16 at Grand Rapids; follow M-16 to Detroit.

Northeastern Michigan

Connect with M-10 at Onaway, Rogers, Alpena, Tawas City, Standish and Bay City and follow through Saginaw, Flint and Pontiac to Detroit, or connect with M-14 at Cheboygan, Gaylord, Grayling, Roscommon and follow to Prudenville; follow M-18 from Prudenville through Gladwin to connect with M-24 west at Midand; follow M-24 through Midland to Saginaw, connect with M-10 at Saginaw and follow to Detroit.

Central Michigan

Connect with M-14 at Clare, Mt. Pleasant, Alma, Ithaca, St. Johns or Mason. Follow M-14 to Lansing; from Lansing follow M-16 to Detroit.

Southern Michigan

Connect with M-23 at White Pigeon, Sturgis, Coldwater, Jonesville, Clinton or Saline and follow to M-10 (Telegraph Road); follow M-10 north to Plymouth Road; follow Plymouth Road east to Emerson Road; follow Emerson Road north to Six Mile Road; follow Six Mile Road east to Woodward avenue, turn left (north) on Woodward Avenue to Fair Grounds.

Southwestern Michigan

Connect with M-17 at Watervliet, Paw Paw, Kalamazoo, Marshall or Albion, and follow to Ann Arbor, at Ann Arbor follow either of the routes to the Fair Grounds as shown on above map.

Western Michigan

Connect with M-16 at Grand Haven or Grand Rapids and follow to Detroit.

Thumb District

Connect with M-19 at Bad Axe, Sandusky or Port Huron. Follow M-19 to Detroit.

Upper Peninsula

Connect with M-12 and follow to St. Ignace; Ferry from St. Ignace to Mackinaw City; follow M-10 to Cheboygan; M-14 to Prudenville; M-18 to M-24 west of Midland; M-24 through Midland to Saginaw; M-10 to Detroit.

The Early Days Of Ryolite Nevada

Most of us remember about Ryolite, Nevada, which came into the limelight several years ago as a thriving mining town. It had a typical railroad station, and several other public buildings which stand out on a desolate plain as a reminder of what once was the liveliest mining village in Nevada. On August 9th, 1924, a couple of prospectors uncovered a rich find of gold quartz rock and the stampede began for the promise land.

From all parts of the country they came on foot, on burros, by stage, also by automobile. Those who were fortunate enough to own autos blazed trails across the hot sands over which wagons had never passed. All kinds of temporary lodgings were erected which proved most convenient—most of them being canvas, and in two years time the railroad came to a point nearby. With the advent of railroads the city of Ryolite took on more substantial aspect Two large three-story buildings of re-inforced concrete were built and a fine 8 room school building with tile roof

They had a good water system, supplied from springs, electric lights, and two banks, telephone exchange, opera house, and 57 saloons which seems like a large supply for so small a city. With so many saloons you can well imagine the excitement and activity of the day. But the bullfrog mining district did not prove true to expectations. None of the mines in the district proved productive. The rich lead which had been discovered, faded out and a general exodus resulted, which terminated in complete desertion of the one time populous city. Three years ago the last inhabitant of this dreary waste died aged 92 years. His name was J. D. Lorraine.

An All Steel Barn

Steel has made possible comprehensive changes in our industrial structure, notes W. W. Maloney, writing in the Iron Trade Review (Cleveland). This is especially true in the case of agriculture, and Mr, Maloney thinks that some recent events point toward a coming use of steel for farm buildings as well as implements. He asks:

"Is the farmer's wooden barn, one of the last strongholds of old farm traditions and methods, now to be replaced by all-steel structures? Three years ago such a possibility would have been scouted. But that was before John D. Cole a farmer near Mulliken, Michigan, took his idea to the Continental Bridge Company, which built on Mr. Cole's farm the first all-steel barn,

"Every lasting development has been born of necessity, and when this farmer needed a new barn, one which would have a long life and would give him a maximum of hay storage capacity without interior obstruction, he thought of metal. Taking his rough ideas to nearby contractors, he found them unable or unwilling to undertake the job he asked. Still convinced that his notion was sound, however Mr, Cole approached the Continental Bridge Company, which finally designed and contracted for the structure and commenced actual erection Thanksgiving day, 1922.

"What Mr. Cole has to-day on his property, and the building is in good condition after three years of service, is a steel barn without a piece of wood in its construction. Purlin posts, braces, rafters and beams, all are steel. It is fire proof and fire is the most dreaded of farm hazards. It is lightning proof and practically 90 percent of barn fires originate from without. It is practically weather proof, and the life of the barn, if the steelwork and corrugated sheating is kept properly painted, is unlimited. Even the windows are fire-proof, the sash being made of steel and glazed with ¼-inch ribbed wire glass.

"The structural steel was delived ready for bolting on the premises. Only four men were needed for the erection work, without a foreman, and no framing was necessary on the ground. The steel frame is of the three hinge arch type with trusses supported at 3 joints only, center. and bottom on each side, There are no interior posts or inside obstructions such as usually are found in barns. Overall the structure measures 36 by 72 feet and the haymow rises thirty-four feet to the hay carrier. Thus easy excess is gained for handling hay through the side. Four 14 by 16-foot entrance doors, each weighing approximately 800 pounds are supported by sliding door hangers

"The steel frame is comparatively light, and is rigid. Built like a steel bridge, allowance has been made for wind loads in the design As will be seen from the photographs, the sloping roof construction makes it impossible for snow to accumulate and shorten the life of the covering. It also obviates the need of special provision in design to compensate snow loads.

"After the framework had been erected the barn was covered with twenty two gage corrugated copper alloy sheet steel, The sheets were riveted together with a ten inch longitudinal lap and two corrugations on the side to exclude moisture. Below the cement floor of the barn is a cement basement or stock stable, thirteen feet high.

"Cost, of course, is a paramount consideration for the farmer. For this particular barn the steel fabricated framework was contracted for and delivered at a cost of $980. Total expense was between $5,000 and $5,500, which for an experimental structure, and considering the cost of other barns, is considered reasonable. Manufacturers' representatives of other materials than steel inspected the barn to see if they could not have saved the owner money. Careful figuring resulted in the conclusion that Mr. Cole would have had to pay fully as much for his barn had he used other materials. The owner now has a barn of practically unlimited life, of moderate construction cost, and one whose upkeep is negligible."

Insect Pests Make Appearance in State

Two insect pests, both capable, and creating more or less damage, have put in an appearance in Michigan in recent days, according to an authority at the Agricultural College. A caterpillar known as the red-humped caterpillar, is reported in the northern part of the state, and it is seriously trimming up the oak leaves in various sections. It is best controlled by a spray or dust of an arsenical, where ver this is practical.

"The other insect" according to Prof. Pettit, is one which comes up from the South at this season of the year. It is a beautiful moth about one inch long, of clay color decorated with opalescent surface, The moth collects around electric lights freely.

This is the only known moth having its mouth parts capable of tearing fruit, such as grapes, peaches apples, pears, tomatos, and sucking the juice, tearing a hole through the skin in order to do so. This starts the fruit rotting.

"It is recommended that the fruit be covered as soon as it is picked, using cloth, old sacking, or anything also tucked in closely around the fruit to protect it from the moths. The moths work up from the South, not coming every year, but they seem to be getting altogether too common now."

The Arkansaw Traveler

Most of our readers will remember the old-time song "Arkansaw Traveler" written so many years ago and sung throughout the country. The tune came from an ancient melody written in the early days of Arkansaw when the widening prairies were one vast stretch of buffalo grass and the hills were occupied by here and there a solitary family of "squatters." The story of the "Arkansaw Traveler" came from an incident when a traveler went thru the rural districts of the state, and the dialog mentioned took place.

The traveler asked for lodging. The squatter replied "my house leaks." Thar's only one dry spot in it an' me an' Sal sleeps on it."

"Why don't you finish covering your house and stop the leaks?" the traveler asks.

"It's been raining all day"

"Why don't you do it in dry weather?"

"It didn't leak then"

The version of the story which seems correct is found in the old volume entitled "Early Days in Arkansas" in which the writer, William Pope, says "The Origin of the Arkansaw Traveler is about as follows: Colonel Sandford (Sandy) C. Faulkner, a wealthy planter of Chicot county, Arkansas, became lost among the wild, rugged hills of the Bayou Mason country, and in his wanderings happened upon the dilapidated cabin of a squatter of the lowest type when the now famous colloquy between the traveler and the squatter took place regarding the leaky condition of the cabin which could not be repaired when the weather was bad and did not need repairing when the weather was good. So between the conditions of good and bad weather the miserable hovel continued open to sun and rain alike."

The squatter was non-committal all inquiries of the lost traveler answering his questions after this mander;

"Sir, how far is it to the next house?" asks the stranger.

"Stranger, I don't know. I've never been thar."

"Well, do you know who lives here?"

"I do."

"As I am so bold, what might your name be?"

"It might be Dick and it might be Tom but it lacks a long sight of it."

Only Prize Winners Come To Dairy Show

Kings and queens of dairy land, blue ribbon winners at state and sectional fairs throughout the United States and Canada, will compete at the "court of last resort" for the premier dairy honors of the world when the National Dairy Exposition opens at the Michigan State Fair grounds on October 6.

When entries closed on September 15, fifteen hundred of the world's leading dairy cattle, from twenty states, were registered. They comprise the greatest dairy "herd" ever assembled, according to J. E. Burnett, superintendent of cattle exhibits.

Grade cattle classes are receiving considerable emphasis this year. Nearly $6,500 in premiums is given which compares very favorably with the pure bred cattle awards. All cows must be sired by pure bred bulls, and the sire's name and number given with the entry. Individual and group awards are made.

The National Dairy Association encourages the development of grade herds because in a great many cases the Association realizes that the grade cow opens up the avenue to profitable dairy production.

Michigan State Library

A necessary and valuable feature of the State Library's work is advertising—letting the people of the state know what the Library has for them. That the library will send books of every kind—fiction, history, sociology, religion, literature—to any resident of Michigan, is still unknown to some of the men, women and children of our state.

With this in mind the State Library spends much time and thought on exhibits for the various fairs, state and county. This work has been extended greatly during the last three years and it is planned to further develop it in the future. During the past three years the library has held exhibits at the county fairs in Ionia, Oceana, Eaton, Wexford, Washtenaw, Saginaw, Ogemaw, and Kalamazoo, as well as at the Western Michigan State Fair in Grand Rapids and at the State Fair in Detroit.

These displays are in charge of the extension division of the library and workers from that department are present to talk to the visitors and explain the ways and means of obtaining books from the library. The exhibits consist of traveling libraries such as can be secured from the State Library for rural schools, clubs and other organizations; pictures, both large and small, framed and unframed, that can be obtained for country schools; groups of books of all classes can be secured either separately or in collections.

Michigan Boys Will Judge at Dairy Show

Michigan's champion dairy judges in boys and girls' club work will compete against the best club judges in the country during the national dairy show to be held at the State Fair Grounds in Detroit October 6 to 13.

Winners in the club judging from 20 states will strive to win the title of national champions, according to announcement made here this week by A. G. Kettunen, Michigan club leader, who will be in charge of the judging events in the National show. The youngsters will be housed in the Club Building on the fair grounds during the exposition. Michigan's teams, selected on the basis of their winnings in state contests held during the past summer, will be made up as follows: Dairy Judging—High Austin, Saline; Gilbert Christensen, Iron River; George Yoder, Manistique: George Hunt, Eaton Rapids (alternate) Dairy demonstration, Perry Holden and Norville Farrell both of Milford.

The State Fair Association will pay the expenses of the Michigan teams. while the Dairy Association will take care of transportation expenses for teams from other states. The youthful judges will be required to place rings of four dairy breeds. Other judging events scheduled for the Dairy Show include college student judging teams from 30 different states, vocational high school judges, and a farmers judging contest.

Know Your Cook Book, Girls, Advice of Diva

Margery Maxwell.

Margery Maxwell, prima donna with the Chicago Civic and Ravinia opera companies, and who enjoys the distinction of being among the first American girls to be recognized in grand opera circles, takes particular pride in her culinary skill. Cooking, in her estimation, is a fine art which is rapidly being lost.

"Doubtless one of the big reasons for this condition is that modern young men don't expect the girls they marry to know much about cooking," said Miss Maxwell.

"In the future, before man pops the question, he's going to find out whether the girl knows what calories are and whether she's wise to the elements of a balanced diet.

"A few questions before the minister asks, 'Do you take this woman?' would save a thousand recriminations later."

There are certain dishes to which Miss Maxwell is partial. As she explains them, they are readily prepared. Miss Maxwell uses for Maryland Chicken.

Two 2¼ lb. chickens (broilers)
Salt
Pepper
1 cup evaporated milk diluted with
1 cup water
2 eggs
Fine bread crumbs
Fat
1-3 cup butter
1 tsp. salt
Dash pepper
2 tbsp. flour

Dress, clean and cut up chickens. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in crumbs, egg, and crumbs. Place in a well-oiled dripping pan, and bake twenty minutes in a 450-degree F. oven, then reduce the temperataure to 350 degrees F. and cook until tender. about twenty minutes longer. Baste every ten minutes during cooking with ½ cup melted butter. Remove to platter and pour around a cream sauce made of fat in dripping pan, the flour, diluted milk, salt and pepper.

Asparagus en Fri.

1 bunch fresh asparagus
6 rounds toast
6 poached eggs
½ cup evaporated milk diluted with
½ cup water
2 tbsp. butter
2 tbsp. flour
1 tsp. salt
Pepper
½ cup grated cheese

Prepare a white sauce of the butter flour, salt, pepper and diluted milk. Cook the asparagus in boiling salted water. Drain and add to white sauce. Place a poached egg in center of toast. Pour asparagus around the egg and sprinkle grated cheese over top of all. Serve at once. Serves six.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage given by Hiram Livermore, widower, of the township of Wheatland, Hillsdale county, Michigan, to Corwin Cox, of the said township, which mortgage was dated January 50, 1908, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Hillsdale County, Michigan, January 16, 1908, in liber 133 of mortgages, on page 579:

And whereas, no proceeding either at law or in equity have been brought to foreclose said mortgage and whereas, there is due and unpaid on said mortgage at this date, in principal and interest, the sum of Nine Hundred Thirty three and 90—100 ($933.90) Dollars.

Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, Notice Is Hereby Given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of the premises therein described at public auction at the west front door of the court house in the city of Hillsdale, in said county, on Friday, the 3rd day of December, 1926, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that date, to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage and costs, including an attorney fee of $25 as provided for by statute.

The premises are described in said mortgage as follows: The north half of the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 16, excepting about one and one half acres out of the northwest corner now owned by J. M. Livermore, and this mortgage conveys about 18 acres of land in the above description, also five acres of land on the east end of the above described land, and being the same width north and south as above land, all situate in the township of Wheatland, County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan.

Dated September 1, 1926. Corwin Cox, Mortgagee.
Paul W. Chase, Attorney for Mortgagee.
Business Address, Hillsdale, Michigan. 15t13

One of the most persistent fallacies is government price-fixing on competitive commodities. There is already government price-fixing in commodities and services where competition plays no part in price determination. These are railway transportation, electricity, gas, telephone and telegraph, and so on. Here government price-fixing is solely to protect the consumer. There are two fatal objections to government price-fixing for agricultural products, which represent the most competitive business in the world. These are, first, that it will not work; second, that it is always done for the consumer as against the producer.

Government price-fixing for agricultural products would work if at the same time the government regulated wages, profits, middlemen's margins, the production of all commodities and the rationing of all consumers. In short, if the population were enlisted in one vast army, directed and rationed, price-fixing would work, but otherwise not. If the price is fixed on the wheat the farmer sells, then he cannot keep on producing wheat if wages or the cost of harvesting machinery rise, or if the cost of other material he buys rises. So the next step would be the fixation of other prices, and yet other prices.

The United States government fixed the price of wheat but once in our history, and then it was to benefit consumers, not producers. The government might, in an emergency, fix some agricultural prices for the purpose of elevating such prices. Such action would inevitably and speedily lead to outcry from city consumers and a consequent reversal of policy. Indeed, the consumers, not the producers, are most likely to demand and secure food price regulation by government authorities. The farmer, therefore, who favors any form of governmental price-fixing is working against his own interests. He is putting his head into a noose.—James E. Boyle, Professor of Rural Economics, Cornell University, in the Banker-Farmer.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

On Fifteen Per Cent Bonds

Mrs. Norris beamed as she greeted Aunt Emmy and exclaimed, "Now I know all my financial worries are over! I wanted to tell you right away—"

"What have you bought this time?" Aunt Emmy demanded suspiciously.

"Well, I haven't paid the money over yet, but I have found the loveliest investment where my money will be perfectly safe and will earn a nice income for me right away," Mrs. Norris said. "I'm going to buy bonds, good safe bonds, that will pay me fifteen per cent interest—"

"Wait a minute, you'll have to go some, Maud Norris, to tell me about 'good safe bonds' that pay fifteen per cent!" Aunt Emmy broke in.

"They are safe,—the man said so and this booklet says so too!"

"Do you know what a bond is?" asked Aunt Emmy.

"No, but it's awfully safe. I'm sure of that," Mrs. Norris said. "Everybody knows that bonds are safe—"

"My dear, some bonds are safe and some are not. When you buy a bond you simply lend your money to the company putting out the bonds. Bond issues are secured generally by the company mortgaging or pledging some of its property. In other words, it offers a certain asset as security that it will return your money to you on the date the bond matures. It agrees to pay you a certain sum each year for the use of your money, usually something between five and eight per cent. No company can afford to pay too much for its money—and as to fifteen per cent bonds—why it would be very unusual for a company to be able to earn enough to enable it to pay fifteen per cent for the privilege of using other people's money,—moreover, if it is good enough to borrow money at all it can borrow it more cheaply than that!"

"Oh dear!" wailed Mrs. Norris, "then a bond isn't a good safe investment—"

"Don't jump at conclusions so fast!" said Aunt Emmy. "I did not say that. A bond is as safe as a church if the company that issues it is financially sound, has a high credit rating and is making money. Before you buy bonds assure yourself that the company behind them is above reproach."

"But the man who told me about these fifteen per cent bonds was so earnest—I felt sure I could believe him."

"Don't turn over any money to him until you have some advice on the bonds from your bank," admonished Aunt Emmy. "Then, if you find out that the bonds are questionable you will escape another bad investment."

Mason County, Michigan, bankers are pushing hard to replace scrub stock with pure-bred cattle. The plan as outlined by the county agent is to purchase young pure-bred sires and place them wherever a farmer is found who is willing to co-operate in the proposition. The bankers will advance the purchase price and take a note for one year without interest. The idea is to make it as easy as possible for the farmers to procure thoroughbreds.

HOW I IMPROVED MY HEALTH

Did It in Less Than One Month

As Mrs. Weaver herself says, "I was never very strong." This is a mild statement describing her condition, for, according to her letters, she was subjected to no small amount of ill health. Fortunately, her sister was familiar with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged Mrs. Weaver to try it. "After three or four weeks," writes Mrs. Weaver, "I felt a great difference in myself. I would go to bed and sleep sound, and although I could not do very much work, I seemed stronger. I kept on taking it and now I am well and strong, do my work and take care of three children. I sure do tell my friends about your wonderful medicine, and I will answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. LAWRENCE WEAVER, East Smithfield St., Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

If you knew that thousands of women suffering from troubles similar to those you are enduring had improved their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, wouldn't you think it was worth a trial?

In some families, the fourth generation is learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Suffered for Over 10 Years

Then Mrs. Precour Took Tanlac and Got Relief

The amazing recovery of Mrs. Thomas Precour, 505 Helen Avenue, Detroit, has excited a great deal of comment. She says: "For many years rheumatism bothered me so I could hardly walk, much less do my work. My arms were so drawn that I could not comb my hair. My nerves got on edge so I couldn't sleep more than one or two nights a week. My appetite failed me and food that once agreed with me now made my condition worse.

"Then a neighbor told me of Tanlac. With the first bottle I began to feel better. Now my stomach never bothers me. Rheumatism is greatly relieved. I can eat everything without trouble. Tanlac gets all the credit."

This tonic, made from roots, barks and herbs, helps build up weak bodies, put flesh on scrawny bones, free the system of poison and drive out causes of pain. Get your first bottle from your druggist. 40 million bottles sold.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Franco-Italian Relations Strained by Attempt to Kill Mussolini.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THOUGH friendly relations between Italy and France are strained as a result of the latest attempt to assassinate Premier Mussolini, it is not likely there will be an actual diplomatic rupture. The Italian anarchist who threw a bomb at the dictator's automobile insists that he had no accomplices, but the Italian authorities are convinced that his crime was plotted in France and they accuse that country of deliberately sheltering conspirators against the Fascist regime. Immediately after the bomb throwing Mussolini, without naming France, uttered a warning to other nations that Italy proposed to "put a stop to certain culpable, tiresome conditions." The Italian press was more outspoken and berated France soundly, to which the French replied, officially and unofficially, with disclaimers of responsibility and advice to Italy to watch its own borders and keep out the plotters who might form their plans in other countries. There were demonstrations against the French consulates in several Italian cities, and the French charge d'affaires in Rome filed three protests. Premier Poincare called in the Italian ambassador to Paris and made it clear that France would regard further officially inspired criticism of its hospitality for foreign political refugees as an act of extreme unfriendliness. Notwithstanding this, the directory of the Fascist party issued orders which said in part:

"The land of France, for whose safety some of our 500,000 war dead fell, has been for years the most hospitable land for all those hatching in their perfidious hearts hatred against Italy."

It is there, the orders continue, that "spirits are excited, bombs are built, and those people are instructed who later will enter Italy to attempt the life of the head of the Italian regime. All this cannot longer be tolerated."

The orders declare that, if France desires to continue friendship with Italy, as the latter desires, it must change its line of conduct.

The Italian government published a list of political refugees, most of whom are living in France, and announced action that will deprive them of their citizenship.

COLORADO Republicans seem to have wrested the control of the party's affairs in that state from the hands of the Ku Klux klan and similar secret organizations. United States Senator Rice W. Means, directing head of the klan in Colorado, was defeated for renomination by Charles W. Waterman, counsel of the President's oil conservation board, who was supported by the anti-klan element. In addition, all the candidates for office who were sponsored by Senator L. C. Phipps were beaten by those supported by Clarence C. Hamlin and ex-Governor Shoup, leaders of the anti-klan faction in the party. The Democrats nominated former Gov. W. E. Sweet for senator.

In Maryland Senator Weller, Republican, defeated Congressman John Philip Hill for the senatorial nomination to oppose M. E. Tydings, Democrat. Governor Ritchie was renominated. Senators E. D. Smith of South Carolina and Wesley Jones of Washington won renomination.

Michigan Republicans had an exciting gubernatorial fight and Gov. Alex Groesbeck was badly beaten by Fred W. Green of Ionia, mainly because Groesbeck has been exceedingly liberal in the granting of prison paroles and pardons. The Groesbeck-Green contest was so bitter that the Democrats think it will result in a split in the Republican party and the election of William J. Comstock, their unopposed gubernatorial candidate.

Senator Butler of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican national committee, and Gov. Alvin T. Fuller were renominated without opposition, and the Democrats of the state put up former Senator David I. Walsh and William Gaston to oppose them. The Democrats of Louisiana renominated Senator Edwin S. Broussard, though former Gov. Jared Y. Sanders gave him a close race. Senator Dale of Vermont was unopposed for renomination.

Republican national leaders have brought out the old saying, "As Maine goes, so goes the nation," following the election last week in that state. It was won by the Republicans with ease and their majority of about 20,000 was considered quite satisfactory for an off-year. Gov. Ralph O. Brewster and all four congressmen were returned to office. The Democratic congressional committee admittedly could find little encouragement in the Maine results.

CANADA'S elections last week were watched by the United States with unusual interest, and the victory of the Liberals, it was predicted, would result in reciprocity with this country. Leaders there said the defeat of the Meighen Conservative government meant the Canadian people refused to be hived behind high tariff barriers. W. L. MacKenzie King, leader of the Liberals, had urged the wisdom of freer trade facilities, and some of his Progressive allies in western Canada are out-and-out free traders. The Liberals won 119 parliamentary seats, and of their natural allies the Progressives won 8, the United Farmers of Alberta 11, the Laborites 3 and the Independents 2. It was certain Mr. King could muster a majority of about 50 votes for his policies. It was expected Premier Meighen and his cabinet would resign promptly and that Mr. King would be called to form a new government.

SEVERAL thousand delegates of the Ku Klux klan met in Washington for the annual convention, paraded down Pennsylvania avenue in robes, but without masks, declared themselves against the World court and also against Gov. Al Smith as a Presidential candidate, and re-elected Hiram W. Evans as imperial wizard. Evans also said the klan would wage war against alienism, bolshevism, Catholicism, modification of the Eighteenth amendment and European intervention in Mexican internal affairs. Resolutions were adopted demanding strict adherence to a "hands-off" policy toward Mexico's church squabble and expressing the order's sympathy with the Calles government in its "efforts to free the people from stultifying foreign influences and to popularize the education of the masses."

Every delegate to the convention took a solemn oath to attend some Protestant church every Sunday in the year, unless prevented by illness or some other emergency; and a similar oath is to be administered by the delegates to every member of the klan.

TORRENTIAL rains, the heaviest recorded for September, swelled the rivers and streams of the Middle West into roaring floods and immense damage to crops and real property resulted. Western Illinois was hardest hit by the rains, which descended on sections of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Michigan. The losses ranged from $5,000,000 in Illinois to half a million in Iowa. About a score of persons lost their lives. Most of the damage falls on the corn crop.

ELECTION of non-permanent members of the League of Nations council by the assembly resulted in the choice of Poland, Chile, and Rumania for three-year tenure; Columbia, Holland and China for two years, and Belgium, Czechoslovakia and San Salvador for one year. By a special vote, Poland was declared re-eligible for election at the expiration of her three-year term, thereby becoming a semi-permanent council member. There are 18 candidates for the nine seats, including the Irish Free State and Uruguay whose representatives were bitterly disappointed by the result of the balloting.

August Zaleski, foreign minister of Poland, on behalf of the delegation from Poland, Sweden and Finland, presented a petition asking that the league enter the battle against alcoholism. He declared the evil of alcoholism was made worse by the lack of co-ordinated international action.

After the nations signatory to the Locarno treaties had deposited with the league secretariat signed copies of the pacts, Doctor Stresemann of Germany demanded that the Rhineland be evacuated by the allies. In an interview he said: "If Locarno has any meaning at all, it should mean the existing frontiers of western Europe are guaranteed against forceful revision, and consequently no other guarantees, such as occupied zones, are longer necessary."

Paul Boncour, French delegate, urged that a general conference on disarmament should be convoked at the earliest possible date. The league's disarmament commission adopted a modified resolution emphasizing the necessity of concluding as soon as possible a convention of the private manufacturer of arms.

MEXICO has more trouble on its hands. The Yaqui Indians of the state of Sonora, who never have been really conquered, are in revolt and the government has sent large bodies of troops to the scene. One detachment of artillery is reported to have been destroyed by the Indians. The Yaquis stopped a train on which General Obregon was traveling and seized the former president, but he was soon released, presumably after paying ransom. It is believed in Mexico City that the Indians have been stirred up by revolutionary agents sent into the country by Adolfo de la Huerta, head of the revolt against the Obregon government in December, 1923.

Jacob Rosenthal, a wealthy New Yorker, was kidnaped by bandits while motoring from Cuernavaca to Mexico City and held for ransom. Federal troops were put on the trail of the bandits, who sent warning that if they were pursued they would kill their captive. This being ignored they murdered Rosenthal.

HENRY STEVENS, firearms expert, joined his brother Willie and Cousin Henry de la B. Carpender in the county jail at Somerville, N. J., on charges of murdering Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, whose bodies were found under a crab-apple tree four years ago. The slain rector's three relatives by marriage and his widow, Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, were indicted for the murder by the grand jury. The indictment of Henry Stevens was something of a surprise, although he recently figured prominently in the revived investigation and it was officially announced that his alibi, considered ironclad four years ago, had been broken down.

PRESIDENT AND MRS. COOLIDGE and their summer household departed on Saturday from White Pine camp in the Adirondacks, their vacation having come to an end. The President has profited greatly physically by the outdoor life in the mountains and returned to Washington full of energy and brown as a berry. He found the White House all cleaned and repaired, and also found his secretary, Mr. Sanders, in good health again after a sea voyage.

CAPT. RENE FONCK and his crew selected for the transatlantic nonstop flight all went to the flying field at Westbury, N. Y., early Thursday morning prepared to jump off for Paris in the huge Sikorsky plane, which had been tested and approved by Lieutenant Curtin, navigator and alternate pilot. But when nearly everything was ready for the start a bad leak in the gasoline tank was discovered. So the plane was put back in the hangar for repairs and the start was postponed. Perhaps before this is read the flight will have been made or have failed. On the other hand, weather conditions may have caused indefinite delay.

SENATOR CARAWAY of Arkansas has broken out in a new spot. He says the graves of America's war dead in France have been desecrated with abusive and vulgar writings on the crosses, and urges that the bodies of all soldiers buried there be brought home. The War department says nothing of this character has been reported to it, and General Pershing, chairman of the American battle monuments commission, declared that during his recent stay in Europe he had heard nothing of such desecration.

League of Journalists Urged as Aid to Peace

Geneva.—A league of journalists could do more good than the League of Nations, the Press Congress of the World was assured by its president, Dr. Walter Williams, dean of the University of Missouri school of journalism.

"Here in the capital of the League of Nations," said Doctor Williams, "even in this noble city, I make bold to say that a league of journalists, keeping open and free the channels of world communications, may do more good than any other human agency, league or association of nations."

To facilitate the gathering and transmission of accurate news, he urged that the league or interested governments call a world conference to consider means of making truth more readily available and reducing transmission rates.

"No country is wholly free from offensive and unnecessary interference with press liberty," he said. "It is not enough to be free to write the truth. Freedom to know the truth is essential to journalism. Lack of adequate and correct information makes impossible truthful interpretation and comment. It is useless to have liberty to publish and discuss facts unless there is unfettered opportunity to obtain these facts."

He declared that publishers should be free from censorship and control but should be held responsible for the wise exercise of their freedom.

Modern Girl Knows All About Gasoline

The night was black, the road unfrequented so early in the morning. Suddenly the motor gave some convulsive sobs and the car stopped. Bill, much perturbed, made an earnest effort to start the engine but failed. After getting out and looking over the engine, he turned to Betty and said:

"This is sad. The gasoline tank seems to be full of water and we can't move a foot."

Betty was far less perturbed. She replied:

"Come on inside and stop looking worried. This has happened to me before. All we have to do is to sit in the car for about an hour and the water turns right back into gasoline."—Los Angeles Times.

Uniform Marking System Is Urged

Plan Would Reduce Errors in Regard to Ownership to Minimum.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Marketing of live stock in co-operative shipments is a very important feature in conducting the business of the shipping association, especially if the stock is to be sold according to ownership or if the commission firm is expected to prorate the returns to each owner. It would be advisable to establish a uniform system of marking live stock for use by all associations in the country, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Such a plan would reduce errors in regard to the ownership to a minimum. A system of marking which is suitable to the needs of all associations has been suggested, and is, briefly, as follows:

Mark Cattle and Calves.

Cattle and calves would be marked by using shears to clip four-inch Roman numerals on one hip, preferably the right hip. Only the first ten numerals would be used. A single bar, like a minus sign, placed before each numeral would raise the number by ten. Two parallel bars before each numeral would raise it by 20. Thus V, —V, =V, would mean 5, 15, and 25, respectively.

Hogs are marked by clipping the numerals on the top of the shoulder, back, or rump, using only such combinations as can be made with four marks or less. Or they may be marked on the side of the shoulder, body, or ham, in which case not to exceed three marks would be used. Shears with curved blades about eight inches long, commonly called "roaching shears" are most generally used for marking.

Fluid for Sheep.

Sheep are marked by using branding fluid applied with a half-inch stiff round-bristle brush. The marks should be placed on the head, top of shoulders, back, or rump. In no case should paint be used for marking any kind of live stock. It is detrimental to the wool of sheep and unsatisfactory on hogs because it smears.

Cut Alfalfa Soon After It Lodges, Says Expert

Just what is the best time to cut alfalfa for hay, all things considered, is a problem which farmers and agricultural experiment station workers have not definitely solved, according to A. C. Arny, field crops specialist of the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment station in a talk before a group of scientists at the Minnesota station.

About one thing, however, Mr. Arny was emphatic, and that was that alfalfa should be cut very soon after it lodges, as it does generally in Minnesota. The reason for this is that when the crop lodges the leaves underneath turn yellow and fall off and the hay produced is decidedly inferior. In 1924 alfalfa cut before lodging retained 50 per cent of its leaves, while alfalfa cut after lodging retained only 24 per cent.

Mr. Arny, therefore, advises the immediate cutting of alfalfa that has lodged, even if it is only in the bud stage.

Black Raspberry Culture

The old wood of black rasperries should be pruned out as soon as it has fruited, and the laterals on this year's wood should be cut back to a foot or 18 inches next spring before growth starts. Clean cultivation is the rule, usually done with a one-horse cultivator, although the small garden tractors are beginning to take the place of the horse. On very light soil, a shallow cultivation after each heavy rain will be found beneficial, and in any case the surface soil should be kept loose and open.

Blindness in Hens

Hens may become blind due to bits of foreign material lodging around the eyeball and starting irritation, or it may be due to occular roup. Most forms of colds and roup cause more or less trouble in the eyes of the bird. The blindness and weakness may be the symptoms of some disease. Sometimes a hen gradually becomes blind, due to causes which it seems almost impossible to determine. In such cases the only remedy is to kill the bird.

Exhibiting Cattle

Exhibiting good cattle at fairs is the best local advertising possible, but leading out thin, undersized cattle is expensive advertising. Dairy cattle need only be in moderate flesh to show to advantage. Cattle to be shown should receive some grain, however, from now until fair time and large amounts of hay in order to develop middle. It will improve the quality of hide and hair to blanket the animals with burlap sacks for six weeks previous to showing.

Farm Hints

Don't turn cattle or sheep in clover when the dew is still on. They are likely to bloat.

* * *

Cattle should be blanketed for a period of six weeks prior to showing them at the county fair.

* * *

It usually pays to spray potatoes even though there may not be any conspicuous blight on them.

* * *

Young chickens should have plenty of range and roosting space if they are to make good gains. Food will not compensate for scanty quarters, especially if they are to be breeding stock.

* * *

A root storage cellar is an essential part of the farm equipment. A bulletin put out by the New York state college of agriculture describes the construction and management of them. Ask for it by number—E 22.

Settles Auto Disputes

Judge David J. Hefferman of Miami's night municipal court in Florida has an array of tiny motor vehicle models which fulfill an important role in his proceedings. A dispute in traffic disturbances calls forth the models and the motorists re-enact the scene in question before the judge on one among several drawings, representing various streets scaled to the size of the miniature autos.

Too Much "Acid?"

Excess Uric Acid Gives Rise to Many Unpleasant Troubles.

AUTHORITIES agree that an excess of uric acid is primarily due to faulty kidney action. Retention of this toxic material often makes its presence felt by sore, painful joints, a tired, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backache and headache. That the kidneys are not functioning right is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Thousands assist their kidneys at such times by the use of Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. Doan's are recommended by many local people. Ask your neighbor!

Houseboat Colony In Detroit River Find Thrift, Health

When you ask the people who live in the houseboat colonies along the Detroit River why they prefer their floating homes to the kind the of us inhabit, you get a variety of answers.

"It's cheaper," replied Mrs. George Johnson, whose buoyant bungalow rides the ripples off Waterworks Park. "We used to pay $70 a month rent. We got this comfortable boat on payments for $450. By applying our old rent money on our purchase, we shall be home-owners in less than a year. Besides we'll have quite a margin left to doll this place up and to put in a lot of improvements."

"It's healthier," explained Mrs. F. Swansen, mistress of the beautifully furnished ship "Teal," moored to the foot of Marquette Drive. "I was all run down following an operation. I needed a sanitarium and this is it."

Apartment Garage Idea Given Birth In Crowded Streets

It is interesting to learn how Apartment Garages, Inc., Detroit, was formed. Bert W. Jackson, secretary-treasurer of this company is a resident of the Chicago boulevard house district. When he moved into the neighborhood he encountered considerable difficulty in finding space for housing his car. A thorough investigation of the neighborhood revealed apartment house after apartment house, built from street to alley, with absolutely no provision for storing tenants automobiles. After using Nature's garage—"the curb"—for a period of six weeks, during which time two sets of spare tires had been stolen, and fenders bumped, Mr. Jackson succeeded in securing space in a small garage that a friend of his was about to gie up.

He discussed this matter with several of his business associates and friends and a study of the various apartment house sections in Detroit showed that these conditions were the same in other districts and that approximately 130,000 automobiles were parking in the streets and alleys of Detroit through lack of storage facilities.

With the thought in mind of, in part relieving this congested condition, Apartment Garages, Inc., was formed. Arnold F. Zeleznik, of the law firm Aldrich & Zelezik, was made president; Paul O. Hinkler, of the Paul O. Winkler Construction Co., vice president; Bert W. Jackson, of the B. W. Jackson Co., investment bankers, secretary-treasurer; and in addition to the above the following were made directors: E. F. Schlee, president of Hayco Oil Corporations; Lewis P. Threlkeld, apartment hotel operator; A. C. Green, public accountant; and E. G. Brock, BS., B.C.S., Detroit public schools.

The first site was 153 feet on Longfellow, near Lawton, where a 300-car garage, featuring call and delivery service, is now being constructed and is expected to be completed about Oct. 15. The immediate demand for space in this locality was such that the directors figured a 300-car garage would be insufficient to care for the needs and purchased an additional 153 feet on the corner of Lawton and Longfellow so that at the moment, the company has acquired approximately 320 feet of frontage with a depth of 139 feet, and in the near future a 500-car garage will be erected on the corner site. Even the combined 800-car capacity will not begin to care for this neighborhood a as additional apartments are being erected and at the present time there are under construction, and contemplated, ten new apartments to house from 30 to 65 families.

The company contemplates a future expansion program and as often as localities and sites are secured, and conditions permit, additional units will be constructed. The garages should prove a boon to apartment house dwellers.

DETROIT BIGGER THAN 17 STATES

The population of Detroit, as determined in 1920 and as estimated or counted in any year since, is greater than that of 17 states. No 17 states, together, of course, but of each taken separately. To attain this position it has had to outgrow most of them.

In 1860 Detroit's population of 45,619 was greater than that of only one state, Oregon, although it also exceeded six territories in population. These were Colorado, Nebraska, Nevada, South Dakota, Utah, and Washington.

In 1870 Detroit's population of 79,577 was not greater than that of Oregon, but it did exceed the new state of Nevada. It was also greater than seven territories, namely, Arizona, Colorado, Iadoha, Montana, South Dakota, Washington, and Wyoming.

In the census of 1880 Detroit lost ground comparatively, for though its population had increased to 116,340, it only exceeded one state and five territories. The state was Nevada; the territories, Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Washington and Wyoming.

By 1890, most of these territories had been made into states. Detroit had nearly doubled in size, having a population of 205,876, and it then exceeded six states and two territories. The states were Delaware, Idaho, Montant. Nevada, North Dakota, and Wyoming; the territories, Arizona and New Mexico.

The 1900 record of Detroit with a population increased only to 285,704 was the same as for 1890—exceeding six states and two territories — but Utah took the place of North Dakota. That is, North Dakota outgrew Detroit, but Detroit had outgrown Utah.

In 1910 the list of states and territories smaller than Detroit was the same as for 1900, except for the addition of Vermont. Detroit with 465,766 population was greater than seven states and two territories—Delaware, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Vermont, Wyoming, and the territories of Arizona and New Mexico.

Since 1910 the big growth in Detroit's population has pushed it ahead of many states. The census for 1920 showed the city's numbers to be greater than the population of Arizona, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Maine, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont or Wyoming. The estimates for the years since 1920 do not disturb this list.

BLIND MAN ARDENT LOVER OF FISH

"A fish every day keeps the doctor away" may be the motto of "Blind Ike" Munsey, well-known Au Sable character.

When the tugs come in from their hauls 30 and 40 miles out in the lake, Ike is there to meet them. For years he went with the battered but seaworthy boats and did his share of hauling in the heavy nets. But on a lonely journey over the jack pine plains inland he tripped over a log and rose, blinded in both eyes by the underbrush into which he had been pitched. Anyway, at 64 years of age he is too old to rise at 3 o'clock in the morning for a day's wrestle with Huron's waters. Instead he stands where lake and river meet, hoping that the fishermen will remember that he, too, was once a fisherman.

Usually they do. The rough kindness of fisher folk keeps "Iike" in meals of fresh fish all summer long. In winter he toasts his toes in the county poorhouse.

Munsey was born in Detroit, but was taken to Au Sable in a fish boat when he was three weeks old.

He lived in the town when noisy lumberjacks clumped over its board walks in hobnailed shoes and the census report said that nearly 15,000 people lived there.

He stuck by it when forest fire reduced a flourishing community to a fringe of fishing shacks by the river's edge.

Now, with the bondholders preparing to take over the ruined town and make a summer resort of it, he remains—a picturesque and pitiful reminder of the Au Sable that was.

Only a great man can successfully dodge undeserved glory.

It may be well to remember that the oldest families are likely to have the most to be ashamed of.

Chicken fat can be used for all kinds of cooking in which the finest quality of butter would be ordinarily used.

In baking potatoes place them in the broiler instead of in the oven. They will cook much more quickly and the flavor will be much improved by the quick cooking. A saving in gas is also a result not to be scoffed at.

Around Lake Tour Is Being Boosted in Four States

"Around Lake Michigan!" is to be the slogan of the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association if the suggestion made by the Muskegon Chamber of Commerce is adopted at the annual meeting to be held at Holland, Oct. 5. Indications are that the "Around Lake Lichigan Tour" will replace the West Michigan Pike tour of former years.

The co-operation of tourists and resort interests in Lichigan, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, will be asked.

Present plans call for the tour to start in 1927, follow the Hisconsin shore line and through the upper peninsula of Michigan to the Straits of Mackinaw, thence down the West Michigan pike.

LITTLE ITEMS GO TO MAKE STYLES

Uppermost in the minds of all femininity at the present moment is that age old topic—Fashion. With the roll of the seasons it comes, never to be ignored, and for most of the world it involves considerable financing to achieve the happy consumation. For there must be frocks, coats, hats, with all the important accessories, if woman is to continue her charming self, and usually it must all be done on a limited income.

So, the problem is to get what is necessary at the price that is available, and then, to top off with a few vanities that help to keep the heart young as well as the face and figure. For, be it said again, it is the little items that count for so much in making the general ensemble just what it should be.

One thing that women will be thankful for, is the continued straight silhouette, although this does not mean, as heretofore, that there is ni fullness in the frock. There is fullness, sufficient for all comfort and for the effect of movement, yet so deftly is it disposed that there is no bulging at hip, hem or waistline. There is a blouse, of course, but this is only a suggestion, that breaks the long line a trifle, but does not add to the apparent size of the waistline.

Belts are to be noted. A statement, however, that must be taken for about half what it says, for belts are often only bands that fasten in front at a low waistline, held together with a fancy buckle or a clever loose bow. Many of these fastenings are to be noted in the fall models, which is a departure from the loose straight-around narrow belt that has been used to indicate a waistline much below normal.

While the general effect remains about the same, there are these foregoing distinctive changes in the mode that mark it as the 1926 issue. Dolman effects are also seen in many of the Parisian collections of coats, and the dolman sleeve is used by some designers on frocks.

Other coats have a blousing bodice at the back, but are sometimes straight in the front with a belt starting from the sides only trimming them. A smart coat of this group for simpler wear is in red velours de laine.

Profits Are Result of Reclaiming Waste That Polluted River

Paper mills are notorious for their pollution of streams. But in Michigan the prevention of stream pollution is proving a profitable procedure. The elimination of the polluting matter is being accomplished at not only a gain in public helath and a saving of water life, but at an eventual profit to those mills that have been causing the pollution. Among other industries that benefit by the law are the tanneries which have taken steps to recover hair and fertilizer from material that formerly poisoned all aquatic life. The hair is recovered and brings a price of $75 a bale, while the fertilizer is in great demand.

Legumes Remedy for Hollow Heart Spuds

Alfalfa and sweet clover offer a partial remedy for hollow heart in potatoes, according to PrProfessor J. F. Cox, head of the farm corps department at Michigan State College.

Professor Cox said specialists at the college have observed there is a smaller percentage of hollow tubers produced in fields where either sweet clover or alfalfa has preceded the spuds. The legumes tend to increase the organic matter of the soil and retain a higher moisture content through the growing period, Professor Cox explained. As a result the potatoes make a more uniform growth even though rainfall at times is deficient.

The bronze gates of the baptistry of St. John the Baptist church, Florence, took Ghiberti, their designer, 21 years to make—1403 to 1424.

Just a Touch of Printed Silk Livens Gown

A touch of gaily printed silk here and there often gives a livening touch to a dark gown. Black crepe chiffon is the material used here with bordering and trimming of black satin ribbon and cuffs of the printed silk. The frock has a short cape-jacket.

ST. JAMES BIBLE PRINTED IN 1651

A bible of the St. James version, which was printed by the Company of Stationers in 1651 and which once was rescued from the Atlantic ocean, is in the possession of Edward Drier.

Originally the property of the ancestors of John Jowett, the bible passed through the hands of several generations and finally was bequeathed to Rev. John Jowett, who retained it unttil 20 years ago.

At that time the clergyman was making a voyage from London to Malta, and one day, while reading the book upon the deck of his vessel, he accidentally dropped it and it slid overboard. A sailor plunged into the water and brought the book back to its owner. As a reward, the bible was gien the sailor, who carried it with him for five years. Upon meeting a former shipmate, A. J. Rhodes, in Montreal, and learning that his one time companion had taken up the trade of printer, the sailor presented the bible to Rhodes and 10 years ago it passed to Drier, who is deeply interested in old books and manuscripts.

The bible is about six inches by three inches in size and is bound in black leather. It contains the old and new testaments, the four gospels, all the epistles, the entire book of psalms and several prayers which were standard at the time it was published. Despite its great age, there is not a loose page in the book.

High Yield Barleys Are Ready for State Farmer

If the time ever comes when Michigan farmers are unable to beat the European corn borer to a mature corn crop, the Chatham experiment station and Michigan State College will have several high yielding varieties of barley for substitution in the rotation.

Barley grows at its best in the upper pennsula and the Chatham station is conducting experiments with all leading varieties in the United States besides several developed recently by plant breeders at Michigan State College. Yields comparable to those from oats are being obtained on the best soils. Barley is one of the most valuable crops on the peninsula as it is the chief source of homegrown fattening feed for livestock and poultry.

Marshall Army Man Is Assigned to Philippines

Lieutenant Donald Goodrich of Marshall is leaving in three months for the Philippines, where he will be assigned to field duty. He has been on detached duty for several years in Detroit and recently requested to be assigned to field duty in the Philippines. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Goodrich of Marshall.

More people arrive at the graveyard by the gorge route than by any other.

PARKS FILLED BY "FLIVVER GIRLS"

Girls who do manual labor; girls who raise tents faster than the average man; girls who prefer walking to accepting proffered automobile rides on the highways; girls earning their way by occasional jobs along the way; girls traveling via dilapidated flivvars with complete wardrobes packed into the rear seats; girls from 17 to 50 years old—these are a few of the types encountered this summer on Michigan park and tourists system.

Caretakers in state parks assert that this year has been the greatest number of unaccompanied girl tourists for years past. They come from all states, and by all means of locomotion, from high powered cars to old-fashioned foot power.

Almost invariably, habituees of the tourist camps say, these femenine sight seers carry as much luggage as their means of locomotion will possibly permit. Those who stay at tourist hotels and resorts along the way undergo a metaporphosis each evening. Entering the hotel in the afternoon clad in road-soiled knickers and flaming sweaters, that night they come down to dinner in the most demure of evening frocks.

Private Hunting Club Is Organized at Holland

A new private hunting club has been organized at Holland under the name of the "Wakanka Lodge." The hunting grounds of the club are situated about 10 miles north on M-11 and a mile and a half west on Pigeon river.

Any piece of fancy work will show to the best advantage if care is taken in matching linings, ribbons or cords used in the making up. Do not be content with a shade that is not exactly right.

Machine Invented by Michigander to Harvest Sugar Beet

Simon W. Vollink, of Hastings, is the inventor of a device for planting and harvesting sugar beets, celery, cabbage and other similar plants.

It was the backaches he suffered when a boy in the laborious process of planting and harvesting such vegetables that led Mr. Vollink to invent the machine. It was demonstrated at Kalamazoo and has been called a tremendous success.

The machine, operated by from one to four hands, picks cucumbers, harvests beans and performs other labors which ordinarily would require a worker to stoop over or go about on hands and knee. The machine, the inenttor says, operated at full capacity, will plant about two acres of beets a day, or about 20 times faster than by hand.

The first machine was constructed largely from automobile parts.

Huge Quantity Wheat, Ore Pass Through Soo

More than 13,000,000 bushels of wheat passed down the American and Canadian Soo canals during August.

Iron ore also moved freely, 10,684,548 short tons being transported down the American canal, which handled all this kind of cargo.

Soft coal was the principal upbound cargo, 1,796,477 short tons being transported through the American canal and 9,900 on the Canadian side.

To make a wood floor look like new dissolve in water equal quantities of fullers' earth, soft soap and soda. Scrub the floor with this and the wood will look white and new.

To remove grass stains from canvas shoes add a few drops of ammonia to a teaspoonful of peroxide of hydrogen and rub the stain with the mixture. Wash off with water.

MYSTERY GEESE SHOT IN SAGINAW

The report that brant have been shot by duck hunters on Saginaw Bay marshes for a number of years has led to quite a little controversy among the naturalists of the state.

"Michigan Bird Life' states that there are but two authentic brant being taken within the borders of the state. Last fall, on Fish Point, Saginaw Bay, a number of these so-called brant were brought in by duck hunters who had shot them on a morning following a hard northwester. They proved to be blue geese, a bird that supposedly was exceedingly rare for Michigan. In fact, it has never been considered common in any part of the eastern half or the United States.

Little is known about this remarkable bird. No one that is known to the natural scientific world has ever looked upon the nest or eggs of this species in the wild state. Their breeding ground has yet to be found and all attempts to locate them have failed. Science has been baffled for the past 200 years in trying to locate where they breed.

When making cookies roll the dough in a large sheet and bake in a large pan. Cut it in squares or triangles, and when cool break the sections off neatly.

New Postage Stamp

The 150th anniversary of the battle of White Plains in the Revolutionary war was commemorated on September 14th by issuing a two-cent postage stamp for circulation.

The new stamp is a horizontal rectangle 75-100 by 87-100 in size printed in red ink. The center scene shows a gun crew in action consisting of four men dressed in continental uniforms with cannon and ammunition. Over the vignette is a ribbon with the words, "United States Postage" in Roman letters. In the upper left-hand corner the year "1776" and in the upper right-hand corner "1926." Below the vignette in the center of the stamp is a circle containing a large "2" with the word "cents" on both sides and above the circle are the words "Battle of the White Plains" In the lower left-hand corner the continental flag and in the lower right corner the historical "Liberty or death" flag, first used in the battle of White Plains, both appearing in oblique position.

The school has been preparing a school exhibit for the Hillsdale Fair.

The 8th Grade are reading the history of the thirteen colonies for outside work in history.

We have recently received $8.02 Library money. Part of this will be invested in song books.

The Second Grade have learned the poem "The Golden Keys" They have made the keys and fastened them on a ring for seat work.

The following received half holidays last Friday: John Iveson, Richard Iveson, Anna Hoyt, Ilah Groom Harlie VanEtten, Pearl Beveridge.

We have received from the Libby Company, a toy store, consisting of twelve miniature packages. We use this in second grade number class.

The Fowler school commenced August 30 with an enrollment of twelve. Since then there are two new members, Betty Doolittle and Anna Hoyt, making a total of 14 pupils.

The teacher and pupils greatly appreciate the flag pole being reset and the swings repaired. We appreciate the play ground material which consists of basket ball, volley ball net, indoor ball, base ball, bats swings and teeters.

The school has mounted ten Fall flowers, also five kinds of weeds showing root, flower, seed, stalk and leaf and statement of eradication. This was an 8th Grade agricultural project but the other pupils have shown much interest and are to be given credit.

Jeromites in common with the rest of the county, manifested considerable interest in the Dempsey-Tunney prize fight last week.

The Dempsey-Tunny prize fight was an International illustration of national inconsistency because for example if two average gents should black each others eyes during a quarrel they probably would be arrested and the papers would call them undesirables, the Judge would call them down. They might be fined and sentenced to jail, etc., but when two expert eye blackers get into action, they receive compliments and homage from all parts of the country. It is well worth noticing that no country in the world has ever been able to trump up an audience of 132;000 for such an occasion.

I. W. Wertenberger and several other people have met with rather bad luck lately. Thursday evening some one ransacked his cellar. Sunday morning 25 of his chickens died while one of his horses was afflicted with colic, and then on Sunday afternoon Glarence Barron and wife of Jackson who were riding in an Overland six sedan, drove into his house damaging some of the siding and knocking several feet of the wall into the cellar. Mrs Barron who was quite badly cut by flying glass, was attended by Dr. Sterling while Mr. Barron was unhurt. The latter was returning from his farm several miles south-east of here when he lost control of the machine in attempting to avoid a collision with a Ford roadster that was turning a corner from the west. The roadster which was occupied by four unidentified boys and girls, was overturned but quickly righted up, leaving hurridly for parts unknown. The license number was obtained and the owner may be prosecuted if found, as it is said to be unlawful for several persons to ride in a one-seated car.

LUXURIES SWELL FARMERS! BUDGET

There is a new item among major expenses of an American family today, as compared with 50 years ago. The item is the money spent on heat, autos, gasoline and labor.

The budget of the average Michigan family of six for the year 1880 was $321.45, while for the year 1924 it was $2,563.76. The difference is not all accounted for in increased living expenses. The comparison brought out many good things of life which the 1924 family enjoyed, that were unknown to the 1880 family.

In the earlier, simpler generation the major expenses were four: food, clothing, children and church. Each of these items cost in the year between $50 and $100. In the 1924 year the church dropped out as a comparative major item, even though in 1924 more was given the church than in 1880 by about 30 per cent. In the modern year food, clothing and children remained three of the four major items, but the fourth was the new major, and it topped all the others. This item was denominated "General Operation." In 1880 it cost $14.96 and in 1924, $691.65.

Papers and books jumped from $2.50 to $161.70, far passing the church and showing one of the greatest percentage increases of any, although not the largest total.

The father's family bought cloth by the yard, but the son's family bought ready-made clothes. The education of the son's children is costing over twice as much as his own, due to the fact that teachers' salaries have nearly trebled. The father took two papers only; the son, during the year, bought a set of expensive books. The father's family light bill for the year was nine gallons of kerosene, $1.08; six lamp chimneys, 59 cents, and one wick, six cents, a total of $1.73. The son spends $2 a mont hfor fuel for his lighting system, while the upkeep and depreciation is $75 a year.

The figures of the two budgets follows:

	1880	1924
Light, including upkeep	$ 1.73	$ 99.00
Food	52.00	447.73
Clothing	93.68	280.15
Three children	61.81	411.43
Church	72.20	95.07
Doctor and medicine	6.40	167.30
Papers and books	2.50	161.70
Trips and vacations	....	22.26
Amusements	....	27.65
General operations (coal, gasoline, auto, labor)	14.96	691.51
Miscellaneous	16.17	159.82
Totals	$321.45	$2,563.76

Greenland Explorers Due at Ann Arbor Oct. 10

University of Michigan's Greenland expedition, under the direction of Professor William H. Hobbs, of the geology department, has left Holstensborg, on the schooner "Morrissey" and is due to arrive at Ann Arbor about October 10, a letter received by university officials says. The party left its base north of Holstensborg, and reached the Greenland city a few days ago. According to the letter, the party expects to reach Sidney, N. S., about October 1, from where they continue by rail.

The company is finding 1926 its banner year and you can find a local agent in every city and cillage in the state.

WORLD'S LONGEST STREET IN DETROIT

Woodward avenue, which is shortly to be widened into a 200-foot highway from Detroit to Pontiac, is said to be the longest street in the world.

It is a true polyglot—along this thoroughfare may be found the contradictions of smart shops and second-hand tailors; million dollar theaters and cheap burlesques; exclusive jewelers and pawn shops.

Starting at the Detroit river, this street leads directly through the heart of Detroit's business district; out the five miles to Highland Park; again taking up its course on the outskirts of that city and goes the two miles to the city limits, where it merges with M-10 to Pontiac.

Woodward avenue is the haunt of the religious vealot, the faker and the charlatan. On one corner a group of ardent evangelists hold forth; in the next block a show window demonstrator pantomimes the advantages of a particular brand of facial mud; farther up, a strident voiced street doctor is announcing a new cult, which combines spiritual health, wealth and happiness.

A nimble fingered window artist, dressed in a costume supposed to resemble ancient Egyptian dress, is demonstrating the "world's most startling discovery—" which proves to be an imitation diamond.

Cadillac Resident for Half Century When Forest There

Eugene F. Sawyer is probably among the very few, if not the only person, who has lived in the city of Cadillac for more than half a century, and he has been acttively engaged there for that length if time.

A native of Grand Rapids and a pupil in the high school of that city under the personal touch of Dr. Strong one of the wisest and best loved of educators. Mr. Sawyer taught school for a short time before entering the University of Cichigan for the study of law. Upon graduation from the university he went directly to Cadillac in the spring of 1873, only a short time after the old Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad had completed its line to Clam Lake, as the town was then called, situated as it is on the shore of one of two lakes, in whose waters are found these mussels. This was the end of the railroad for some considerable time afterwards, the track north to 'Mackinaw coming into existence several years later.

It was only a few months earlier than this that George A. Mitchell had filed his plat of the village of Clam Lake, which formed the nucleus around which Cadillac has grown up to its present population of 12,000. The whole country was then one big primeval forest of towering pines and staunch hardwood trees.

Boys' Aversion to Soap Laid to Primitive Urge

Boys like noise, gangs, physical games, camp fires and water, but not soap and water, because they're primitives, in the opinion of Dr. Allen Hoben, president of Kalamazoo college.

"The most important thing to conserve in a boy," said Dr. Hoben, "is the initial vigor on which all the rest of his course depends. Civilization impinges on boys, the primitives, the old racial stock, more and more closely. The danger is that it may press the more timid boys into shape and make them very nice too soon. Too early conformity to conventions may give you an effeminate boy."

Old Fire Place Oven Is Sought by Henry Ford

Henry Ford, automobile magnate and landlord emeritus of the Wayside Inn, South Sudsbury, is going in for ovens.

At the house of A. J. Blais, at Marlboro, Mass., while demolishing an old chimney, workmen came upon an old steel oven within the chimney walls. The owner of the house was not aware of its existence.

That Ford maintains a force of "antique scouts" was evident when Blais received a letter from Detroit, asking the selling price of the oven. The house is over 150 years old and the oven had been built in England prior to that time. Blais will sell the oven.

Men Dies at Wheel of His New Automobile

Captain Peter Face, well known in Lake Michigan fishing circles, died at the wheel of his car at Grand Haven, while he was riding for the first time in his new automobile. Death was due to heart trouble.

Two fishing tugs were operated out of Grand Haven port by the captain, who came from The Netherlands.

KENT IS COUNTY OF PRETTY LAKES

The warblers nest freely in the new grown pines and oaks on the south shore of Kettle lake, and the jays dart across the blue of the sky and scream defiance to all bird-dom. Lilies gather where there is no current, and the purple spikes of pickerel weed come out as far from the shoreline as they can wade. This spot is 15 miles from Grand Rapids—and there are over 400 such spots in Kent county alone.

Almost at every turn of the road, one can see the gleam of water through the trees. Kent county is thickly dotted with lakes, some large and others small, but each one of them has is own story, and its own individuality. Some of them are well known, while others are inaccessible and in out-of-the-way places, whose existence is known only to the map-maker and the surveyor and the farmer on whose land the body of water is. Some are well stocked with fish, others have a growth of weeds and rushes which make them good duck lakes, and others have a grassy shoreline, and become favored spot for picnics.

Kettle lake is on the south end of Campau lake, so-called because it is almost entirely round, and very deep, with almost a perpendicular shoreline, descending to a depth of from 40 to 75 feet.

$3,000 a Year Paid by Marquette for Killing of Rodents

The City of Marquette lays claim to the rat-killink championship of Michigan, and possibly of the United States. It refers other title contenders to records of the Marquette county treasurer which show that rat bounties paid during the last few years have aeraged $3,000 a year, at 10 cents a rat, and that 95 per cent of the animals were killed in this city's garbage dump, two miles out of town.

Recently the county treasurer decided that Marquette was putting over a joke on the taxpayers. When he counted his check stubs and found that $3,000 annually goes into the pockets of Marquette rat killers he demanded an explanation from the city commission.

One of the manifold duties of the state health department is the extermination of rats in any community where they become a menace to public health. The situation in Marquette has been accepted in Lansing as an emergency. It is indicated the state will send a man to wage war on the garbage dump livestock.

Menominee Man Named Head of U. P. Ike Waltons

Joseph S. Bottkol of Menominee was elected president of the Upper Peninsula division of the Michigan Izaak Walton league, while E. C. Voght, of Escanaba, will be the new vice president. In the course of the convention the importance of harmony and cooperation of the two peninsula divisions was emphasized. The upper peninsula division has appointed a legislative committee which will join with the lower peninsula committee to act as a single body.

Michigan Youth Is Back Home After Britain Debates

Americans, accustomed as they are to free public school education and attendance at a college or university after high school at a very nominal expense, will learn with wonder that England has only 12 or 15 large universities with an average enrollment of around 1,500 students each.

Gerald E. White of Lowell, alumnus of Junior college, and a member of the University of Michigan debating team which recently returned from England after engaging in a series of seven debates with tams from English universities, describes this as being one of the surprising things to the American tourist fresh from the land of mass production in education.

"Only the upper strata of society can afford to attend higher institutions of learning," White says. "The English students never work while attending college. They are amazed at such a prospect even as they do not comprehend a university of 15,000 students such as we have in the United States."

Farmers Oppose More Holidays as Blow to Food Sale

Opposition to the creation of any more legal holidays is expressed by farmers who complain they interfere with the orderly marketing of their products. Sentiment among producers began to take shape against holidays after a sharp break in peach, plum, pear and tomato prices following Labor Day.

Labor Day always comes on Monday and thousands of city folks also take Saturday off, making it a triple holiday. The housewives returning Conday night or Tuesday morning, are too tired to can fruits and vegetables. It is Thursday before their thoughts drift back to canning and by that time the large accumulation of fruits have depressed prices 0 to 50 per cent.

Growers recalled similar conditions following the Fouth of July, which also was celebrated on Monday this year and supplied many consumers with an excuse for another triple holiday. The Fourth always comes at the peak of the berry harvest and causes sharp breaks in prices as the result of large accumulations of perishable fruit on the markets and practically no demand from consumers.

U. S. Figures Reveal Auto Production Gain

Automobile production in the United States jumped 172,000 passenger cars and trucks in the month of August, as compared with production for the same month last year, a compilatin by the U. S. department of sommerce shows. The amount represents an increase of approximately 70 per cent.

Production last month is set at 424,394 vehicles, of which 379,111 were passenger cars and 45,283 were trucks. In August, 1925, this country automobile industry produced 252,451 vehicles, of which 216,087 were passenger cars and 36,364 were trucks. In July, of this year, production was 355,455 vehicles, representing 315,863 passenger cars and 39,592 trucks.

OPEN FAMED ROAD OF LUMBERJACKS

Northeastern Michigan has paid a sacredly eloquent tribute to that departed race, the brawny lumberjacks of the jack pine country.

The reverence for those picturesque despoiler of the Au Sable sand plains, those hardy invaders of Michigan's vast forest wilderness, arose from the hearts of friends of reforestation as they dedicated the Thompson trial — the old tote-road of the lumberjacks.

Thompson trail is to open to the citizens of the state the natural wonders of the Michigan national forest and to give them an insight into the country with which the woodsmen wrestled when Michigan was in its infancy. The road is to be rebuilt by the United States government from East Tawas up along the historic Au Sable to the old lumber camps.

It was along this old trail that supplies for the logging camps were hauled more than half a century ago. It was the lumberman's rapid transit, and it served its purpose well. It represented the shortest route between the big woods camps and civilization at East Tawas.

Along it came the axemen, choppers, teamsters and swampmen, as they hurried to the crude palaces of pleasure and dissipation on the lake shore. When the lumberjacks hurried, the wide world knew he had just cashed stake, after months of labor, and was o again to get rid of it—often in a few hours.

Ann Arbor Students Would Dodge Auto Ban

Methods of evading the new ban on student automobiles put in effect by the University of Michigan during the summer provides one of the main subjects of conversation among the under graduates at Ann Arbor. The new ban makes it impossible for freshmen to own cars this fall.

While dealers in second hand automobiles, who supply new students with the cars that they use during the year, report that their sales have not decreased materially due to the ruling, they say that a new form of sale is taking place.

Although the ban applies to both owning and operating autombiles, most of those hit by its rulings believe that they can evade the law in merely operating the cars. In this way they will not be forced to register them with the university, and will not be subject to the law unless they are reported by some one who sees them driving.

A woman will forgive a man almost anything except his refusal to ask forgiveness.

Surprising Rise In Michigan Laid to Seven-Year Cycle

The level of Lake Michigan is showing a surprising rise, and marine men predict that the seven-year cycle in the lowering and rising of the water is holding true.

"The lake level is rising gradually," says Capt. William Rosie, of the General Meade, government dredge at Ludington. "It is a steady rise that appears likely to continue. The level has risen four or five inches since last spring. It is about the same as one year ago at this time. The level continued to drop last year. However, it was the lowest in history during January, February and March of this year. But following the period of low level the lake started to rise."

Old marine men say that for some reason as yet unexplained, the level of the Great Lakes changes in cycles of seven years. The leel continues to decreas for seven years and then comes back. Figure psrove this to be true, but no one has been able to discover the cause. The lake, during the present cycle, reached a new low level. Th cycle was reached a year ago and the increase should have started at that time.

Yacht of Ex-Mrs. Dodge Is Burned at New York

Mrs. Hugh Dillman's yacht Delphine burned and sank after it had been towed to a dock on the Hudson river at New York when fire was discovered in the coal bunkers of the palatial vessel. Mrs. Dillman was not aboard, and not casualties reported. The owner's maid left the ship with Mrs. Dillman's jewels, valued at $250,000, under heavy police guard. The gems were taken to the Hotel Ambassador, where Mr. and Mrs. Dillman are staying.

The yacht, owned by Mrs. Dillman, the former Mrs. Horace E. Dodge of Detroit, had been anchored in the Hudson river for several days.

FOUR YEARS AGO a young farmer, married, one child, was $6,000 in debt. His net earnings from LIFE INSURANCE the first year were $3,000. The next year he was listed on the company's Honor Roll for Production. Now he owns a beautiful home. APARTMENT GARAGES INCORPORATED
(A Michigan Corporation)
PRESENTS

An Investment Opportunity of Merit

APARTMENT GARAGES, INC., Builders, Owners and Operators of modern storage garages, featuring call and delivery service.

The growth of Detroit's apartment house districts has been phenomenally rapid. Today, street after street is lined with massive apartment houses running from sidewalk to alley WITH NO AVAILABLE SPACE FOR THE TENANTS' AUTOMOBILES.

Thousands upon thousands of apartment dwellers in various parts of the city are awaiting the advent of garage facilities in their immediate neighborhoods, and this Company, will, in part, relieve present congestion conditions.

Construction Started

APARTMENT GARAGES, INC., has purchased two sites where a 300- and a 500-car garage will be erected. Construction has started on our first unit, "THE CHICAGO-LINWOOD," located at Longfellow and Lawton, in the heart of the Chicago-Dexter Boulevard apartment house district. This will be of 300-car capacity, and is expected to be in operation by early fall. The lack of adequate automobile storage facilities in this neighborhood should insure capacity business from the beginning of operations.

Future Expansion

An expansion program will be the policy of the Company. Unit after unit will be erected as local demands warrant and conditions permit. Regardless of the number of units in operation or contemplated, stockholders will participate in all future developments of the Company.

Strong Management

APARTMENT GARAGES, INC., will be capably managed, and the following Detroit business and professional men constitute the Officers and Board of Directors:
Arnold F. Zeleznik, President, member of the law firm of Aldrich and Zeleznki.
Paul O. Winkler, Vice-President, President, Paul O. Winkler Construction Co.
Bert W. Jackson, Secretary-Treasuer, President, B. W. Jackson & Co., Investment Bankers.
Edw. F. Schlee, President, Wayco Oil Corporation.
Ernest G. Brock, B. S., B. C. S., Detroit Public Schools.
Alex C. Green, Acountant.
Lewis P. Threlkeld, Apartment Hotel Operator.

Profit Possibilities

An interesting comparison may be made from an investment point of view between the Apartment House proper and the automobile Storage Garage.

The Apartment House has a fixed and non-productive investment in plumbing, heating, electrical, cooking, and refrigerating fixtures, not to speak of expensively decorated walls, lobbies, and partitions, while elevator and buzzer systems have to be built and maintained. The Storage Garage needs but four bare walls and a minimum of space for office, storeroom and wash-rack.

In a high grade apartment renting for $100 per month, about 800 square feet of space is utilized. In a modern garage this space will return approximately $150 per month from storage alone.

The Apartment House has only one source of revenue—RENT. The Storage Garage only begins its income with storage charges, and customers for storage are immediately prospects for many other profitable items and services—GAS and OIL, WASHING and POLISHING, DOPING, CHAUFFEUR, CALL and DELIVERY, BATTERY CHARGING and LOANER SERVICES, SALE and REPAIR OF TIRES, TUBES, MISCELLANEOUS ACCESSORIES, etc., etc.

APARTMENT HOUSES ARE PROFITABLE, BUT THIS COMPARISON ILLUSTRATES THE GREATER PROFIT POSSIBILITIES OF THE STORAGE GARAGE FROM THE STANDPOINT OF CAPITAL INVESTED.

$50 WILL BUY
5 Shares Class "A"
Stock, With a Bonus of
1 Share Class "B" Stock

The Class "A" Stock is entitled to cumulative dividends at the rate of 80 cents per share per annum before Class "B" Stock participates in any distribution.

After Class "B" Stock receives a like amount, then each Class will receive 50% of any further disburstements which the directors may declare for any year.

The Class "B" Stock carries full voting powers.

Your Opportunity

This issue should have special appeal to the conservative and discerning investor. It presents itself as possessing the utmost in security as to principal—real estate and buildings in neighborhoods where values are constantly on the increase—and at the same time offers a liberal yield, with promising participating possibilities.

Caleb was still bitter enough himself to feel scant sympathy with Baxter's condition, serious as Fields considered it to be. Baxter hadn't been drunk when he went to Hermanos valley to talk with Betty and her father.

Hinckley was waiting for him at the Ferry building. The engineer had managed to subtly but completely disguise himself. In old, baggy tweeds, with a shabby hat and a battered bag, he looked like an unsuccessful farmer. The keenness of his eyes was dimmed by yellow-lensed spectacles with imitation tortoise shell rims. He looked approvingly at Caleb's rough clothes.

"That's the idea. No sense in us looking like tourists or in any way prosperous or otherwise obtrusive. I'm fairly well known over there, too, and, if it got out I was smelling around the hill, the price of real estate would be apt to soar immediately. There is always the chance of Oakville learning something and suspecting more.

"There's a big lot of watershed we'll have to accumulate to insure purity. And you've got to be canny. Your role is that of a foolish young Easterner with money on whom land worth comparatively little may be unloaded at a fair price. A price they will think big until the project is complete.

"It's fair enough all round," he went on. "We'll pay 'em more than market value because at present there is no actual market for their land, hasn't been for years, not likely to be. The boat's in."

Through the waiting room windows they could see the trans-bay passengers filing past to the exits. Caleb, released from attention to Hinckley's talk—they had stood apart from the crowd—suddenly caught his breath. Less than ten feet from him, in front, were Betty Clinton and her father. They were going back to El Nido. That was evident and it suited Caleb. Before he returned to Golden he could carry out his intention of seeing them. Baxter could wait. So he dallied until Clinton's spare figure found a way through the thinning crowd that tailed onto the Ferry apron and, with Betty following, climbed the stairs to the upper deck. Hinckley went forward to the open end with Caleb. They were among the first off the ferry, first through the gates to their train.

Hinckley and Caleb took rooms at the same hotel that Caleb had patronized. Part of their trip was to be made in a car shabby enough to preclude any idea of wealth for its occupants, part in a buggy, on horseback, and afoot.

Caleb took the lead and conducted Hinckley up Hermanos canyon, into the Boca-Blanca valley, to the source of Gabilan and around about the Sink itself. The third day was given up to an inspection of the foothills that bound the Sink and a checking-up of Caleb's demonstrations in proof of the clay that underlay the gravel and lined its sides.

"I am entirely satisfied, so far," said Hinckley when they returned to their hotel after this last trip. "This is Saturday. I'd like to call a halt until Monday. I always aim at spending the week-end in the bosom of my family, if I can compass it. We have done famously. I can confirm your findings with enthusiasm, my son."

Hinckley nodded at the young man with a smile that radiated health and good nature. They had got along wonderfully in their common interest in a project that promised full success.

"Goin' to leave us?" The landlord of the hotel came out upon the verandah where Caleb and Hinckley were chatting. Rain had fallen heavily and held them indoors to check over the notes and maps they had made. Now it was clearing up.

"I'm going to Golden on the fourteen," said Hinckley. "Be back Monday. Mr. Warner—are you coming with me, Warner?"

"I think not. I'll do a little fishing. Maybe take a shot at those quail we saw on Gabilan. You'll find me here waiting for you."

"Cloudburst up country," said the hotelkeeper. "This here local rain was the tag of it. Crick's risin' fast. Black as sin over Gabilan. She's a weather-breeder, is that old mountain. Power of current comin' down stream after this little spat of weather."

"Let's go out and have a look," suggested Hinckley.

Coyote creek had risen, was rising, in a volume that testified to the truth of the landlord's assertion that there had been a cloudburst. He accompanied them to the bridge, scorning any waterproof for the now swiftly falling rainfall and the three leaned over the rail and watched the sliding torrent of brown water. Caleb marked the waterline on the cement of the bridge abutments, noting it by certain stains in the cement. It was covered within five minutes by as many inches.

"Rising fast," he commented.

"She'll rise for an hour or so after that bust," said the landlord. "She comes a kiyootin' an' a tootin' in the winter when Gabby gets to makin' rain in earnest."

Caleb saw Hinckley off. Then he ordered a lunch put up. The landlord made little comment as he handed it to him.

"If you aim to be out late you better take a slicker along," he said. "By the feel of the air an' my rheumatic knee, old Gabby ain't through yit. Likely to be another cloudbu'st afore sundown. Black as the inside of yore hat over thar."

Caleb thanked him and took his advice. He was bound for Hermanos valley and he crossed the bridge and started up Hermanos creek with his shoulders squared and his jaw set. Nothing was going to prevent him getting an audience with Clinton. He had certain things to set forth and, stormy though that interview would probably be in the beginning, he would let himself hold no doubt as to its favorable conclusion.

CHAPTER XII

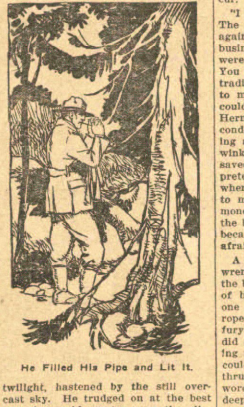
On the Bridge

It was a five mile walk to the canyon Caleb's condition the distance, both ways, meant little. He knew the dining hour at El Nido. It was five when he set out and this should bring him to the junction of valley and canyon in the early evening. A pipe to top off his cold supper and he would arrive at the ranchhouse soon after the Clinton meal was over. So he would stand the best chance of finding both Betty and her father at home, would be apt to find Clinton in congenial mood.

The darkness deepened to premature nightfall as Caleb reached mid-canyon. The trail was dim and water, racing down the canyon sides from the storm, had rendered the track slimy and treacherous, slackening up his pace. He filled his pipe and lit it. Before the bowl was glowing evenly there came a moan from the south, the boughs above him creaked and bent protestingly and the breeze blew chilly down the trail. Leaves and twigs came fluttering down in the dusk.

Caleb put on his slicker. Thick though the leafy screen above him was, he felt sure that a heavy downpour was imminent. The first drops of it spatted heavily on the green thatch before he had gone a hundred yards. Then, suddenly, effectively, as if the bottom of some aerial cistern had given away, the rain drove down, beating through the trees in vertical lines, plumping into the swollen creek, hissing in continuous spouts that flattened thickets and pitted the soft soil, rattling on Caleb's oilskin like a discharge of small shot, with force enough to be distinctly felt.

There was little actual danger. Caleb could easily scramble through the brush to immunity at any moment. And he pushed on. He could see the path fairly well though this was the twilight, hastened by the still overcast sky. He trudged on at the best pace he could muster over the slippery red soil but, when he came to the final bend, the neck of the bottle, it was so dark that he could only make out the suspension bridge by its silhouette where it crossed the gut of surging torrent, close to the footboards. Soon it would be over it.



He Filled His Pipe and Lit It.

Caleb doubted whether the bridge would stand any great resistance to water pressure. He remembered fissures in the rocky buttresses where the cables were anchored, fissures ever widened and deepened by successive winter assaults of storm waters. He was hungry and he decided to eat his supper and wait for moonlight before he crossed the gut and struck the ridge trail down to El Nido.

By the time he had finished eating, a tremulous light above the western ridge proclaimed imminent moonrise and the efforts of the luminary to conquer the already retreating masses of cloud in their disorderly flight.

Caleb stepped onto the bridge cautiously, either hand on the guide-rope of steel wire, held up by iron stanchions that were bolted through the floor planks. The structure shuddered under his tread as he felt his way along. Suddenly the rhythm of its trembling changed and became so irregular as to force him to a standstill. The jolting increased. Some one else was on the bridge, coming from the valley side. Was it Padilla?

He held his ground. The boards were not wide enough to permit of two passing breast to breast. They would have to sidle about each other. If it was Padilla and the Mexican wanted to dispute the crossing, there would be trouble. Caleb was not going to turn back. He hesitated whether to call out as the other came on, his tread sounding distinctly.

Then the moon suddenly broke through its veil and sent a transient ray into the mouth of the gorge. Out of the dark, as if a spotlight had been projected against a black curtain, staring at Caleb while he stared back, leaped the face of Ted Baxter; the features incredulous at first, swiftly changing, before the light failed, to a sneering, taunting mask. His voice sounded out of the dark as the light vanished.

"What the devil are you doing up here?"

The query held a scornful emphasis that aroused in Caleb such a swift, consuming hatred in answer to the challenge, as he had never known himself capable of. The man, within reach, once his friend, had done him treacherous injury. Now was the time to strike a balance.

"I've been looking for you, Baxter," he said. "Though I didn't exactly expect to meet you here. I know everything you've done. It's opened my eyes. I had an idea that you were fairly decent, that you possessed at least some remnants of honor, some rags of friendship. You haven't got any more principles than a yellow cur. You . . ."

"I haven't, eh?" broke in Baxter. The moon came glimmering through again. "Because I've bested you in a business deal where you thought you were so almighty smart, you get sore! You went sneaking around yourself, trading on friendship and pretending to make love to a girl, so that you could find out what you wanted about Hermanos valley and then have it condemned for a reservoir. You talking about honor! You tried to hoodwink Clinton and I found it out and saved him. Rags of friendship? You pretended to be my best friend and, when it came to a showdown, you lied to me and said you didn't have any money. Why? Because you lacked the backbone to come out and say so, because you were so d—d Yankee, afraid you might lose a penny."

A lurch of the bridge, a sudden wrench. A chilly wave slopped over the boards. It flowed about the ankles of both of them. Caleb stood with one hand free, the other on the handrope, balancing himself, whipped to fury by each word of Baxter. But he did not interrupt him. He was waiting for the light to get stronger. He could see the other but dimly, his face thrust forward, shooting out his words, trying to make them sting deeper.

"That was business and I got the best of you. To h—l with all that! That isn't what you're sore about. It's because I've cut you out with the girl. Why don't you own up to it?" Baxted laughed mockingly.

"You don't suppose, you poor boob, that she would ever look twice at a man like you as a lover. You've got diluted maple sirup in your veins. She's got blood, red, hot! I kissed her less than half an hour ago. I—"

Fury overmastered Caleb. Baxter had touched the sensitive core of the whole matter—Betty Clinton! He leaped for his man and felt the well-aimed, smashing impact of Baxter's fists to neck and jaw as he himself drove hard to the body. But the straight punch that nearly found the fatal "point" jolted him badly and left him dizzy. He grappled to a clinch as the moon sailed out, wading through a shallow sea of spindrift clouds.

Mr. Meek Puts $30 on Right Side of Ledger

The meek little man counted his change and moved away from the railroad ticket window. He looked worried, counted again and edged diffidently back.

"I think," he said apologetically, "that you made a mistake in the change."

The sleek-haired clerk became chill with sudden hauteur.

"Sorry, but you should have rectified that when I gave it to you. Can't do anything now."

"But," said the little man, peering piteously over his glasses, "I didn't notice it at the—"

"Rules of the comp'ny," recited the clerk pompously. "We can't risk gettin' gypped by people who don't count their change. Move along, please; please; others waiting."

"Are you sure you can't do anything about a serious error like this?" The agonized anxiety in the small voice would have melted a human heart.

"Yes. Absolutely! Now, will you move on or must I—"

"No, there's no need of that," sighed the lamb, melting into the passing throng. "You're just out $30, that's all."

An Expert

"Julia, do you know what love it?"

The young man put the question in an intense voice.

"Yes," replied the girl, firmly.

"But do you really know?" he asked again. "Have you ever been the object of a love as undying as the sun, as all-pervading as the air, as wonderful as the stars? Have you ever loved and been loved like that, Julia?"

In an agony of suspense he waited for her reply.

"Have I?" she murmured. "If you will come up into our boxroom, I can show you a trunk full of letters, and three albums full of photographs, and in my jewel-case are seven engage-

Retrospect

In looking backward over life I sometimes see much of sadness, and feel life to be a rather sorrowful thing; but far, far oftener it is the laughter that I hear, and it is smiling faces that look into mine. Even men who were hateful, even the memories of merciless drivers, are softened for the reason that time effaces their evil, bringing out more and more whatever of pleasantness they had in them. There were very, very few indeed who meant the evil. At any rate, time shall give them the benefit of the doubt.

Judgment is a poor thing as from man toward man, isn't it? Though I have known human devils, for whom in my heart I can find no respect or love, perhaps the Almighty can. I do not doubt that such is the case, and to Him I will leave the judgments. —Bill Adams in Adventure Magazine.

Originated Turkey Trot

Going back to the early Eighteenth century to show that every innovation in dancing has met with violent opposition, a writer in Liberty Magazine says that it was in 1912 that Mabel Hite, an actress, and Mike Donlin a ball player turned vaudevillian who was Mabel's husband, brought to Broadway the first turkey trot New York had ever seen. Right there decently ordered terpsichore expired.

Croswell Finds Way To Keep Good Health
Suffering from Headaches, Sour Stomach and Sluggish Liver, Boat Builder Recovers Health. Thanks Tanlac

The remarkable experience of W. E. Croswell of 3727 Harrison Avenue, Detroit, is the same as thousands of others who after months of suffering have found relief and new strength in this wonderful tonic and remedy.

When Mr. Croswell was young he found himself on the verge of becoming an invalid—his body wracked with pain, unable to eat without suffering from dyspepsia, bothered by dizzy spells, too weak to do his work.

"My life was a tragedy," says Mr. Croswell. "Days of pain followed sleepless nights. The sight of food nauseated me. I ate very little and became weak and run-down. I tried everything in the search for relief.

"Then a friend told me about Tanlac. It did the work, relieved pain and toned up my liver.

"I began to sleep well and get up in the morning refreshed. I took on weight and felt stronger. Tanlac put my boat across when nothing else would."

Benefit by Mr. Croswell's experience. Let this marvelous tonic made from roots, barks and herbs, help rebuild your run-down body, drive out pain, give you robust health.

Results after taking the first bottle will amaze you. Ask your druggist for Tanlac—today. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Why Is It—

That the evening you planned for a quiet one is usually a rip snorter?—that the day you go to the country it always rains?—that all plans made between 1 and 6 a. m. never materialize?—that every time you are taken to the theater you have seen the play before?—that after you have given the waiter the order, you always discover on the menu a far more appetizing dish?—that yesterday's newspaper seems ages old?—that you can never remember the singularly brilliant thought that struck you the other morning in the bath?—that whenever you are in a hurry every thoroughfare turns out to be a one-way street of the opposite direction?—that you can never tell what a woman is going to do next?—Kansas City Star.

Lightning Protection

The world's ablest engineers have never found ways to prevent lightning from "striking," but they are able to prevent it from damaging a city's electric system. Power companies know how to protect their lines with heavy insulation and with lightning arresters of sufficient capacity to deflect a "stroke" to the ground before it has created any havoc along the wires. Also they sectionalize every system so that should a bolt strike any part of it, the remainder will be unaffected. These are the reasons why the electric light wires leading into a house are not a menace during a storm.

Truth has never been, can never be, contained in any creed or system.—Ward.

RICH CHINESE "BEGGAR KING"

Lo Pa-hong, Who Gained Title By Many Charities, Visits Detroit

Known in his own country as "King of the Beggars", J. Lo Pa-hong, eminent business man and philanthropist of Shanghai, China, was a recent visitor to Detroit. He was the official delegate of Chinese Catholics to the recent Eucharistic Congress in Chicago. Since the close of that event he has been to Rome where he was granted a private audience by Pope Pius XI. He is now on his way back to China.

In the last 15 years, Lo Pa-hong has given more than $1,600,000 to Catholic charitable foundations in China. He is what in this country is termed a "big business man", heading a long list of corporations, both mercantile and industrial. His pet hobby, though, is charity.

Hospitals, for the aged and for children, industrial homes and refuges for Christian Chinese who have been cast off by their pagan relatives have been established and maintained by this man. When the returns of his business enterprises are insufficient to pay for his charitable work, he begs the money from his friends. Ninety per cent of the contributions he receives are from pagan Chinese, he said.

Although attired in the silken robes of an upper-class Chinese when in Detroit, Lo Pa-hong appeared more of a cosmopolite than a Chinaman. He speaks English and French fluently, in addititon to his native tongue. He holds many titles granted him by different popes and in addition to his other duties is Chinese Counselor to the French Municipality in Shanghai. He was the guest of the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of Detroit.

LITTLE SISTERS OF POOR TO HAVE NEW COUNTRY HOME

DETROIT, Mich.,—After almost 50 years occupancy of their present "Home for the Aged Poor" the Little Sisters of the Poor, through the generosity of a number of Detroit Catholics, are to have a new home, located on 20 acres of valuable property in the outskirts of the city.

The new site is at Outer Boulevard and the Southfield road, at the junction of a superhighway and an 104-foot boulevard. It is already within the city limits and water, sewer and pavements are assured in the near future. Among those who have contributed the cost of an acre or more of the ground are John P. and Michael T. Dinan, who purchased three acres; Miss Bertha Stott, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Smith, Seymour & Troester and James Berry.

The new site will afford the old people cared for by the Little Sisters sunlight and fresh air which it is impossible to obtain in the present quarters which are surrounded by railroads and industrial plants. The Little Sisters of the Poor have been established in Detroit 52 years.

SPECIAL PRAYERS OFFERED FOR EARLY PEACE IN MEXICO

Complying with the request of Pope Pius XI, Catholics of Michigan have taken up the recitation of special prayers for cessation relief of the religious controversy in Mexico.

These prayers were begun on the feast of St. Peter in Chains, who has been regarded, since the earliest times, as a special pleader for Catholics in times of persecution. In their letters to pastors, the Michigan Bishops recall that when the Soviet set out on a program of uprooting all religion in Russia, Charles E Hughes, then Secretary of State, refused to recognize the Soviet government as a civilized one.

The cry "He is an enemy of Caesar, crucify him," that has been raised throughout the centuries against the Catholic Church by its persecutors is substantially the cry of the Calles government in the present controversy, according to the church leaders.

FAIR TRACK ONE OF FASTEST

Nothing is being left undone which will help condition the track at the State Fair Ground so that it will be the fastest in the country when the next annual Michigan State Fair is held in Detroit from September 5 to September 11.

The events scheduled for the track during the six days of the fair include five days of light harness racing and automobile races on the final day. Every day finds a force of workmen busily engaged in smoothing down the track, dragging it, rolling it, and working over it so that it will merit the reputation it has of being the fastest state fair track in the United States.

Some Sidelights On The Fight Against The Liquor Traffic In Germany

Some years ago there was dug up near the city of Dusseldorf, Germany, a skull and some bones which scientists restored into a low-browed, stoop-shouldered creature that they called the "Neanderthal man." Pictures of this "Neanderthal man" are now nearly as common as those of George Washington and Julius Caesar. This creature represents the beginnings of human culture, we are told, when there were no troubles about "personal liberty," for the strong ruled the weak and every body looked out for himself.

This year, there is being held in this same city a remarkable human "Welfare Exposition" for which the name "Gesolei" has been invented. The exposition, purely German in character, covers every form of achievement in human welfare activities from model houses down through the gamut to contagious diseases and sports. Nothing is omitted. It is shown how mankind suffers and heals, seeks and finds, struggles and triumphs; one of the most remarkable and significant expositions ever staged.

And nothing attracts more attention than does the problem of drink, attracked and defended from so many angles in the various exhibits. In Dusseldorf, is now centered the struggle that is being waged around the drink throughout the whole of Germany. It crops up in every direction.

The brewers lead off with their 200,000 mark exhibit, almost in the center of everything. They show up-to-date brewing machinery. They have an exhibit showing the horrors of prohibition in America, gotten up with material furnished by the American "Association Against Prohibition." They have an exhibit showing the dangers of drinking water, because cholera epidemics come from drinking water and, to be safe from cholera, one must drink beer. They have taken possession of every eating place in the exposition except one. Of the 24 "restaurants," 23 are beer gardens and little else. In the department of nutrition, they show how, before any great effort, one must take a drink of liquor. Then, to cap the climax, they present a huge panorama of Christ hanging on the cross in the middle of a hop yard!

But the German "drys" come back with the most terrific onslaught of facts and figures that I have ever met in the 64 years of my life. Here are some of them:

One exhibit shows that the people of Germany, last year, spent 3,500,000,000 marks for beer; or 1,000 marks for every letter in the Bible. Another exhibit shows that in six days of the October festival of 1921, the people spent enough to build a garden city for 2,000 people.

Another exhibit shows that on last New Year's night, in Berlin alone, there were 450 arrests, 11 attempts at suicide, six killed and 353 wounded in drunken brawls—that happened in Berlin, not Chicago.

Another exhibit shows that while 100 marks will keep one man busy at brewery work, it will keep 2 tailors busy or it would keep 4 builders busy.

It shows that of 100 marks spent in wages, brewery workers get 15 per cent., tailors get 30 per cent builders get 60 percent.

Another graphic exhibit shows that there are now 500,000 people in Germany supported more or less by private and public charity. These concerns are divided as follows: 1,597 hospitals, 220 sanitariums, 811 convalescent homes, 2,042 homes for the aged, 138 asylums for cripples, 219 asylums for feeble minded (with 34,537 inmates 154 homes for babies, 1,379 schools for dependent school children, having 82,394 children in their care, 523 homes for young people who have left school and not employed 84 industrial homes, 535 lodging houses and 70 farm colonies. No attempt is made to calculate the factor of drink; that is left to the imagination.

Another exhibit shows 133 different German cities maintain municipal departments for looking after drunkards. In 1925 these departments cared for 28,500 drunkards, and 2,182 of them were sent to inebriate homes for treatment.

Another smashing exhibit shows that in one year in Berlin, out of every 1,000 brewery workers, 412 met with accidents, while out of the same number of builders only 65 met with accidents. A thousand stone workers had 46 accidents and a thousand glass workers had 37.

The numerous German inebriate cures have formed themselves, mostly into a "union." Statistics shown in an exhibit by this "union" show that in 1913, the last year before the war, the concerns of the union treated 1,767 patients. In 1919, when the war restrictions on beer were still on, they treated 133. Last year 1925 they treated 1,312.

Seed Corn Problem Up In State Again

The problem of a shortage of good seed corn, with which Michigan farmers have wrestled for the past three years, threatens to prove serious again this season, according to H. C. Rather, crops specialist at M. S. C.

Delayed plantings last spring and the recent prolonged siege of wet weather have delayed the maturity of the crop. Even the corn which is practically ripe contains excessive moisture and will not keep well unless every precaution is taken to dry the supply intended for seed before freezing injury or mold ruins its vitality.

Basements, stables or out-door porches are unsatisfactory as storage places for seed corn, says Rather. Some dry, well ventilated room as in an attic, is preferred for small supplies; while a special seed house is worth while for the commercial seed corn grower.

Ears should be racked or hung separately, so as to permit free circulation of air; while ventilation should be so arranged as to permit the taking in of plenty of air below the corn, with ventilators above to let it out. Corn should be stored between these openings only, as that stored above or below is likely to be in stagnant air and mold.

The application of heat to dry it down when cold weather starts is advisable.

A poultry record of production association, intended to provide a means of securing official production records on leading flocks of the state, was organized recently during a meeting of the state Poultry Improvement Association held at M. S. C. C. N. Whittaker, of Lawrence heads the new organization. Inspection work for the association will be handled in cooperation with the M. S. C. poultry department.

Three Michigan boys, students in the agricultural division at M. S. C. will compete with men from 20 other states at the National Dairy Show in Detroit October 6 to 13, in an effort to bring the title of "National Student Judging Champions" back to Michigan.

H. J. Foster, of Rives Junction; T. B. Knopf, Blissfield; and Gordon Whitburn, Marenisco, will compose the M. S. C. dairy judging team. A second team, slated to score dairy products in the national competion, will be made up of A. D. Ackley, Marshall; George Harma, Atlantic Mine; and Oscar Hall, Lucas.

Both of these teams took training trips through other states early in September, in order to get in better shape for the contests at the Dairy Show. Students from M. S. C. have won high honors at previous dairy shows. Frank Williamson, who recently came into prominence by signing a contract to manage Senator Couzen's farm, was high man of the whole show two years ago.

Something Besides a Kick

A business man in Salem, Oregon, makes a practice on New Year's day, to call for the chief operator of the telephone exchange and ask her to thank every operator for the courteous constant service given his phone during the past year. He says it somewhat like this:

"You have been on the job 24 hours every day of the year. You have to be courteous always, and careful. You have been prompt to answer, prompt to remedy any defect in the line service. But it is more than a mere business transaction, to be forgotten the moment it is over. The service given me is not that of mere hirelings, but that of men and women sincerely interested in their job, interested in giving the best of them selves to humanity. It is the essence of better living.

"For the pleasant [illegible]ing the year just past, I sincerely thank you." For the benefit of our subscribers we might say there are a lot of business men in most any city or town who do the same thing practically, only they do it in a different way. Their apologies to the telephone operator are generally put up in cipher but it has come to be known quite well what they mean, The put 'em up in such a way that nothing is said but a whole lot is meant, and while this is going on the business men are very careful that their wives don't get next, all of which goes to show how crafty human nature is when the little rascal cupid enters his cunning arrows into the deal.

PRONUNCIATION AID

June Webster, descendant of the famous lexicographer, Noah Webster, presents a copy of her ancestor's work to the Publicity Department of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition Association to help them in pronouncing properly the name of the big events which opens June 1 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. There are many types of pronunciations heard but there is just one proper way Noah says. It is "Ses-Kwuh-cen-ten'-nial" with the accent on the first syllable of the "Sesqui" and on the second syllable of the "centennial."

Effective But Simple Dishes Now In Vogue

Something simple yet effective is the housewife's ideal for week-end dishes.

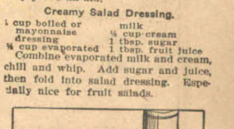
During the warm summer weather, women should not be compelled to spend hours in the preparation of meals, when minutes would accomplish the same purpose. Planning week-end menus should be a congenial task, not a bore. At this time of the year there are a variety of nutritious vegetables and fruits to choose from in preparing meals and the modern home manager takes advantage of them. The housewife plans her summer menus so that they will suggest coolness, while at the same time taking into consideration their dietary value. A delicious cream soup made from fresh vegetables, or an omelet, a fresh fruit dessert, or a custard, a dish of ice cream, or a pudding, are nourishing items that should find high favor in the week-end menu.

The home manager enjoys her week-ends 100 per cent more when she has a few moments of leisure. And in this connection the following recipes may prove an aid.

Creamy Salad Dressing.

1 cup boiled or mayonnaise dressing
¼ cup evaporated milk
¼ cup cream
1 tbsp. sugar
1 tbsp. fruit juice

Combine evaporated milk and cream, chill and whip. Add sugar and juice, then fold into salad dressing. Especially nice for fruit salads.



Chocolate Velvet Cream.

1½ tbsp. gelatin
½ cup cold water
2 eggs, beaten separate
¼ cup sugar
2 squares (oz.) chocolate
¾ cup evaported milk diluted with ¾ cup water
1 tsp. butter
¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. flavoring
⅓ cup evaporated milk combined with
⅓ cup whipping cream, chilled and whipped

Soak gelatin in water five minutes. Mix beaten egg yolks and sugar, pour heated, diluted milk over slowly, put in double boiler with gelatin, butter and salt. Cook until the mixture thickens. This takes about 15 minutes. Strain, beat 2 minutes, let cool. Melt the chocolate over hot water, let cool a little, then add the chocolate and vanilla to the mixture after it has cooled. Fold in the stiff egg whites, then the whipped cream. Turn into a mold and chill at least 3 hours. It may be chilled in individual dessert glasses.

The Snow Covered Root

Houses of the future will be known for their likable qualities by the amount of snow they have on their roofs during the winter season, said Samuel R. Lewis, former President of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, who predicts that insulation will revolutionixe the living habits of the nation.

"In any proper house there should be a tight attic, preferably divided into many compartments, with an insulated roof and an insulated floor. Yet, in most houses the roof is of the same character our ancestors used to put on the cowshed."

In commenting on an insulated house in Chicago which attracted attention last winter because of its snow-covered roof, Mr. Lewis says

"The owner of this house applied part of the ordinary appopriation for heating apparatus to a thorough insulation of the walls, floors and roof. He spent five hundred dollars more on the building and five hundred dollars less for the heating. As a consequence, he is able to heat his house with hot water, burning gas automatically controlled, and almost perfect as mundane things go, at a fuel cost no greater than he would have had to incur for coal.

"This is taking no credit for the coal and ash handling and curtain washing and house cleaning which he and his good wife would have had to do if they burned coal."

A half bushel of Michigan grown wheat, entered by G. P. Phillips of Bellevue, won the wheat championship at the Central States Exposition held at Aurora, Illinois, early in September, according to H. C. Rather of M. S. C. Berkely Rock is semi-hard wheat developed by the M. S. C. It has splendid milling quality and is practically immune from smuts.

Corn Borer Threatens Destruction of Crop

From authorities at Lansing we received last week the following orders relative to restrictions to be placed upon the European Corn Borer which is peppering the whole area of Southern Michigan. This pest is becoming rapidly more destructive and is noticeable in several of the counties along the border particularly Hillsdale and Lenawee.

All corn stalks, remnants of stalks and cobs of each year's crop in fields, buildings, stacks or elsewhere, if not fed, made into silage or shredded, shall be destroyed by burning or by plowing under completely or by a combination of burning and plowing, before May 15th of the following year. Where corn is fed from the shock, remnants must be disposed of by burning.

Corn fields or premises not properly cleaned by May 15th may be cleaned at the discretion of the Commissioner of Agriculture and a charge made against the owner for the same.

Definitions: For the purpose of this regulation, corn stalks refer to the whole stalks or high stubble left standing in the field, or the portion of the stalks removed by cutting.

Stubble two inches or less in height complies with requirements of regulation.

Burning is interpreted to mean destruction with sufficient heat to destroy corn borer larvae.

Plowing under completely, means leaving no debris on the surface whatever

Cultivation after plowing that drags debris to the surface or the discing of stalks or high stubble does not meet the requirements of the regulations.

Recommendations; Early and low cutting is strongly urged and recommended, as by so doing, the largest number of borers possible is removed from the field. All corn growers are advised to equip themselves with corn binders and all owners of corn binders are advised to equip their machines with low cutting devices now available.

Low cutting is especially necessary in fields which are to be seeded to grain as high stubble contains many borers and practically no suppression is accomplished.

Hogging down corn and allowing stalks to remain in the fields over winter as a practice is condemned as they make clean plowing difficult.

Clock Could Do Most Everything But Talk

A clock that showed the motions of the sun, marked the years and some historical events was completed by Felix Meyer of New York in 1880 after ten years' work and experimenting. It showed local time, the hours, minutes and seconds, the days of the weeks and months, the seasons, the signs of zodiac, the revolution of the earth around the sun and the phases of the moon. It showed the difference in time at Washington, San Francisco, Chicago, Cairo, Melbourne, Constantinople, Peking, Berlin, Vienna and St. Petersburg (Leningrad). A child struck the quarter hour, a youth the half hour, an old man the three quarters and death the hour; while Washington rose from his seat and extending his right hand, presented the Declaration of Independence, a servant entered the door and all the Presidents of the United States entered and saluted Washington and passed out through another door.

Those who crave summer weather and are desolate during the long winter months, are warned to get out the red flannels. Thursday was the last day of summer.

At exactly 2.27 p. m. Thursday, the sun hovered over the equator on its way from the northern to the southern side. Although flowers may bloom and the atmosphere be warm and balmy it is now autumn —the astronomers say so. Thursday marked the autumnal equinox. That autumn is at last here and winter is fast approaching, is seen in the turning of the leaves—the fading of the summer green and the blending of many colors.

THE FILM LIBRARY

The Government is planning erecting a building at Washington for the secret and other archives of all the prominent doings in the Nation. This is probably the most unique idea that has ever been put forth by any government. Within this building will be prepared a department where films of all great events will be preserved carefully we suppose in air-tight containers and possibly two hundred years hence the citizens may see how every public affair such as an inaugural or a state wedding were carried out. The President thinks this will be one of the most important matters yet proposed in Washington. Already there are several thousand of such films on hand and include such subjects as the second inauguration of President McKinley, and all of the inaugurations since, the burial of the unknown soldier in Washington, signing of the armistice, etc. and it is even planned to show some other films of less moral worth. If the science of filmdom had been known in Civil war days what an oviation it would have been to witness the Gettsburg address of Abe Lincoln or the death bed scene or the return of the victorious soldiers from the south, or the returning prisoner who had been starved and maltreated in vile southern dens where worms were not spurned for food and dead were carried out like cord wood.

Unfortunately this is not possible but it is possible to record the doings of the day in a form well-nigh imperishable—to be reshown centuries hence to audiences who no doubt would be as strange to us and we would be to them.

It is suggested to include some of the worthy plays such as "The Covered Wagon", "The Iron Horse" and others of that nature. The first motion picture ever shown publicly, a girl giving the serpentine dance, probably will be included as will the first movie thriller, "The Great Train Robbery".

While reciting some of the historic events that have been recorded by the motion picture and considering their value to posterity.

Atomizer Fuel Jet Is Aid In Engine Starting

An automobile engine starts quicker and with much less fuel if an atomizing fuel jet is used instead of the ordinary carbureter jet as shown by engine starting experiments made recently at the Bureau of Standards.

In the tests an ordinary throat spray was used for atomizing the fuel, air under slight pressure being passed through a small orifice in the center of which was located a small fuel jet. The fuel was discharge dvertically and in the direction of the air flow, but some experiments were made in which the jet discharged in the opposite direction to the air flow and even under these conditions the atomizer gave distinctly superior starting.

The quicker starting with the finely atomized fuel probably is due to a more complete diffusion of the fuel in the fuel-air mixture, which produces a charge of more uniform quality. With the atomizing jet the sound of the first explosion is very faint and at times almost inaudible. With a uniform mixture, when the fuel content of the charge at the spark plug is just sufficient for the charge to be fired, the mixture throughout the cylinder is equally lean. On the other hand, if the mixture is not uniform, as is the case with the ordinary jet, the average fuel content required for ignition is higher, as the mixture must be richer in other parts of the cylinder in order to have a sufficiently rich mixture at the spark plug, and the first explosion is correspondingly stronger

These tests indicate that better atomization of the fuel at engine cranking speeds will facilitate starting and save fuel.

Packard Engines Win

Packard superiority in marine motors was again demonstrated at the recent Detroit Motor Boat Regatta. Racing under the worst conditions that have ever prevailed during a motor-boat championship race, the boats powered with Packard-made motors proved their endurance and swept on to victory. Only two boats finished the 150-mile sweepstake race for displacement boats. The event is designed especially to test the enduring qualities of the motors and the unseaworthiness of the hulls of the entrants. It is not open to the hydroplane type which skims over the surface of the water. Choppy seas racked the motors, loosening them from their stays and doing great damage to the hulls.

"Rowdy" owned by C. G. Fisher, Miami sportsmen and using a 600-horsewer Packard marine motor outclassed the others and took the trophy. This boat was not forced to stop at any time due to mechanical trouble, an unusual feat when the unfavorable circumstances of the course are continued. Another Packard-motored boat, the "Rascal" was the only other one to complete the race.

Michigan Is Dry

The growing suspicion in some localities that Michigan is swinging back into the wet column was dissipated in the recent primary, when Congressman Grant M. Hudson was re-nominated by an overwhelming majority over Rep. Pengally of Flint, who had the endorsement and active assistance of the wets. Hudson's victory is all the more emphatic when it is known that his district embraces the large industrial city of Flint, as well as several townships in Wayne county. Another indication that the state is still in the dry column, is seen in the record run made by Luren D. Dickinson for lieutenant governor. By common consent Dickinson has for years represented the bone dry vote in Michigan, and the fact that he was nominated over Welsh and Riopelle, who had wet support, without even making a campaign for the office, shows the preponderence of dry sentiment that exists in the state, especially in the rural sections.

Bumpers For Trains

Twice within recent weeks news dispatches have carried the story of careless Michigan motorists who drove their cars into the side of moving trains, and it begins to look as if something should be done for protection of railroad trains at grade crossings. According to figures gathered by the New York Central, 22 per cent of grade crossing accidents are caused by autos running into the sides of moving trains.

Motorists show a calous disregard for the rights of rail stockholders—many of them widows and orphans living on meager estates —whose money is tied up in rolling stocks dented and marred by vicious motor cars. Sometimes they plow right into the side of the locomotive, tangling their radiators and front bumpers with the driving wheels of the engine; sometimes they wait for the middle of the train and charge full tilt, as happened once in Jonesville. It constitutes on the part of the autoist a disregard for property rights must pain the observant.

Clearly, a railroad is entitled to immunity from such an attack. It has a right to run where it does, and is seldom guilty of dangerous or unlawful speeding. To permit motorists to run into a train whenever they see a good chance is unfair. It's like "hittin" a poor kid. If there is no other remedy we shall be obliged to equip locomotives with side cow catchers and railroads with non-kinkable bumpers. If trains at grade crossings cannot take care of themselves a paternalistic government will have to act.

NUNS WORK IN MANY FIELDS

Teach, Care for Sick and Conduct Homes for Young and Aged

Almost 1,000 Nuns, members of 12 different religious orders of women, are engaged in teaching approximately 70,000 children in the parochial schools of Detroit, according to figures compiled in a recent survey of the diocese. In all, 22 orders of women are represented in the city and 12 orders of men.

The work accomplished by these religious is of a widely variegated nature. In addition to teaching, the nuns conduct hospitals, orphanages, homes for the aged, a refuge for penitent women and monasteries of perpetual devotion where prayers for the welfare of the world are recited unceasingly.

The first hospital in Michigan was founded by Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul and its site was recently marked with a bronze tablet by the Detroit Historical commission. Today the Sisters of Charity have two flourishing hospitals in Detroit, St. Mary's and Providence.

Another large Detroit hospital conducted by religious is St. Joseph's Mercy, which is operated by the Sisters of Mercy, of Dubuque, Iowa. Coming to this city several years ago, the sisters have enlarged their plant until it is now recognized as the leading hospital on the east side of the city.

The Good Shepherd Sisters, a strictly cloistered order, conduct an orphan asylum and refuge for penitents which is one of the largest and best equipped of its kind in the country. Another large institution is St. Francis Home for Boys where 450 orphan boys are cared for by Sisters of St. Joseph. Henry Ford aided these sisters in obtaining their present ideal holdings on Fenkell avenue.

Perpetual adoration of the Blessed Sacrament is maintained by 42 Sisters of the Second Order of St. Dominic, while the Divine Office is chanted every day by the Carmelite Sisters and the Good Shepherd Sisters. All of these orders are strictly cloistered and the members support their foundations by the sale of fine needlework which finds a ready market.

Over 200 aged people of every creed are cared for in the Home for the Aged Poor, which is conducted by 17 Little Sisters of the Poor. It is a rule of these sisters that their charges must be treated as guests and the sisters never eat until the last inmate of the home has enjoyed his or her fill of whatever the larder provides. A similiar work is carried on by the Carmelite Sisters of the Divine Heart of Jesus, who have charge of 28 old persons.

Orphan asylums for girls are conducted by the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul and by the Felician Sisters, the latter sometimes called the Polish Franciscans.

The majority of the religious orders of men in Detroit are composed of priests who are engaged in parochial or missionary work. Three exceptions to this rule are the Christian Brothers, the Brothers of Mary and the Xaverian Brothers, who are devoting themselves to the education of boys and young men. The Jesuit Fathers conduct the University of Detroit in addition to having charge of the Gesu church and SS. Peter and Paul's church, the latter one of the oldest Catholic edifices in the city.

Engaged in parochial work are members of the Basilians, Holy Ghost Fathers, Franciscans, Fathers of the Precious Blood, Redemptorists and Augustinians. The Capuchin Fathers, a branch of the Franciscan Order, have their theological seminary in Detroit while the Religious Missionaries of Mariannhill, a congregation devoted to work in Africa, also maintains a novitiate in the city.

BISHOP GALLAGHER ATTENDS MEETING IN WASHINGTON

The annual meeting of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, which will be attended by the members of the hierarchy of the United States, was recently held in Washington, D. C. The N. C. W. C. is an outgrowth of the wartime activities of the Catholic Church and its purpose is to unify, co-ordinate and organize the Catholics of the U. S. in works of education, social welfare, immigrant aid, Americanization and other activities. The conference was attended by the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., bishop of Detroit.

Two bishops, a dozen monsignori and virtually every priest in southern Michigan gathered in the Holy Cross Roman Catholic church at Marine City, Sept. 16, for the twenty-third annual conference of the Priest's Eucharistic League of the Diocese of Detroit.

The Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of Detroit, pontificated at a solemn high mass. Speakers at the conference were the Rev. F. Dekoske, the Rev. V. Keinberger, O. P., and the Rev. Cornelius Bates.

The cornerstone of the Little Flower chapel, an auxiliary to SS. Peter and Paul's Cathedral, Detroit, will be laid on Oct. 1, the feast day of St. Therese, by the Rt. Michael J. Gallagher. D. D.

Bankers and business men of the leading towns of Taylor county, Texas, employed a county agent last spring, and requested that he vigorously promote boys' and girls' club activities. As a result of his work over 300 club members were enrolled. Work is being concentrated this year on poultry culling and grain sorghum seed selection. This fall there will be exhibits and contests, for which the business men are contributing generous prizes.

FEELING LOTS BETTER NOW

Writes Ethel May Snider Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Hartford City, Ind.—Doing housework and taking care of a sick woman proved to be too much for Ethel May Snider, R. R. 1 of Hartford City, until she started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Overwork had so undermined her health that she had to give up all outside work, and when she saw this medicine advertised in the "Star" and other papers, she went to druggist and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She took it regularly, was greatly benefited and now feels very much better.

Ethel May Snider's experience is similar to that of thousands of other women in all walks of life, who have sent testimonials to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass.

Among those who praise the Compound are young girls who have been enabled to attend school regularly—working girls who have gained strength and endurance so necessary to them, housewives and mothers who have found that the tonic-effect of the Compound has enabled them to perform their daily tasks more easily.

Educational Argument

In the rural districts of England, where children have always gone to work in the fields, compulsory education is looked upon with a good deal of disfavor. The Argonaut says that during an election a candidate for parliamentary honors was addressing a meeting of Yorkshire men when he was interrupted by a man who asked:

"Art in favor o childer goin' t' school, till they be sixteen?"

"Certainly I am," said the speaker.

"Well, 'm not," was the emphatic answer. "I'm noone goin' to 'ave my lad coomin' whoam fro' t'school an' axin' me for money for a shave."—Youth's Companion.

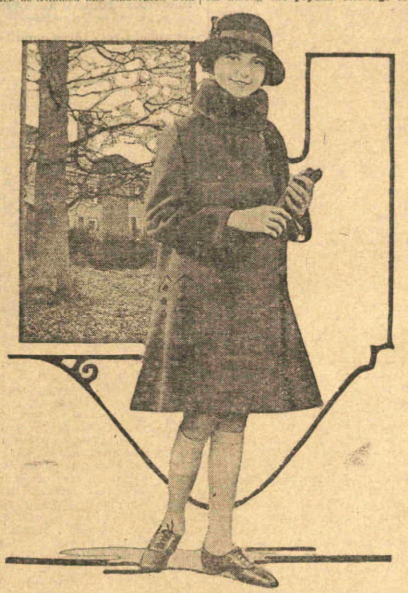
TOPCOATS FOR SCHOOLGIRLS; SCHOOL FROCKS OF JERSEY

IN THE realm of junior fashions, coats tell a very different story from frocks for the coming months. In accordance with latest dictates the wraps young girls wear are quite conservative and sedate in appearance, while dresses are quite fussed up with all sorts of crafty handwork and gay trimmings.

If the little girl in the picture would let us catch a glimpse of the frock she is wearing, it would, very likely, be much be-trimmed and elaborated with cunning detail, perhaps have a clever narrow belt with a cunning buckle 'n' everything—but mark the simplicity and styling of the coat. Of the superior quality kind is this coat. The material is of the best, being a handsome bolivia cloth. It may be navy, wine, French blue, brown or jungle green, for each is fashionable for fall and winter. One outstanding feature is the flare hemline, achieved by godets inset in a tailored way. Other interesting style highlights are its fur collar, broad turnback cuffs and single button fastening.



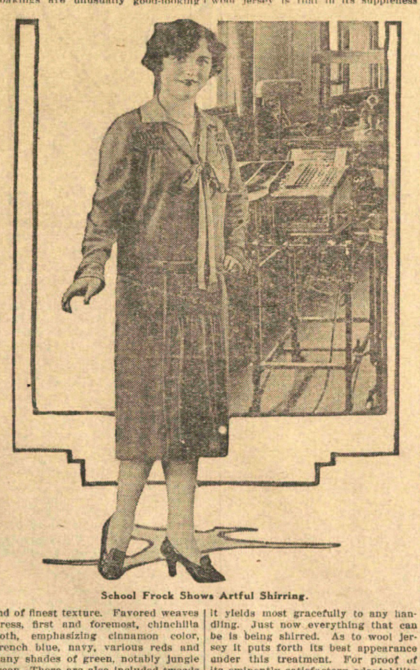
A Natty Topcoat for School.

It is a noteworthy fact that the new cloakings are unusually good-looking and of finest texture. Favored weaves stress, first and foremost, chinchilla cloth, emphasizing cinnamon color, French blue, navy, various reds and many shades of green, notably jungle green. There are also included tweeds of every coloring.

Very interesting linings of suede-finished fabrics complement coats of chinchilla. Thus warmth and attractiveness is combined in the schoolgirl's coat. One does not have to draw on imagination to sense the charm of a navy blue chinchilla lined with red.

Splashes of color will brighten school room and campus throughout the coming months, also the highways and byways of business life. All this, because fashion insists that whether it be in study hour, playtime or any practical occasion, we must dress in gay woolens.

Just now there is a furore for wool jersey and not without reason, for of all materials none gives better service or makes up more satisfactorily. So jersey cloth it is, according to the decision of the mode, and that in colors of irresistible attractiveness. Chiefest among the popular colorings for practical worsted frocks are reds of every degree, especially chanel red and the deep wine tones. Equally fascinating are the new greens, placing emphasis on jungle green, and as to blues, navy competes with truly lovely French blues, also royal. Cinnamon color jersey is as smart as smart can be, but no more so than are the handsome nasturtium colors which are now so much in evidence. Which all goes to prove that there will be no lack of color when it comes to dresses planned for practical every-day wear.



School Frock Shows Artful Shirring.

One of the endearing qualities of wool jersey is that in its suppleness it yields most gracefully to any handling. Just now everything that can be is being shirred. As to wool jersey it puts forth its best appearance under this treatment. For proof of its eminently satisfactory adaptability to the shirring process, study this picture of a typical autumn 1926 schoolgirl frock. See how the necessary skirt fullness is massed so cleverly to the front by means of much shirring. Then, too, see the shirred effect across the front shoulder seams. This model is developed in wine color with a beige crepe collar and tie.

Voile Frocks for Girls

Dainty little handmade frocks of voile for the younger girl have come from Paris. The colors are youthful and charming, including all the flower shades and several more vivid. Bits of drawnwork and handwork constitute the decoration. They are simple in line and beautifully made.

Black and Pink

Filmy frocks of black chiffon and lace are worn over slips of pink satin or chiffon.

Black, Fall Favorite

Black is easily first among colors which make their appearance in the styles of the autumn and winter, on the basis of the fashion displays in Paris. Navy blue apparently will be second and a new shade of dark red third. Velvet, it is generally predicted, will be the favorite material, with kasha second.

As White Is Worn

White is popular when worn with contrasting colors, never alone.

Turn on the Cold

Cold distributed on the same general principle as heat is an innovation of the newer apartment dwellings in some of the large cities. Instead of installing bulky machinery in individual apartments for iceless refrigeration purposes, one central machine is used in the basement, just as one furnace or boiler is used. From this central plant the individual apartment housewife can control the cold in her iceless refrigerator, turning it on or off as simply as she regulates a radiator.

IRISHMAN RULES ON "ISLAND OF WOMEN"

Former Rail Worker Worshiped by Subjects.

"The Island of Women," in the South seas, is one of the strangest of all monarchies. Its inhabitants comprise few men and many women, so that the native women constantly are involved in a struggle to win husbands, making polygamy expedient.

The monarch is an Irishman, possessed of a long red beard and a name typical of his ancestral country—Michael O'Shaughnessy, says Robert Dean Frisbie in Wide World.

"King Mike," as he is widely known, was a section hand on the Southern Pacific railway in California when his attention was attracted by a picture in a newspaper of a beautiful South Sea island girl and he embarked for Papeete.

O'Shaughnessy had heard of the mysterious Island of Women where men are so few that they are worshiped by the women, and he made it his objective when later he left Tahiti aboard a small trading schooner.

Ships engaged in trading in the South Pacific seldom visit the Island of Women and those that do put into the deep-locked lagoon which serves as the island's port seldom leave for some time. Life for the sailors is easy and luxurious and it is infrequent that the captains of such vessels do not have to resort to trickery to lure members of their crews away from the native women, who idolize all men.

O'Shaughnessy was the second white man to take up his home on the Island of Women, the first having been a veteran of the World war who went there on a trading ship he had boarded without knowing its destination.

The future King Mike went to the island with a determination to become its monarch, but little did he surmise that it would be his bright red beard which would cause the old native king to abdicate in his favor. The women were deeply impressed by the young American's beard and they came to regard him as being a sort of a deity.

"I found Mike in his luxurious town palace (he also has a simple little villa up one of the valleys, and a more pretentious bamboo abode on the cliffs)," says Mr. Frisbie reviewing his visit.

"Greatness, it appeared, had been thrust upon him. When the people heard his full baritone voice, saw him dance an Irish jig, and felt the red bristles on his broad chin, he was accepted as a superman and regarded as the equal of the native king. But when he took unto himself six wives and later as he became familiar with the language, preached the doctrine of polygamy as he saw it, the old king abdicated and Mike ascended to the throne."

Valuable Dust

A fan effectively collects the filings and grindings in a shop where valuable metals are worked, and saves the portion usually lost in the cracks in the floor. The electric motor and controller operate the grinding wheel. At the left is a small motor-operated exhaust fan which draws the particles into a funnel-shaped opening, placed as near the work as possible. This discharges into a sack on the floor.

The simplicity of this arrangement and the savings resulting from its use recommend it highly wherever precious or semi-precious metals are worked.

Most jewelers do not heed the arrangement because the saving would be too small, but manufacturers have found the investment paid beyond all expectations.

Horse Still Holds Place

The American horse was for 200 years the sole means of inland travel and the great essential to all business in and between the various colonies made him a driving horse and none of the inventions of modern times, from the introduction of railroads to bicycles and horseless vehicles generally, has affected his popularity or his value. To the superficial observer it would appear as if improved means of vehicular transport would diminish the breeding of horses as well as decrease their value, but thus far such has not been the case. Good horses have a higher value than ever, and as the demand for cheap or poorly bred horses diminishes, the better bred ones survive.

Bones of Prehistoric Men

Interesting discoveries of the remains of prehistoric men are being made on Dunstable downs in one of the mounds known as the Five Knolls.

The skeleton of a bronze age man associated with a cremation burial was found near the surface of the mound. Subsequently traces of two further cremations and parts of four more skeletons were discovered. Eleven in all, some of them 3,000 years old, have now been unearthed.—London Tit-Bits.

Tides Cause Volcanoes?

An interesting solution of the mystery of volcanic eruptions has just been offered by William Bowie of the United States coast and geodetic survey. He advances the theory, says Popular Science Monthly, that volcanic outbursts may be due directly to the pressure of the tides, which twist and wring the earth. The tides, he adds, may also have an influence in building mountains.

Irrigation Useful for Apple Disease

Picking Fruit at Right Time Also Is Big Help.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Water core, a serious disease of apples occurring in practically every important apple-growing section of the world, may be reduced considerably by liberal irrigation and by picking the fruit at the proper maturity, according to Dr. Charles Brooks, pathologist of the United States Department of Agriculture. Six years of investigation have served to show that, contrary to the prevailing opinion, the disease occurs when the supply of water in the soil is inadequate rather than when it is excessive. The real cause of the trouble, however, is in connection with high temperatures, intense sunlight, and the accompanying high sap concentration in the fruit.

The watery or glassy appearance of the flesh of the apple, a characteristic distinguishing water core from all other apple diseases, is due to the filling of the intercellular spaces with cell sap instead of air. When water is not available in sufficient quantity high temperatures and intense sunlight cause the sap in the fruit to concentrate and exert enormous pressure on the cell tissues to a point where they break down. In irrigated regions experiments showed that apples from heavily irrigated trees developed less water core than those from lightly irrigated trees. Also less water core developed when light irrigation was followed by heavy irrigation than when the practice was reversed.

Picking at the proper stage of maturity is the most practicable preventive now known for the trouble, especially in the nonirrigated regions. The study showed that water core might increase as much as 90 per cent in 10 days after the proper time for picking.

Tests Show Best Means of Inoculating Legumes

Pure cultures of legume bacteria grown on artificial or laboratory media have been found superior to soil for inoculating legumes, when judged by the number of nodules obtained per plant, according to results of experiments made by investigators at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. When the same legume is grown a second time in the same field, good nodule development is secured both from pure cultures and from soil. These findings have been made in studies of the factors influencing the inoculation of soy beans. The effectiveness of either method of inoculation is decreased by failure to sow the seed soon after inoculation. To give the best results, bacteria should be applied to the seed within twenty-four hours of the time at which the sowing is done.

Illinois Trying to Get Improved Types of Oats

Seventeen crosses between different varieties and strains of oats are being studied by plant breeders in the experiment station of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, in an effort to get improved types of oats. These crosses involve several different characters, such as black and white grain color, presence and absence of awns, and presence and absence of ligules. An attempt is being made to combine high yield and good quality with other desirable characters.

Best Breed of Chickens

In starting out in the poultry business, it is best to start out with a well established breed because they are more likely to breed true to type and color than the newer breeds and there is also more of a demand for hatching eggs and breeding stock from the old established breeds than from the novelty. Of course, each individual has some preferences as to color and type, which should not be overlooked.

STATE DEVELOPS BIG INDUSTRIES

Explanation of the enormous volume of corporate financing requirements which have been imposed upon the financial institutions of Michigan in recent years is given in a report from the secretary of state's office at Lansing.

The report reveals that since 1921 there have been something like 6,250 new corporations authorized to do business in this state. This is significant in view of the fact that there are now about 16,500 companies engaged in business in Michigan indicating that the state has developed her industrial power better than 60 per cent in five years. At the close of 1925 there were 13,839 corporations listed by the secretary of state's office, the present registration indicating a gain in eight months of 2,400 companies.

Huge capital accomulations have been involved in this great industrial development which is pushi Michigan well toward the front in the state's transition from agricultural to industrial eminence.

Among other things this industrial development of the state shows is the fact that Michigan-made products are in demand and winning their way to dominance, probably due to the fact that factories here are the mecca of skilled craftsmen and artisans because of high wages and the contentment of labor.

Loss of Forests Would End State as Resort, Is Belief

"Michigan appeals to the resorters on account of its lakes, its streams, and it fishing," says Marcus Schaaf, state forester, "but all of these would lose their attraction if it were not for Michigan's forests."

Mr. Schaaf explains that all of these are dependent upon the forest, because it is the woods wheih provide cover for game, shade for streams, and have an appeal all their own for the man who would get out of doors. When the woods disappear, Mr. Schaaf says, the streams get hot and the fish become scarce. All game is naturally dependent upon cover, and as soon as the country becomes barren, the birds and wild life will go. When [illegible] think of reforestation, he says, these things are fully as important to Michigan, being a resort state, as the prospect of getting timber from our forests.

Mr. Schaaf is of the opinion that each town could promote its own forest, which would, in the course of time, become aluable as a recreation center. If the plot is larger, it could be used as a game refuge or bird sanctuary.

Blind Law Student Is Successful in Exams

Ned H. Smith, of Detroit, Michigan university's first blind student to graduate from the law college, was among those whose names were announced as successfully passing the state bar examination. He was graduated in June.

A tall, blonde chap of 25 years, Ned Smith has one great aversion—"sob stuff." Six years ago he might have wept over the tale of the blind man who conquered fame, but now he will have none of it.

While a junior student in Northern high school, Smith one evening walked from his home to that of a friend. The temperature was 13 degrees below zero. His eyes and part of his face were frozen, and for weeks he lay in torture. Medical skill failed to restore his sight.

Bolt Makes Hole in One But It Is Two Feet Deep

In a "hole in one" made by a bolt at the Duck Lake Golf club course at Albion, four men were dazed for several minutes and two of them were knocked to the ground by the crash. The lightning bolt dug a bolt two feet deep in one of the fairways.

AMNESIA IS LAID TO BROODING MIND

Are you a dreamer? Do you find yourself staring continually for beyond the hard facts and responsibilities of the everyday grind—the bills, the family difficulties, a desk piled high with work, the maddening sameness of a drab existence? And does your tired mind seek relief by shutting out the details of the actual world about you and by conjuring up visions of a life so different that there seems no hope of bringing it about?

If so—if you grow to hate what you are doing and become a painter of fantasies, in your heart shirking the responsibilitis which outwardly you shoulder—then some day, before you are aware of it, there is a chance that your weary nervous system may choose an astonishing way of taking a rest. In an instant you may lose your identity. Your humdrum life, your family, your friends, your memory of the past—all may be blotted out of your mind as completely as if they never had been. And you may wander away, counted as dead by the world you have known, to take your place as a new person in new surroundings.

Months or even years later you may "come to." In a flash all the memories of the first life may return, and you may awake again to your old personality.

Such is amnesia, one of the strangest and most baffling, yet one of the most interesting of all mental pranks known to man. It is defined simply as "loss of memory."

Railroad on Block Under Hammer on Silver Anniversary

In few instances can changes wrought by a quarter of a century be more accurately recorded than in the history of the Grand Rapids, Holland anad Chicago railway, which was ordered sold at auction by Kirk E. Wicks, master in chancery of district court at Grand Rapids. The sale later was postponed until the latter part of the month. For it was 25 year ago that the first car was run over the completed tracks of the Grand Rapids, Holland and Lake Michigan Rapid Railway company, its forerunner.

Then the driving of the last spike in the ties, at Jamestown, and the initial trip, when the officials, headed by Vice President Benjamin S. Hanchett, were justly jubilant, was an event heralded in a manner befitting the new era which was being ushered in.

For it meant to Grand Rapids the opening up and contact with sprightly villages and rich farming territory, and to the farmers it meant ready markets. Holland, growing city, was no longer remote from Grand Rapids, and took pride in the possession of an asset the eclipse of which was beyond the imagination.

Ring Smuggling $1,000 in Dope Weekly Is Nipped

Operations ofan organized dope distributing gang, which, it is estimated, has been smuggling as much as $1,000 a week in naecotics to prisoners in the Wayne county jail, were believed brought to an end with the arrest of a woman, said to be the ringleader, and the discovery of its operatives among the inmates.

The woman is said to have been the source of supply for the enormous quantity of dope which has been flooding the jail for some time.

Woman Is Injured by Car Saving Babe From Death

Mrs. Bert Fountain was seriously hurt at Big Rapids, when she was run over by an automobile while trying to save her infant son from being killed. Mr. and Mrs. Fountain were driving out of a yard when the door of their car came open and the little boy fell out into the road in front of an approaching car. The mother leaped to grab her boy and both were run over. The boy was uninjured.

165 Varieties of Flowers Bloom in Holland Park

John Van Bragt, superintendent of parks at Holland, has counted 165 different varieties of plants and flowers in Centennial park, Holland's most beautiful city garden.

The leading plants and flowers include tulips, salvia, cannas, petunias, larkspur, begonias and roses. There are palms, ferns and water lillies also.

Ambergris is an ash-colored waxy substances found floating on seas frequented by sperm whales, supposed to be an internal secretion of those animals. It is used in certain fragrant drugs and ointments and is worth twice its weight in gold.

A SCANDAL IN BOHEMIA

By A. CONAN DOYLE

"He can't lie in the street. May we bring him in, marm?"

"Surely. Bring him into the sitting room. Ther is a comfortable sofa. This way, please." Slowly and solemnly he was borne into Briony Lodge, and laid out in the principal room, while I still observed the proceedings from my post by the window. The lamps had been lighted, bu the blinds had not been drawn, so that I could see Holmes as he lay upon the couch. I do not know whether he was seized with compunction at that moment for the part he was playing, but I know that I never felt more heartily ashamed of myself in my life than when I saw the beautiful creature against whom I was conspiring, or the grace and kindliness with which she waited upon the injured man. And yet it would be the blackest treachery to Holmes to draw back now from the part which he had instrusted to me. I hardened my heart, and took the smoke-rocket from under my ulster. After all, I though, we are not injuring her. We are but preventing her from injuring another.

Holmes had sat upon the couch, and I saw him motion like a man who is in need of air. A maid rushed across and threw open the window. At the same instant I saw him raise his hand, and at the signal I tossed my rocket into the room with a cry of "Fire!" The word was no sooner out of my mouth than the whole crowd of spectators, well dressed and ill — gentlemen, hostlers, and severant maids—joined in a general shriek of "Fire!" Thick clouds of smoke curled through the room, and out at the open window. I caught a glimpse of rushing figures, and a moment later the voice of Holmes from within assuring them that it was a false alarm. Slipping through the shouting crowd, I made my way to the corner of the street, and in ten minutes was rejoiced to find my friend's arm in mine, and to get away from the scene of uproar. He walked swiftly and in silence for some few minutes, until we had turned down one of the quiet streets which led toward the Edgeware Road.

"You did it very nicely, doctor," he remarked. "Nothing could have been better. It is all right."

"You have the photograph?"

"I know where it is."

"And how did you find out?"

"She showed me, as I told you that she would."

"I am still in the dark."

"I do not wish to make a mystery," said he, laughing. "The matter was perfectly simple. You, of course, saw that everyone in the street was an accomplice. They were all engaged for the evening."

"I guessed as much."

"Then, when the row broke out, I had a little moist red paint in the palm of my hand. I rushed forward, fell down, clapped my hand to my face and became a piteous spectacle. It is an old trick."

"That also I could fathom."

"Then they carried me in. She was bound to have me in. What else could she do? And into her sitting room, which was the very room which I suspected. It lay between that and her bedroom, and I was determined to see which. They laid me on a couch, I motioned for air, they were compelled to open the window, and you had your chance."

"How did that help you?"

"It was all-important. When a woman thinks that her house is on fire her instinct is at once to rush to the thing which she values most. It is a perfectly overpowering impulse, and I have more than once taken advantage of it. In the case of the Darlignton Substitution Scandal it was of use to me, and also in the Arnsworth Castle business. A married woman grabs at her baby—an unmarried one reaches for her jewel box. Now it was clear to me that our lady of today had nothing in the house more precious to her than what we are in quest of. She would rush to secure it. The alarm of fire was admirably done. The smoke and shouting were enough to shake nerves of steel. She responded beautifully. The photograph is in a recess behind a sliding panel just above the bell-pull. She was there in an instant, and I caught a glimpse of it as she drew it out. When I cried out that it was a false alarm, she replaced it, glanced at the rocket rushed from the room, and I have not seen her since. I arose, and, making my excuses, escaped from the house. I hesitated whether to attempt to secure the photograph at once; but the coachman had come in, and as he was watching me narrowly, it seemed safer to wait. A little over-precipitance may ruin all."

"And now?" I asked.

"Our quest is practically finished. I shall call with the king tomorrow, and with you, if you care to come with us. We will be shown into the sitting room to wait for the lady, but it is probable that when she comes she may find neither us nor the photograph. It might be a satisfaction to his majesty to regain it with his own hands."

"And when will you call?"

"At eight in the morning. She will not be up, so that we shall have a clear field. Besides, we must be prompt for this marriage may mean a complete change in her life and habits. I must wire to the king without delay."

We had reached Baker Street, and had stopped at the door. He was searching his pockets for the key, when some one passing said:

"Good night, Mister Sherlock Holmes?"

There were several people on the pavement at the time, but the greeting appared to come from a slim youth in an ulster who had hurried by.

"I've heard that voice before," said Holmes, staring down the dimly lighted street. "Now, I wonder who the deuce that could have been?"

III

I slept at Baker Street that night, and we were engaged upon our toast and coffee in the morning when the King of Bohemia rushed into the room.

"You have really got it?" he cried, grasping Sherlock Holmes by either shoulder, and looking eagerly into his face.

"Not yet."

"But you have hopes?"

"I have hopes."

"Then come. I am all impatience to be gone."

"We must have a cab."

"No, my brougham is waiting."

"Then that will simplify matters." We descended, and started off once more for Briony Lodge.

"Irene Adler is married," remarked Holmes.

"Married! When?"

"Yesterday."

"But to whom?"

"To an English lawyer named Norton."

"But she could not love him."

"I am in hopes that she does."

"And why in hopes?"

"Because it would spare your majesty of all fear of future annoyance. If the lady loves her husband, she does not love your majesty. If she does not love your majesty, there is no reason why she should interfere with your majesty's plan."

"It is true. And yet— Well, I wish she had been of my own station. What a queen she would have made!" He relapsed into a moody silence, which was not broken until we drew up in Serpentine Avenue.

The door of Briony Lodge was open, and an elderly woman stood upon the steps. She watched us with a sardonic eye as we stepped from the brougham.

"Mr. Sherlock Holmes, I believe?" said she.

"I am Mr. Holmes," answered my companion, looking at her with a questioning and rather startled gaze.

"Indeed! My mistress told me that you were likely to call. She left this morning, with her husband, by the 5:15 train from Charing Cross for the Continent."

"What!" Sherlock Holmes staggered back, white with chagrin and surprise. "Do you mean that she has left England?"

"Never to return."

"And the papers," asked the king hoarsely. "All is lost!"

"We shall see." He pushed past the servant, and rushed into the drawing room, followed by the king and myself. The furniture was scattered about in every direction, with dismantled shelves, and open drewers, as if the lady had hurriedly ransacked them before her flight. Holmes rushed at the bell-pull, tore back a small sliding shutter, and plunging his in his hand, pulled out a photograph and a letter. The photograph was of Irene Adler and herself in evening dress; the letter was superscribed to "Sherlock Holmes, Esq. To be left until called for." My friend tore it open and we all three read it together. It was dated at midnight of the preceding night, and ran in this way:

"My Dear Mr. Sherlock Holmes— You really did it very well. You took me in completely. Until after the alarm of fire, I had not a suspicion. But then, when I found how I had betrayed myself, I began to think. I had been warned against you months ago. I had been told that if the king employed an agent, it would certainly be you. And your address had been given me. Yet, with all this, you made me reveal what you wanted to know. Even after I had become suspicious, I found it hard to think evil of such a dear, kind old clergyman. But, you know, I have been trained as an actress myself. Male costume is nothing new to me. I often take advantage of the freedom which it gives. I sent John, the coachman, to watch you, ran upstairs, got into my walking clothes, as I call them, and came down just as you departed.

"Well, I followed you to the door, and so made sure that I was really an object of interest to the celebrated Mr. Sherlock Holmes. Then I, rather imprudently, wished you good night, and started for the Temple to see my husband.

"We both thought the best resource was flight when pursued by so formidable an antagonist; so you will find the nest empty when you call tomorrow. As to the protograph, your client my rest in peace. Ilove and am loved by a better man than he. The king may do what he will without hindrance from one whom he has cruelly wronged. I keep it only to safeguard myself, and preserve a weapon which will always secure me from any steps which he might take in the future. I leave a photograph which he might care to possess; and I remain, dear Mr. Sherlock Holmes, very truly yours,

" IRENE NORTON, nee ADLER."

"What a woman—oh, what a woman!" cried the king of Bohemia, when we had all three read this epistle. "Did I not tell you how quick and resolute she was? Would she not have made an admirable queen? Is it not a pity that she was not on my level?"

"From what I have seen of the lady, she seems indeed to be on a very level to your majesty," said Holmes coldly. "I am sorry that I have not been able to bring your majesty's business to a more successful conclusion."

"On the contrary, my dear sir," cried the king, "nothing could be more successful. I know that her word is inviolate. The photograph is now as safe as if it were in the fire."

"I am glad to hear your majesty say so."

"I am immensely indebted to you. Pray tell me in what way I can reward you. This ring—" He slipped an emerald snake ring from his finger, and held it out upon the palm of his hand.

"Your majesty has something which I should value even more highly," said Holmes.

"You have but to name it."

"This photograph!"

The king stared at him in amazement.

"Irene's photograph!" he cried. "Certainly, if you wish it."

"I thank your majesty. Then there is no more to be done in the matter. I have the honor to wish you a very good morning." He bowed, and turn ing away without observing the hand which the king had stretched out to him, he set off in my company for his chambers.

And that was how a great scandal threatened to affect the kingdom of Bohemia, and how the best plans of Mr. Sherlock Holmes were beaten by a woman's wit He used to make merry over the cleverness of women, but I have not heard him do it of late. And when he speaks of Irene Adler, or when he refers to her photograph, it is always under the honorable title of the woman.

THE END.

Collection of Great Pianist's Letters on Display in Detroit

An unusual collection of Chopin letters and original manuscripts, practically priceless in value because of the difficulty to obtain them, are on exhibition in the Music and Art department of the Detroit public library. The collection is loaned to the institution by Dr. and Mrs. Alex J. T. Kahonowicz. The exhibit will be left at the library for an indefinite period.

The collection includes several letters written to friends and business associates by the great pianist. They have been gathered from many sources and one of the chief regrets of the owner is that a large number of the choicest of the Chopin's papers and mementos have been placed beyond their reach, having fallen into the possession of Russians since the war.

Detroiter To Walk On Sea Bottom For Stake of $1,000

Dancing marathons, fasting contests, Charleston contests, and channel swimming contests, all have had their day and now comes — underwater walking contests.

Charles H. Yeager, of Detroit, makes reply to the challenge of K. Everets, deep sea diver, who plans to walk across the sea bottom at Hampton Roads, Va., and declared Sunday he would be willing to post $1,000 with any reputable person to guarantee he can outwalk Everts, given the proper environment—to wit, five fathoms of water and a nice sea bottom.

Yeager, who is 33 years old, has spent 17 years as a deep sea diver in the employ of the United States navy, and the past three years has been working as a diver on various river construction jobs around Detroit.

Yeager declared he used to work with Everts and knows his ability as a deep sea diver.

Football Season Finds Many State Teams Below Par

Football of the interscholastic variety will not be on a par with performances of last season if reports from the state schools after the first week of practice can be taken as a criterion.

From all sections of the state come the same reports—a crying need for experienced players. Like in most schools of the metropolitan area gradution played havoc with the veterans and as a result a majority of the coaches are now welding together teams with little or no experience.

Grand Rapids Union, Flint Central and Port Huron, the three teams deadlocked for the state championship last year, are about on a par again because of the loss of veterans. Lloyd Brazil, Herman Young and Jake Rice, who were placed on the all-state eleven a year ago, have enrolled at the University of Detroit and aside from the loss of these stalwarts Flint Central is to adopt a new system under the direction of Coach Marthmon, who formerly developed high class teams at Salt Lake East high.

The Grand Rapids team expects to develop a line averaging 185 pounds, something unusual in interscholastic football and on the ability of this line to come through depends the success of the team.

Five gaping holes in the unbeaten eleven of last year is the task confronting Coach Bennett at Port Huron.

While the work of these three teams is to be watch with interest, Battle Creek, Tnn Arbor and Jackson, three schools that always rate a high place are working without much ado in hope of regaining a place among the elite.

Seventy Civil War Vets Dead in Fenton Township

According to records kept by Perry Birdshall, 70 veterans of the Civil war have died in Fenton township up until the present time.

It does not seem so many years ago when almost every home was represented in the blue clad ranks that formed on the cillage streets and marched, each thirtieth day of May, to the cemetery, where fitting tribute was paid to their departed comrades.

QUEEN'S VISIT TO SWAY FASHIONS

In looking over the new sports clothes one is reminded of some big manly girl who has suddenly taken to a vanity case. Yes, there is no doubt about it! Our severe tailored clothes of yesteryear are become absolutely effeminate.

For one thing there are those mannish mixtures. Tweeds, homespuns, all that sort of thing, don't you know! Well, these are still featured, but the mannish mixture has experienced a great deal of fminine admixture. Whereas many garments designed for autumn sports wear are carried out in these robust materials, there is a greater emphasis on velvet, velveteen, and what are known roughly as "novelty woolens."

Now, these novelty woolens include variations of duvetyn and numerous flannel finished fabrics. The reason that the French have emphasized these is perhaps due to economic conditions.

Some of these jacket sports ensembles are developed in soft tweeds, but here again we find an invasion of the novelty wooln.

It's a short jump from the news of the day as we find it in our newspapers to the decrees of Dame Fashion.

One such event that has been heralded far and near is the proposed visit to this country of Queen Marie of Rumania.

And that's where Dame Fashion wakes up to her duty and starts to issue some new decrees.

Few Americans really know that she has a tremendous influence on styles because of her discriminating taste which makes her recognized as one of the most modishly garmented royal personages in the Old World.

We won't go far wrong when we prophesy that t he visit of the Queen of Rumania will be followed by a sweeping change in women's fashions.

Fall, it is longer a matter of discussion; it's here!

Skirts are a bit longer. And why not? Knee-lengths skirts are becoming to about as many girls as we can count on one hand; it's this new length, the length that comes three, four or five inches below the knees, depending upon one's height—that's the length that sacrifices not one whit of youthfulness at the expense of grace.

Evening frocks, especially the ones that show the trend of the higher waistline, have their skirts even longer. 'Twas inevitable, of course, that as soon as "skirts to the knees" had reached and permeated the small towns that the pendulum, that is, Paris, should swing us in the other direction, not to very long skirts, of course, because she knows it's no use to try that, but to gracefully short skirts.

SUPER-SENSITIVE, NON-CRITICAL DETECTOR TUBE ANNOUNCED

New Tube Consumes Quarter Ampere and Provides Vastly Increased Sensitivity and Volume in All Storage Battery Sets.

E. E. Bucner

NEW YORK.—A new detector tube, UX-200-A, which is described as super-sensitive, non-critical and economical in operation, and which will markedly increase the reception range of the average type of broadcast receiver, has made its introduction to radio set owners, experimenters and radio fans, according to an announcement made by Elmer E. Bucher of the Radio Corporation of America.

"This tube may be used in any existing receiver operating on a six-volt storage battery," said Mr. Bucher, "and it will provide vastly increased sensitivity as well as output volume, with no changes or critical adjustments of any kind."

"The UX-200-A Radiotron is the result of long and extensive study and development with the detection and rectification of radio frequency energy by the research engineers of the RCA's manufacturing associates, the General Electric Co. and the Westinghouse Co.," Mr. Bucher declares.

So far as physical dimensions and base are concerned, the new detector tube is similar to the well known UX-200 and UX-201-A tubes. However, the new detector tube has a characteristic appearance quite different from any other tube. Instead of a plain or silvered bulb, the UX-200-A has a bluish, smoky color due to the special gas content but incidentally serving as a means of identification.

High sensitivity has been the prime requisite in developing this new detector tube. While this has been achieved in a miraculous degree, neither the current consumption of the tube has been increased nor have the adjustments been made any more critical. The filament, which is of the XL type, requires only one-quarter of an ampere at a potential of 5 volts. The "B" battery potential usually recommended is 45 volts while a lower potential as in the case of the UX-201-A may be used with very little difference in results. A 10 ohm rheostat should be employed to regulate the filament current which would presumably be supplied by a 6 volt storage battery.

RADIOTRON
UX-200-A
New Super-Sensitive Detector Tube

"The UX-200-A tube has a greater sensitivity than any existing special detector tube," according to Mr. Bucher. It may be used in any receiver of the storage battery type without change or special adjustment.

The UX-200-A Radiotron answers the demand for a highly sensitive ultra-stable, storage battery detector tube so long desired by owners of storage-battery receivers who seek the utmost efficiency in broadcast reception. Actual tests with typical receivers indicate that UX-200-A provides an increase in volume nearly equal to an additional radio-frequency amplifier stage, without distortion or loss of tone quality. The sensitivity is likewise vastly increased.

Characteristics of UX-200-A Radiotron Detector

Design	Same as standard UX-201-A
Base	Same as standard UX-201-A
Filament Voltage	5
Filament Current	.25 ampere.
Plate Voltage	45 maximum
Plate Current	2 milliamperes
Plate Impedance	28,800 ohms.
Grid leak	2 megohms.
Grid Condenser	.00025 microfarad

Mr. Bucher pointed out that a detector having the efficiency of the new Radiotron UX-200-A was not essential to the operation of the Super-Heterodyne where the sensitivity with the ordinary form of detector tube goes to the limit of that which is practically usable; for it is well known that the Super-Heterodyne provides a high sensitivity level through its intermediate frequency stages which amplify at a single frequency of wavelength.

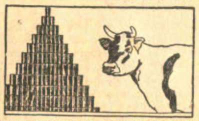
Purity of Milk Protected Now By Scientists

By KATHRYN ST. JOHN

Careful housewives constantly make it a point to ascertain the quality of each item that goes on their tables. Preparing food for the family is an extremely important job, for the proper selection and preparation of foods make in a large measure for the health and happiness of the family.

Milk is the most nearly perfect food, but it is a very delicate one as well. The keeping qualities of milk are slight. Danger from contamination is ever present. Evaporated milk, which is double rich because of the removal of 60 per cent of the water, is science's solution to these conditions.

Safeguarding evaporated milk is worked out as perfectly as man's ingenuity has been able to make the process. From cow to can, the milk which goes into the evaporated product is watched every step of the way.



Cows of the dairy herds are guarded with constant care and are subjected to regular inspections by veterinary surgeons. Herds are carefully groomed, and their yards and barns are kept scrupulously clean, as are all utensils. Milk condenseries are located in the heart of the big dairy regions to facilitate speedy handling, for this is essential if the milk is to be canned at "its moment of maturity." Canvas-covered trucks haul the milk to market, thus protecting the product from contamination on the way. Arriving at the condensery, the milk goes through tests for acidity, sediment, flavor and butterfat content before it is accepted.

Experts watch the progress of the milk through every step of its way. It goes into the evaporating machine; to the homogenizer, which breaks up the fat globules so that the milk may be easily digested by the consumer; by way of the almost human filling machine into sterilized cans; then into the sterilizer, where the cans are surrounded by steam and boiling water, destroying any possible bacteria. Inspectors handle the product as the last step to see that the canning job has been perfectly done. Labeling and packing follow. The housewife obtains the milk as fresh and sweet as when it came from the cow.

FUTURE BECKONS YOUNG AMERICANS

Achievements of Past Only Show Great Opportunity Ahead.

Great events of the past quarter century which lead some young men to complain that all the big things have been done, leaving no opportunity for them, as a matter of fact only go to show that even greater opportunity today lies ahead of them, F. N. Shepherd, Executive Manager of the American Bankers Association, recently told members of the American Institute of Banking in New York. After reviewing the outstanding accomplishments in science, industry and finance during the last twenty-five years, Mr Shepherd emphasized the reward given men of achievement in America, especially in the financial field.

"The achievements of the past are the groundwork for the opportunities of today and tomorrow," he said. "There never was a time when so great were the potentialities of the individual. The world was never so ready and able to pay well for what it wants. For superior service to society under competitive conditions, whether through invention or production or organization or distribution of useful articles, no reward is begrudged, particularly here in America.

"Adding to human comfort and human needs, these things make life finer and better. The world has shared, but it is in America that they have reached their highest development and utilization. The American spirit of useful enterprise, however, does not confine itself within our own borders. It permeates the entire world and renders great service to peoples other than our own.

"Let us pass over America's service to humanity in the war and consider what is being done now. Largely to rebuild the economic life of a world shattered by the war and its devastating after effects, America has, since the war, loaned other peoples over ten billion dollars. Last year alone a billion and a half in foreign financing was consummated in the United States.

[a] Safety on your money
[b] Yield on your money

I.—SAFETY : Building and Loan societies put 100 per cent of their investments in Real Estate. It is estimated that there are 9,000,000 share holders in Building and Loan Societies, having $5,000,000 in assets. Wayne county Savings Bank has $74,204,528 in savings :$41,140,576 is invested in Real Estate. The Central Savings and Trust Company has $28,961,093 in Savings, $27,294,298 are invested in Real Estate. The New York Life Insurance Company has $151,000,000 in assets invested in Illinois.
$94,000,000 Keal Estate
$21,000,000 Kailroad Bonds
$35,000,000 Public Utilities
$1,000,000 Municipal
Surely these facts are conclusive evidence of the safety of Real Estate.
II.—YIELD : In yield one cannot find so generous a return anywhere. In ten (10) years the following yields have been realized : Detroit 630 per cent; New York 217 per cent; Chicago 195 per cent; Atlanta 162 per cent; San Francisco, 159 per cent; Boston 137 per cent; Minneapolis 131 per cent; Kansas City 129 per cent; St. Louis 124 per cent; Cleveland 119 per cent; Philadelphia 116 per cent. Detroit yields three times as much as its next ranking city.

Obituary

Fred M. Rumsey Jr. was born August 30th 1916 in Jefferson Township and died September 29th 1926 at the home near North Adams after 3 days illness of infantile paralysis.

Not now, but in the coming years,
It may be in the better land,
We'll read the meaning of our tears,
And, there, sometime, we'll understand.

We'll know why clouds instead of sun,
Were over many a cherished plan;
Why song has ceased when scarce begun;
Tis there, sometime, we'll understand.

God knows the way, He holds the key,
He guides us with unerring hand;
Sometime with tearless eyes we'll see;
Yes, there, up there, we'll understand.

Then trust in God thro all thy days;
Fear not, for he doth hold thy hand;
Tho dark thy way, still sing and praise;
Sometime, sometime, we'll understand.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank friends and neighbors for the assistance, and kind expressions of sympathy during the sickness and burial of our dear son and brother. Also all who sent the beautiful flowers.

TURKEY RAISERS ASK HIGHER DUTY

There is need for a higher tariff on turkeys, say Western Michigan poultrymen who have watched with concern the large importations of turkeys this year from Europe, Australia and South America.

Importations have not been sufficient to unsettle the market because there are only light holdings in cold storage. But should stocks of frozen turkeys exceed the five-year average, as they often do, each cargo of foreign birds entering this country would tend to depress the American markets.

Several million pounds could be imported this year without having much effect upon prices as storage holdings are considerably below the five-year average. Stocks of frozen turkeys at the beginning of this month totaled only 3,073,000 pounds compared with 7,161,000 a year ago and a five-year average of 5,426,000 pounds.

The large importations have come from Russia, France, Australia and Argentina. Argentina has been the heaviest shipper to United States.

The present tariff on turkeys is 6 cents a pound. Poultrymen believe the duty should be increased to 9 cents, or even to 12 cents if importations cut domestic prices.

Poultrymen say they need maximum protection on turkeys because of the riscks incident to raising the big holiday birds. Turkeys are subject to many diseases.

Thousands of young poults died in Michigan this year of blackhead and many others succumbed from being chilled during the rainy season before they had fully feathered. As a result the turkey crop in this state may not be quite as large as last year.

Michigan's Oldest Bible Is Owned by Deerfield Woman

Mrs. William Ching, near Deerfield, has one of the oldest bibles in Michigan, if not in the entire country. It is a copy of the English New Testament, published in Rheims by John Fogney in 1582 and completed by the addition of the Old Testament in 1609 and has been in the family for about two centuries.

This volume contains the historical account of Susanna and her children, one of the later canon additions to the book of Daniel in the ancient Greek bible. It contains, too, the books of the Maccabees. These two portions were removed in latter revisions of the English bible. There are, also, in this rare old volume, many of the hymns used when it was printed, as well as the ritual of marriage in use at that time. The covers are bound in calfskin fastened by buckskin thongs.

It is said that John Wesley, founder of Methodism, used this book a number of times in his services shortly after 1740, when he formed the first Methodist society.

Michigan Growers Study Plan to Make Peach More Hardy

Michigan fruit growers are showing considerable interest in reports from the North Carolina Experiment Station on the progress of a series of experiments to improve the hardiness of peach trees and partially overcome losses from winter injury.

Prof. L. G. Willis, soil chemist, has found that soils in which winter injury was greatest last year were deficient in magnesia. He also found that peach wood, leaves and fruit contain varying amounts of magnesia.

To offset the soil deficiency, Willis has treated orchards with applications of magnesia. He is working on the theory that the lack of magnesia may be a contributory cause to winter injury. While winters in Michigan are more severe than in North Carolina, Wolverine growers believe magnesia treatments might prove beneficial here if they prove helpful in the south.

If it wasnt for the hick towns there would be a scarcity of big men to run the big cities.

Liquid tar has been developed as a smokeless, highly economical heating fuel for small factories and homes.

Last Survivor of "8th" Tells of Half of Company Killed

Charles Allen, 92 years old, of Byron, is, as far as is known, the only surviving veteran of the old Eighth Michigan regiment, who enlisted when it was organized, in the fall of 1861. Leaving a farm in the township of Grand Blanc, a few miles north of Flint, after completing his grain harvest, he hurried to Flint, where he enlisted. The regiment left soon afterwards for the front.

In June, 1862, the infantry company in which Allen was, helped storm Confederates at James Island, S. C. A murderous, widely assorted storm of missles poured into the Union ranks. Broken iron, bottles, stones and nails belched from the muzzles of huge old smooth bore cannon, accompanied by a rain of small arm fire.

Allen says that of the attacking force, full 50 per cent were killed or wounded. A chain shot beheaded the man by Allen's side. Soon a musket ball struck Allen, penetrating his right lung, knocking him down as though he had been struck by a club. regaining his feet he started again across the bloody field. He had taken only a few steps when he was struck a second time. A ball tore the thumb and a part of the palm from his right hand, disabling him. Unable to handle a rifle, he returned to his farm in Grand Blanc.

Rules for Success of College Student Told by Educator

The first rule of success for a college student is to devote six eight-hour days a week to his studies, according to Dr. T. S. Henry, head of the psychology department of Western State Normal.

Dr. Henry, addressing Western Normal freshmen on "How to Study," declared that every hour of classwork demands two hours of preparation. The average student is in class 16 hours a week, he said, and hence must devote a minimum of 48 hours a week to study and recitation.

Dr. Henry advised the students to experiment to find whether they can study best at night or in the daytime.

"I find that I can do my best studying between midnight and 2 o'clock in the morning," he said. "I don't advise it, but you can learn a text book by heart from cover to cover," Dr. Henry said. "It takes no brains, just work."

Largest Electric Plant to be Built on Lake Michigan

On the shores of Lake Michigan at the Indiana-Ilinois state line and less than 40 miles from the Michigan border will soon be installed a 280,000 horsepower turbine generator as the first unit in what may ultimately be the world's largest steam generating station.

The machine will be practically three times larger than any turbine now in operation in this country, and the station is expected to increase its equipment until it eventually will have a capacity of 1,000,000 kilowatts. This first unit will have a capacity equal to 63 per cent of the total generating machinery of the Niagara Falls Power company.

The new station will serve as a producer and wholesaler of electricity, supplying energy for the inter-connected power companies around it.

The mammoth machine will be the first turbine to produce electric current at a voltage of 18,000. The present high record for such generators is 14,000 volts. Total weight of the machine will be about four million pounds. Approximately 400,000 gallons of water per minute will be pumped through the new plant, chiefly for condensing steam.

Grand Rapids Waives Right for Control of Canal Waters

Before the end of October, Grand Rapids will have acquired the right to control the water in the east side canal, which has provided power for a number of factories along its banks for decades, and will have become possessed of authority for unlimited use of the water from Grand river for municipal purposes.

Through a deal made with the Consumers Power company, and the East Side Power company a year ago, the city won the legal right to pump water from the river for the municipal supply, although it was actually maintaining a filter plant and pumping station and during recent years had been sending water through the municipal distribution system at the rate of upwards of 26,000,000 gallons a day.

Walsh of Milwaukee, Wis., is the new Commander in Chief of the Army and Mrs. Emily Tompkins, of New York City, heads the Ladies of the G. A. R.

DEER ESCAPES IN PLUNGE AT FALLS

Miner's falls, a few miles east of Munising, which already is known to have been a death trap for more than one deer, nearly sent another prowling antlered lord of the forest to his death, when a large four-pronged buck was swept over the falls to a boiling pool more than 70 feet below, while attempting to cross the Miner river at the top of the falls. The incident, probably the first of its kind ever viewed by human eyes, was seen by Mr. and Mrs. William Mazzall and Mr. and Mrs. Raoul Loranger, of Munising, who were viewing the falling water from a wooded height opposite the misty chasm into which the stream plunges.

The deer leaped out of the forest on the west bank of the river, successfully passed two of the streams into which the Miner river is divided, and was part way across the last channel when the swift current swept it over the edge. The animal struck the pool below with a great splash, and for a moment was submerged in the turbulent stream.

At first it appeared as though the animal had been seriously injured in its fall. Floundering helplessly in the water, the current was carrying it down stream, but the plucky animal finally dragged himself ashore and into the dense bushes, where it sank to the ground exhausted.

Bankers Help Boys and Girls in Calf Club

A plan to interest the boys and girls of Jackson county in raising and caring for fine cattle will be tried out this fall, when 30 head of pure bred Hereford calves will be imported for distribution among that many members of farm clubs.

The plan will be financed by various banks in the city and county, which will put up the cash for the purchase of the calves, transportation charges and insurance. This will be reimbursed when the animals are sold.

Probably one of the most unique inventions is a solvent for use in removing hardened chewing gum parked under theater seats.

DRAFT HISTORY OF STATE MUSICIANS

In compliance with numerous requests of club women and others, Mrs. Mary E. Frankhauser, State Librarian, and Miss Cora E. Lindow, in charge of the Music and Art departments, have prepared biographies of Michigan musicians, living and dead.

The list includes 20 famous Michigan men and women. The stories of their lives and achievements will be used as educational material in many club lectures throughout the state.

"Recently we began running a series of articles in the Bulletin on Michigan authors and their books," Mrs. Frank Hauser said. "This proved interesting to many and there have been so many requests for a similar series of article on Michigan musicians we decided to list them and obtain their biographies."

In the list are:

James Francis Cooke, John Grinnel Cummings, Samuel Richard Gaines, Frederick H. Pease, Mrs. Jessie L. Pease, Llewelyn Laraway Renwick, Lee Sowerby, John Winter Thompson, Francis L. York, Eric Delamarter, Earl V. Moore, William Howland, Frederick Russell Burton, Jacob H. Hahn, Albert Augustus Stanley, Guy Bevier William, Roderick White, Andrew Comstock, Rosseter Gleason Cole, and Bendetson Netzorg.

MICHIGAN HOME OF POET'S BOYHOOD

Will Carleton, a "poet of the people" in a day just past, spent the years of his youth in southern Michigan, and many memories of the author of "Over the Hill to the Poor-House" still are cherished by Wolverines who knew him in counties such as Cass, where Carleton once taught school; Lenawee, where he was born, and Hillsdale county, whose poorhouse was the inspiration for his heart-touching poem.

Out of 50 pupils who attended Chapel Hill school, in Cass county, when Carleton was its teacher in 1867, at least 30 are living, 16 of them in the same county, and 22 within 20 miles of the old school.

The names of the 30 known survivors of that old school taught by the poet are:

Sovereign Beerbower, Los Angeles, Calif.; Alice Bronson, Henry Brooks, James Brooks and Fanny Thorn, Elkhart, Ind.; Oliver Bronson, Flora Bronson, Elmore Field, Mary Simpson Calkins, Ed Cronkwright, William Eby, Arren Miller and Adelia Wagner Wayne, Bristol, Ind.; Nora Bronson, Constantine, Mich.; Charley Ann Carter Cronkwright, Sam Eby, Dan Eby and Gabe Eby, Jones, Mich.; John C. Harmon, Henry Harmon, Peter Eby and Jasper Pangburn, Cassopolis, Mich.; Ellen Carter Adams, Cheboygan, Mich.; Will Hawks, White Pigeon, Mich.; Charles Shellhamer, Attica, Mich.; Elizabeth Pangburn Nysewander, Pasadena, Calif.; Christian Eby, Elba, Mich.; Ormando Taylor, Richland, Mo.; Reuben Van Gilder, Harristown, Ill., and Augustus Wagner, Harland, Mich.

Will Carelton was born in 1945, two miles east of Hudson, and died in 1912, in Brooklyn, Mich. His books decorated marble-topped tables in many a parlor and some of his poems were as well known in those days as Edgar Guest's are today. Everybody, of course, knows about "Over the Hill to the Poor-House," while "Betsy and I Are Out" was only less famous.

Chickens Blamed for Tuberculosis Spread to Hogs

Chickns are carriers of tuberculosis to swine, Dr. T. S. Rich, in charge of tuberculosis eradication in Michigan, has discovered in a survey of one township in the state.

Every chicken on 151 farms in the township were examined. Out of 15,377 birds, Rich removed 1,494 as culls. Eighty-six of the culls were found to be infected with tuberculosis upon post mortem examination. The disease was found to exist in 38 per cent of the flocks examined.

Heretofore it was supposed that chickens under one year of age were not a source of danger in spreading tuberculosis to swine. Dr. Rich now advises to isolate chickens from hogs when the flock is known to be infected. The swine become infected by eating the chickens.

Man Jumps Out Window In Dream of Auto Wreck

Dreaming he was riding in an automobile which was about to be struck by a locomotive, Alfred Weinmann of Chelsea, jumped from a second-story window at his home. His back was injured slightly.

Education can be said to be a failure if it spoils a boy for hard work.

$200,000 CHECKS 'RUBBER', HIT 'HEIR'

Another "scrap of paper" has for the moment blasted hopes of world dominance. But this "scrap of paper" never got to first base in a Detroit bank or things might have been different.

Two checks aggregating $200,000 deposited in Kewanee banks by John ooper, structural iron worker, as the first tangible proof of his claims to heirship of a $9,000,000 estate, bounced back and Kewanee's maybe-millionaire was declared out on the first bounce.

The Central Savings bank of Detroit, on which the checks were drawn said they were scraps of paper.

The first hint of the inheritance was given several years ago by the iron worker, who came to Kewanee 15 years ago and married. Several months ago he gave definite form to the story, saying that a relative of great wealth had made a will settling a $9,000,000 estate upon him if he should by honesttoil show himself worthy of receiving it when he had attained the age of 33. Cooper was 33 last week.

Once Big Cannery Now Is Summer Hostelry

From a busy factory, where the fruit and vegetables from the neighboring farms were canned and shipped to the city markets, to the largest summer hotel in the village of Bear Lake is the transition through which Bear Lake building has passed.

It was built in 1892, when a group of outside promoters organized the Bear Lake Canning company, a cooperative concern in which almost every local farmer or business man of any means became financially interested. When completed the building housed one of the largest and best equipped canning factories in northern Michigan.

After operating for only one year, the company became involved in financial difficulties, from which it never recovered. The factory stood idle for several years and then the machinery was sold and only the weather-beaten building remained.

It really seems that many people get more enjoyment out of being fooled than out of being satisfied.

FIGHT WAGED TO KEEP LAKE CLEAN

The long battle to cleanse the waters of Lake Michigan, by prohibiting pollution through the dumping of municipal and industrial wastes, continues unabated.

Some 50 of the most prominent sanitary engineers, physicians and health authorities in the country are attempting to drive home the seriousness of this situation to the various municipalities bordering upon this great body of water.

Likening the present situation to Kipling's jungle story where all the beasts waged constant warfare against one another except only when thirst drove them to Peace Rock, the isolated water hole, and there they met upon a common ground where the strongest gave way to the weakest in satisfying their burning thrist, Dr. W. A. Evans, of Chicago, draws a vivid picture of the necessity of a pure, uncontaminated source of water supply.

"We may disagree with each other on many matters, we may fight in the courts over what we consider our rights, but there is a common bond that binds all of the Lake Michigan communities. This is the preservation of the purity of the waters of Lake Michigan."

Mallards Scarce at Favorite Lakes in Manistee County

Mallards especially are few around Manistee this fall. Some have been sighted on the Little and Big Manistee Rivers, Portage Lake, Bear Lake and other favorite places in the region but the general report is that the number is less than at the opening of any previous season. Farther north, however, sportsmen have reported more than the usual number of ducks. More ducks of other varieties are also reported in the northern part of the lower peninsula, probably due to the late season in the upper peninsula and Canada last spring.

Even red heads have been seen as far south as Manistee county all summer.

Teal are possibly a little more plentiful than last year in the Manistee region and are reported much more plentiful farther north. The little blue and green-winged birds are not sought as much as the larger mallards.

Snipe seem to hold their own pretty well a good shot should be able to bag the limit if he knows where to seek them during the opening days.

Many of us try to be honest, but don't seem to make much headway at it.

Common sense will correct a hundred evils while the law is correcting one.

HIGHER THAN WOOLWORTH BUILDING

Year's Sales of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MRS. ED. DAUGHERTY
1308 ORCHARD AVENUE, MUSCATINE, IOWA

The Woolworth Building in New York City, which towers 792 feet above the street, is the highest building in the United States.

If all the bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sold in 1925 could be placed end to end, they would make a column as high as the Woolworth Building with enough left over to extend from Lynn, Massachusetts to Cleveland, Ohio.

In many little villages as in many thriving cities along the route, who are glad to tell others about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In a recent letter, Mrs. Daugherty says, "I was ill for four months before I took your medicine. I found one of your books at my front door and read it. It seemed to fit my case, so I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to every one I see who has trouble like mine. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Ed. Daugherty, 1308 Orchard Avenue, Muscatine, Iowa.

Mrs. Carr Also Helped

Muncie, Indiana.—"I could not get around to do my work. I took treatments and they did me no good. I had always heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine and I thought it would be like all the others, but I found out after I took half a bottle, as I have proved it wonderful. I am taking it yet and I can do all my work. I am feeling fine now, and it is your good medicines that have done it. I tell every woman of the good I get from taking the Vegetable Compound and from using the Sanative Wash."—Mrs. P. W. Carr, 721 West Powers St., Muncie, Indiana.

Boy Scout Reptile Expert

The first scout's merit badge to go to a Louisiana boy for displaying a thorough knowledge of reptiles, and one of the few such medals to be awarded in the United States, has been given Martin Burkenroad, sixteen, of New Orleans. His knowledge embraces snakes, alligators, lizards and turtles. One of his experiments with a king snake led him to see whether the reptile would bite. It did, and for two weeks he carried a bandaged arm.

Prince's Nickname

The prince of Wales, it is disclosed, has among his numerous titles one which does not appear in the official lists. He is known to the Oxford undergraduates as "the Pragga Wagga," and has been so known ever since his Oxford days. Nobody knows the origin of the nickname, except that it is just plain slang.

War Town Is No More

When America got into the World war the great demand for iron built up a thriving town of 3,000, called Midco, near the iron mines of southern Missouri.

The iron company spent $3,000,000 just to house its employees. The mines closed down when the war ended and the miners began to move away. Finally only a score of families were left and these had to pay no rent, as hundreds of houses were empty. What remained of the town has just been sold to a wrecking company and soon nature will have reclaimed the townsite.—Capper's Weekly.

The bridge rocked and swayed to their struggle, bucking under them as the flood lifted it, only to let it sag again, and swirled about their feet, tugging viciously at the structure, tearing at the cables, thrusting at the cliffs. Their feet slipped on the wet planks, they fell against the handrope and the slanting suspension stays, clutching frantically with one hand, striking with the other, giving blows that left each sick with pain, desperate, ignoring the peril, clinging and sliding while they fought, silent save for their heavy breathing and the grunts with which a blow was delivered or received.

Baxter fought foul as his strength sapped from him. Caleb was harder, deeper-lunged, better muscled for this rough and tumble game. He hammered Baxter over the kidneys and Baxter gasped with the pain, his face contorting while he hung like a dead weight to his opponent, faint with anguish. When it passed he flung up his knee and caught Caleb in the groin, temporarily evening things. He broke free and lashed out, right and left, flailing at Caleb's head and jaw as the latter crouched against an angle of the hand rope and a stay, covering up. Then, with an energy summoned from his reserves, Caleb rushed, landing hard above the heart. Baxter staggered, groped forward and flung an arm about Caleb's neck, dragging with all his weight while Baxter strove for balance. His fingers found Caleb's throat, and worked desperately in shutting off breath, torturing as they pressed upon the jugular.

As they clung, athwart the planks now, Baxter's weight almost unbearable in the crook of Caleb's arm, his body stretched out down stream with the force of the water, the eastern buttress shuddered, tottered, slid; plunging into the gut. It toppled sideways, shaking the bridge as a terrier shakes a rat, dragging it until the cables sang above the noise of the torrent and then, anchored by sunken ledge and crevice, jammed hard, it held firm, the cables still secure. The sudden jar, the lowered pitch, was too much for Baxter. The blow over the heart had finished his endurance. His fingers lost their grip on Caleb's throat, the furious water claimed him. His despairing clutch on Caleb's smooth slicker failed. He gave a cry, his face ghastly in the white light of the moon and slid into the current like a hog.

Caleb snatched him by the collar of his coat and shifted his armhold for a grip on a saving stanchion as they both straightened out in the imperious sweep of the maddened creek. He thought his arm would be torn from its socket with the strain and he managed to wrap his legs about the planks, shouting at Baxter, yelling his loudest. Unless Baxter helped to save himself, or Caleb let loose of him, another moment would see them both whirled down the gut, over and over, their lungs filled with water, battered, drowned!

"Get hold of yourself," Caleb yelled. "Baxter! Get a grip on something, hang on to me. Haul yourself up. Quick!"

The insistent words and the will behind them worked in Baxter's numb brain and roused him to a last flurrying fight for life. With a frantic effort he clawed at Caleb, twining his fingers in the slicker and slowly dragged himself up from the suction of the flood. Caleb got both hands to the stanchion, praying that it might hold. Baxter found the opposite one, then the handrope, and so crawled to safety, releasing Caleb from his dead weight. He began to hitch himself up the incline while Caleb lay for the moment slack, utterly exhausted, his breath coming in great gasps, the fibers of his muscles seeming to be torn apart, his sinews racked. He got to his knees at last and then to his feet. The bridge might collapse at any second, there was no time to lose. Baxter collapsed again from weakness, face down on the planks where they still showed above the ever-rising, furious water.

Caleb got an arm about him. With the help of the hand-rope he hauled Baxter along until they reached the solid cliff of the western side of the gut. The blood was pounding in his brain with his efforts and it seemed as if someone was calling to him. He stood, leaning against a tree—Baxter seated on a ledge, his face in his hands, elbows on knees—and faced the creek and the broken bridge, breathing in great gulps of cool air. The call came plainly now, no fiction of his dizzy brain.

Reined upon the verge where the cliff buttress had broken loose, was Betty Clinton on her pinto pony, the forelegs of the snorting horse braced against danger. The moon was free of scud and the girl's face was clearly visible. She had no hat and her chestnut hair was in disorder.

"How long had she been there?" Caleb wondered while he strove to catch what she was saying above the tumult of the creek. He heard his name. She recognized him, with his slicker torn, his face bloody. And she had hailed him in preference to Baxter! Baxter had come from the ranch. Yet, she had called to the man she had snubbed—in her trouble, for there was trouble, he gathered, as she repeated her words in a high voice that came clearly now and then when wind and water favored.

"Mr. Warner! My father—is—ill! I have—sent—word—by Padilla—by the road. A doctor—Luis—may—not—get one. Will—you? The bridge!"

"I'll get one," Caleb shouted back. She heard him and nodded to tell him so. He turned to Baxter.

"Hear what she said? I've got to get a doctor. Are you all right to leave?" Baxter lifted his face. It was sullen with hate.

"D—n you, yes," he answered. "Leave me alone."

Caleb looked across the gut before he took to the trail. He saw Betty Clinton deftly wheeling her pony. It was dark as soon as he got well into the canyon where the growth was thick. But he forged ahead in the darkness, puzzling a little as to why she had not called Baxter. Had she ridden to overtake him, knowing he had gone that way. Had she seen the fight, seen Caleb rescue his opponent, perhaps thought Baxter too weak for her purpose—or did she take sides with Caleb, in some flash of intuition?

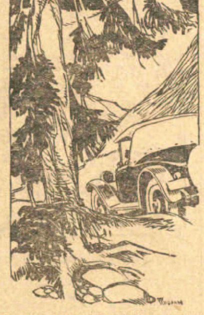
Whatever the real reason, his hopes spurred him down the uncertain path on his errand, charged with new energy by the appeal of Betty Clinton. He came out upon the plain panting but with his second wind gained, crunching through gravel, plowing through the alkali soil at a steady jog until at last he pounded over the Coyote creek bridge and gained the hotel, asking the astonished landlord where the nearest doctor lived, and so on again down the road for half a mile to find the physician in and commandeer his services.

"Clinton? Clinton of El Nido? Have you come from there? What's the trouble?"

"I can't tell you. Not an accident, I'm sure, or Miss Clinton would have said so. The bridge at the canyon head was down. We had to shout across. She's sent a man by the road but she was afraid he might not be able to get a doctor. She just said he was ill."

"Ah! I see. He'll have gone to Paloma. There's Conklin there. And he's got a lot of influenza. Road's pretty bad after the storm, but we'll get there. Going back with me?"

Caleb wanted to go back. He might be of use. He had done what she asked, he was entitled to her thanks, at least.



Only the Rutted Road Showed There Had Been a Storm.

"I'll go," he said.

"Come on." The doctor had picked up his bag and led the way to his little garage.

The sky had cleared completely and the night was fair as they chugged out to the road and shot down toward the highway that would take them to Paloma and so, by a sideroad, to the valley. Caleb fancied that Baxter would come out of the canyon all right. Not that he greatly cared. But some of the enmity had gone out of him.

The air was cool, bright stars glittered all about the soaring moon. Only the rutted road showed that there had been a storm. At last they struck the well-drained highway and sped along the metaled road at top speed, past the scattering light of Paloma to labor valiantly up the hill that led to Hermanos valley and drop down to the ranch.

There was a car standing by the house.

"Looks as if they'd got Conklin," said the doctor as he honked his horn and braked to a standstill. "Don't look like his car, though."

It was Baxter's roadster. Why he should have left it there and started for the canyon in the storm, again perplexed Caleb. A sudden thought struck him with the possibility that he might have quarreled with Betty Clinton. That would account for her not asking his aid. He had lied when he said he kissed her. Baxter would do that. Or the kiss might have been forced, and he dismissed.

A door opened. Betty Clinton appeared, her voice anxious.

"You've come at last. What is it?"

They were getting out of the car, the doctor reaching back for his bag.

"It is Warner, Miss Clinton. I've brought Doctor . . . ?"

"Doctor Kennedy, Miss Clinton."

"Oh!" There was relief in her tone. "I'm so glad you've come. He's in a high fever. I'm afraid . . ."

Caleb followed them as they walked swiftly toward the open door. She had thanked him only by a glance that held its reward and conveyed something that encouraged him to wait in the big living-room. There might be something else that he could do. He still puzzled over the presence of Baxter's machine outside, the riddle of Baxter, walking down the canyon. It all seemed to point to a quarrel. Mary Morgan's suggestion that Betty Clinton had not believed him as bad as he was painted grew more likely, this service that he had rendered her might help to renew the bond between them.

He was still in the dark as to the nature of Clinton's illness, or its seriousness, and no one came to enlighten him until the honk of a horn sounded outside.

Betty Clinton did not answer this arrival. Instead Maria entered from the patio pergola, ushering in a brisk short man with a bag.

"I'm Doctor Conklin," said the man to Caleb who had risen. "You are a friend of the family? I don't think I've met you before."

"I brought Doctor Kennedy up from Coyote," said Caleb. "Miss Clinton feared Padilla might not be able to secure you. It is too bad that there is not a telephone here or we might have saved you the trip. I understand you have plenty to do in Paloma."

The doctor did not appear aggrieved that he had come to play second fiddle, that he might not be wanted.

"Kennedy, eh? Good man. Kennedy! Yes, we have a mild epidemic. I must be going back as soon as possible. But there's no harm done. The Mexican told me about Clinton. Exposure—low vitality—danger of pneumonia."

Maria came back and went into the patio. Her eyes turned toward Caleb. He fancied them friendly. Betty Clinton was close behind her.

"I am so glad you came, doctor," she said, advancing with outstretched hand. "So is Doctor Kennedy. He wants to consult with you. Will you go in?"

She accompanied him to the inner door and then came back to Caleb. Her face was pale and worried but her eyes were shining as she gave him her hand.

"I haven't thanked you yet," she said. "There isn't time just now. But I appreciate what you have done. It was—kind. You can wait?"

"Surely," he answered, stirred by her touch and voice. She had barely disappeared when Maria arrived with coffee and sandwiches that she set on a table.

"La senorita wishes you to eat," she said, with the effect of an absolute order. Caleb thanked her.

"Did you see—that other one?" she asked. "My senorita did not say, save that she met you by the bridge."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Fighting Smallpox in Central Africa

Smallpox is a terrible plague when it breaks out, as it does, among the native in Central Africa. There is one small woman over there, Miss Tessie Williams (who recently visited the United Christian Missionary society's headquarters here, being employed by this board), who is doing her best to make Africa smallpox-proof. She vaccinated 646 natives in one day, considering it a very good missionary stunt. Her method of describing it was like the assembling of fabulous numbers of autos as witnessed in a well known factory. They stood in a line an eighth of a mile long. One native administered the soapsuds, scrubbing the arm clean; another scraped the skin, ready for the inoculation; a third kept the young missionary supplied with apparatus. Nothing but sleeveless costumes are worn in that part of Africa, and, despite the hurry of it, there were no infections or other ill effects.—Detroit Free Press.

Craw in a Tattie Field

There was recently appointed to a country parish church a young minister who, although a clever chap, is very much attracted to his "paper" during his sermon.

This failing of his does not find favor with a few of his congregation, and the other Sunday, as a few of them were going home from church, one of them, the village schoolmaster, remarked: "That was a very scholarly address we got today from the minister. Don't you think so, Mr. Blunt?"

"Humph!" replied Mr. Blunt, a plain old farmer. "He jist minded me o' a craw in a tattie field; twa dabs an' a look up!"—Toronto Globe.

That Kind of a Mind

Mark Twain hated to have his work edited. On one occasion he sat down to write to a man who had criticized his work. He was first inclined to think, "the idea! This long-eared animal, this literary kangaroo, this illiterate hostler, with his skull full of axle grease," etc., but restrained himself and pointed out to the man his errors "in gentleness and in the unwounding language of persuasion." "It is discouraging to try to penetrate a mind like yours," he finally wrote. "You ought to get it out and dance on it. That would take some of the rigidity out of it. And you ought to use it sometimes. That would help. If you had done this every now and then through life, it wouldn't have petrified."—Pathfinder.

Historic Cave

The story relating to the Judges' cave in New Haven, Conn., is that in 1661, Goffe and Whalley, two of the members of the high court in England which had condemned Charles I to death, used this location as a temporary refuge from the officers of Charles II. It seems that the bowlder was split in such a way as to form a small cave. Although certain of the townspeople were aware of their presence in the locality, they were afraid to give them any practical assistance

Saint as Castaway on Postage Stamp

Philatelists will be interested in the announcement that the Maltese authorities have chosen St. Publius, convert of St. Paul, for the design of their new 18-penny stamp. The saint is shown as a castaway on the island. Saints have been popular subjects with stamp designers of the Mediterranean states.

England's own patron, St. George, was used by Crete 20 years ago, and in 1919 another Maltese issue showed St. Paul escaping shipwreck. Only recently Italian stamps were issued portraying the death of St. Francis of Assisi, of which the seven hundredth anniversary occurs soon, following the example of Portugal, in commemorating the sept-centenary in 1895, of the birth of St. Anthony of Padua.

A religious design, Madonna with child, was adopted by the Hungarian post office four years ago.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Professor Blerot of France, after a visit to America, was commenting on our education. "It is most amazing and, to me, most alarming. I do not mean to say that some of the young people do not learn something, but my impression of American universities was stadiums, with classrooms attached."

Rough Talk

"Do you think actors should be permitted to use profanity?"

"No," answered Miss Cayenne. "But some of the plays undoubtedly warrant the auditors in doing so in private comment."

WORLD-WIDE sales of quality cars and trucks

General Motors cars and trucks are sold and serviced in 104 countries. The export shipments in 1925 amounted to 119,632 motor vehicles; and the overseas assembly plants and warehouses of General Motors now number 19. This vigorous development of the world-wide market for a complete line of quality cars is important to the car buyer. It is not only a contribution to international prosperity and progress, but it also helps to maintain the continuous production program at the factories, on which low prices depend.

CONCRETE WALL TO KEEP AUTO RACERS ON THE FAIR TRACK

Sanctioned American Automobile Association Meeting Ensures New Safety for Spectators.

So that spectators may be fully protected during the automobile races which will feature September 11, the final day of the Michigan State Fair, a solid concrete retaining wall will be constructed around the centerfield in which automobiles will be parked and spectators permitted to watch the event.

For the first time in years automobile races sanctioned by the American Automobile Association, the governing body of racing in this country, will be held at the state fair.

Special emphasis is being laid on living up to all the rules of the Contest Board of the A. A. A. These rules provide that a hub-high rail must be around the centerfield provided spectators are permitted within the enclosure. They also require that another fence forty feet inside the hub-high rail must be around the centerfield provided spectators are permitted within the enclosure. They also require that another fence forty feet inside the hub-high rail be constructed and that no one be permitted between the rail and the fence.

Construction on the inner fence is progressing. A temporary outer railing made of six by sixes and backed with four by fours has been constructed for the automobile races which were held under the A. A. A. sanction at the State Fair Grounds on June 27. This rail was hastily constructed in order to conform with the rules of the Contest Board, because time did not permit the construction of a concrete rail by the day of the race. The two months intervening between this race and the opening of the fair will permit the construction of a rail which will be there for all time.

STATE MOVES FAST TO FINISH NEW BUILDING AT FAIR

Construction of the Agricultural Building at the State Fair Grounds in Detroit is progressing rapidly, and the new building will be ready for occupancy for the Michigan State Fair which will be held from September 5 to September 11.

Practically all of the steel work will be in place by July, as well as a large portion of the brick masonry with which the lower portion of the building will be finished. A force of seventy-five workmen are busily engaged in the construction of this new building ,which will house the agricultural exhibits of Michigan at the forthcoming State Fair and at future fairs.

The new Agricultural Building is located between the Coliseum and the Dairy Building. Its type of architecture is very similar to that of the two structures on either side, with an arcade between the Dairy Building and the Agricultural Building which will permit visitors at the Fair to pass from one building to the other. In these three buildings will thus be conveniently centered the agricultural interests of the state.

In previous years the farmers of the state have not been given the prominent part in the State Fair which is considered necessary for the complete success of this annual event. Other states have found that a good agricultural display means a successful fair, and under the new management of the State Fair Board, Michigan is to take her rightful place.

BOYS' COURT JUDGE ASSAILS LIQUOR LAW

Chicago Jurist Blames Prohibition, Autos and Immodest Dress For Crimes of Youth

The greatest curse ever imposed upon a civilized country was the Prohibition Amendment, Judge Francis B. Allegretti, of the Boys' Court, Chicago, told over 2,000 members of the Holy Name Society at a recent quarterly meeting of the Detroit Diocesan Union. The automobile was also blamed by the speaker for much of the delinquency among the boys today.

Judge Allegretti, who was recently elected to his second term as head of the Boys' Court in Chicago, and who is considered an authority on modern wayward boys and methods of dealing with them effectively, explained the workings of his court to the members of the Society who sponsor a Big Brother movement in the Detroit courts.

The boy is civilization's greatest asset, he declared. But proper home training is necessary for the boys of today if the men of to-morrow are to be worth while citizens, he said. The evils of divorce and the urgent need for companionship between boys and their fathers were repeatedly stressed by the speaker.

Some Sidelights on the Fight Against the Liquor Traffic in Germany

One of the most startling exhibits is a chart prepared by Prof. Hecker, inspector of public schools of Munich, Bavaria, the greatest beer drinking center in the world. Prof. Hecker examined and investigated 4,462 school children of that city. He found that 1,380 drank occasionally, 1,906 drank once a day, 659 drank twice a day. 211 drank as much as half liter of beer or whiskey each day. 638 were abstainers. Then, with true German thoroughness, Prof. Hecker analyzes the school record of each of these five classes of children. The record shows that the record or credits for the total abstainers was very much higher than that of any of the other sections, being nearly five times as high as the heaviest drinkers. The record of credits decreased heavily in each case in proportion to the drink consumed.

On the other hand, the record of demerits was lowest in the case of the abstainers and kept rising in proportion to the volume of drink that they consumed.

Then, as if to rub salt into all of these sores, another chart takes up the question of smuggling and moonshining. In Germany the spirits is a government monopoly. The "monopoly" complains that, during the year 1923-24, the bootleggers cheated the monopoly out of 11,330,000 marks through their operations, and also cheated the government out of 3,700,000 marks in unpaid taxes. Wallowing in this slough of despond, prosecutions by the wholesale against bootleggers and moonshiners and smugglers have been taken into the courts. It is shown that there are now pending in the German courts 5,940 different cases against the illicit liquor operators, these cases representing more than 8,000 different persons.

In desperation, the brewers hung up on the walls declarations of Bismarck, declaring that he drowned his cares in drink. The drys retort by exhibiting on large placards, Bismarck's famous declaration, "Das bier macht dumm faul und impotent" (beer makes stupid, useless and lazy), very much to the disgust of the brewers.

And this is not the end of the brewery woe. On the Exposition grounds there is being operated a cinema for the portrayal of all sorts of items pertaining to social welfare. The drys have prepared a remarkable series of pictures showing the destructive effects of beer on the human body. This exhibit was prepared by Prof. John Gonser and Dr. Hugo Strecker of Berlin.

It is both interesting, gripping and tremendously telling. This anti-alcoholic picture show is being exhibited daily to huge crowds in the cinema, with lecturers explaining the destructive effect of the drink sold in the 23 snake holes called "restaurants" around the Exposition grounds.

The man held more or less responsible for all this concatenation of woe for the brewery overlords in the Exposition is Dr. Martin Vogel of Dresden, the Director of the German Museum of Hygiene Dr. Vogel is no friend of drink and appears to enjoy the commotion that he has been largely instrumental in stirring up. He just looks through his spectacles and grins about it—that's all.

Of the accredited guides in connection with the Exposition some are dry and some are wet. The drys will always lead their clients into the dry exhibit and ridicule the exhibits of the wets. On the other hand, the wet guides will lead their clients into the brewery exhibits and say disagreeable things about the nefarious dry agitators. But it all keeps the pot boiling.

The brewery exhibit cost 200,000 marks; that of the drys cost only about 16,000 marks. But the drys are getting more action out of their little 16,000 mark exhibit than the alcoholic overlords get out of their huge outlay.

Then, as a further disagreeable insult, the shops in Berlin are now selling beer steins, in imitation of a human skull. The brewmaster regards it as tough luck to be treated in this spirit of railery in Germany.

All of these activities are really but a part of the fierce contest that has been waged in Germany for more than a year against the drink traffic. The prime object of the present move is to secure a local option law in Germany. A year ago, in ten days 600,000 petitioners were secured appealing to the German Parliament for such a law On the second attempt, better organized, 2,000,000 persons signed the petitions and these were laid before Parliament with dramatic ceremonies.

The brewers are very much disgusted at it all, but the myriads of German victims of the German brew vats see a ray of hope shining from above the clouds.

The "Neanderthal man" and Neanderthal ideas are being challenged in the place of his birth.

Gets A Plum

Hillsdale College has recently been made beneficiary of several donations from former Alumnis who have gone out into the world fresh and verdant from its doors and have reaped great harvests from their various fields of labor. These behests total several thousand dollars which keep the College institution alive and able to prosecute its work of educating the sons and grand-sons of the donors. Plans have been drawn for a splendid field house or gymnasium to be erected on the grounds adjacent to East College street over 200 feet in length and 150 feet wide. The material will be brick with sandstone trim and literally acres of glass set in steel sash. It is claimed that the number of pieces of glass are over 6,000 and that they would reach one and one half miles if laid adjoining each other. Side walls of this building will be all of sixty feet in height, and the main auditorium will be 209 x 150 feet absolutely unbroken by a post or column of any kind, Around the outer edge will be one of the best cinder tracks in the country ten laps to the mile where the budding athletic geniuses can exercise their muscle and prepare for the worst.

It is with great fervor of thanks the College remembers these benevolent old uncles scattered in different parts of the nation, since by the products of their labor new equipment and acumen are constantly being annexed-

Last but not least there will be added a complete heating system so that this big area can be kept as comfortable as could be wished on the coldest winter day. H. R. Graf of Jackson is the architect.

The Michigan High School Debating League

The Michigan High School Debating League was organized by the Board of Regents of the University of Michigan in 1917, and this year begins its tenth year of activity.

Any four year high school in the State may become a member of the League by sending a fee of two dollars to G. E. Densmore, Manager, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Applications for membership will be received up to, and including, October 25th.

Debates are sponsored by the League, and each school will participate in the four Preliminary Debates of the League. Those schools winning the highest records in the Preliminary Debates will enter the Elimination Series which will come to Ann Arbor for the State Championship debate in May.

The dates for the Preliminary Debates will be as follows: First, November 19, 1926. Second, December 10, 1926. Third, January 14, 1927. Fourth, February 11, 1927.

The question that will be debated this year is, "Resolved, That the United States Government Should own the Coal Mines."

Enrollments for the League are coming in rapidly. Many new schools, never before in the League, have applied for membership this year. The enrollment today is ahead of the enrollment a year ago today, and it is expected that the enrollment for the year will exceed the total enrollment of last year which numbered 200 high schools.

Last year these 200 high schools held over five hundred debates in which over a thousand high schools pupils participated. The attendance at all of these debates was one hundred thousand.

In the final State Championship Debate, held at Ann Arbor on May 10th last, Kalamazoo Central High School won first honors and Hudson High School won second honors.

The audience assembled for this State Championship Debate numbered two thousand five hundred people, representatives of the different high schools of the State, which is the largest audience that ever attended a Championship Debate of the League. Sixty three high schools and two colleges were represented by one or more delegates.

When silage is fed to cows immediately before milking, the odors of the feed may be imparted to the milk. If fed just after milking however, the silage odors will have passed from the cows' bodies before the next milking.

One milk plant returned over 50,000 gallons of sour milk to farmers in one year. This is only one instance of great losses incurred through carelessness in the production and cooling of milk,

Motor vehicle registration figures still continue their upward climb, according to the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture, which reports 19,697,832 vehicles registered in the first six months of 1926. This is 1,927,151 more vehicles than were registered in the corresponding period of 1925 or an increase of 10.8 per cent.

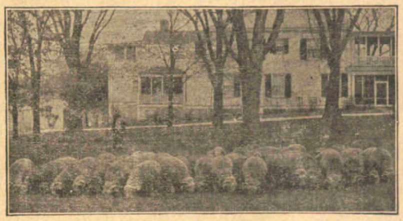
Your Sheep Deserve Attention



The farm flock of sheep give two crops each year—lambs and wool.

As time goes on, progressive farmers are placing a higher valuation on the variety of sheep they raise and the care they are given. It is generally realized that a sheep raiser secures two crops per year—the lambs and the wool. All indications point to a well sustained price for lamb and mutton due to the fact that consumption has at last overtaken production and prices being paid for wool, mutton and lambs are, even now, most inviting.

Compared with other live stock, sheep raising provides a profitable source of cash income. Early lambs can be made ready for market by June and when the wool is harvested and sold in June and July, this revenue is received at a season when most needed by the average farmer. There are many instances where farm flocks of sheep have kept farmers out of debt. In one instance, 50 ewes produced 65 lambs which when marketed averaged 66 pounds at 15c per pound or a total of $648.37. The wool clipped from the 50 ewes averaged a trifle over seven pounds per head and brought well over a $100.00 or a total of almost $800.00 from the flock of only 50 ewes.

Such a harvest, however, is not possible without a return by the owner. He must lay the foundation by securing a desirable ram and must have good basic value in the breed of sheep he is raising.

While there are more than 40,000,000 sheep in the United States, only 463,504 of these are pure bred. Annually the number of pure bred sheep increase in proportion to the total number of sheep, which is a favorable indication for a continuance of quality for years to come. The sheep owner realizes that only on quality may he build a permanently profitable business in sheep raising.

A close study of breeds most suitable to existing conditions and most advanced methods of feeding and care, always carries with it a large dividend in results obtained. Your sheep deserve good attention.

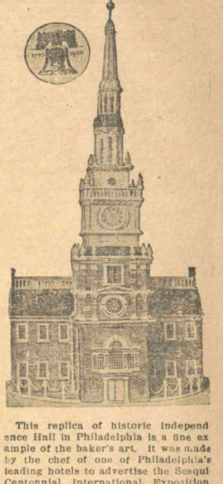
HISTORY IN CAKE



This replica of historic Independence Hall in Philadelphia is a fine example of the baker's art. It was made by the chef of one of Philadelphia's leading hotels to advertise the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, which will open in that city June 1 and run to December 1 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of American Independence. The "State House" stands on a table at the entrance to the main dining room of the hotel.

AID TO BEAUTY

Under this young woman's skillful hands the front of the Administration Building of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition Association quickly takes on a delightful aspect. She directs gardeners where to place the small trees and shrubs about the great stucco building. She is doing her share to make the big celebration of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence a success.

The tour will be personally conducted by Masonic News. There will be guides in every city, all hotel reservations have been made in advance and there will at no time be extra charges for hotels, meals or side trips. The entire cost of the trip is defrayed by $100.

As an indication of the manner in which the Masonic News will care for its guests on this trip it can be stated that reservations have been made at the Knickerbocker Hotel in New York City, at the Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia and at the Cairo Hotel in Washington, D. C., all of these are splendid hotels.

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad is the scenic route from Detroit to the seaboard. Travellers will see Harper's Ferry, the beautiful Alleghenies, the famous Potomac and will travel in comfort on a road which is noted for its service and its meals.

A reservation can be made by mailing ten dollars to Masonic News, Masonic Temple, Detroit, or the Potter Travel Bureau, 131-132 Lafayette Blvd., Detroit. Final payment is due 10 days before the trip begins. Masonic News announces also that in case of sickness or a change of plans refunds will be made.

Rates from all points in Michigan can be obtained by writing Masonic News or the Potter Travel Bureau and a folder describing the trip in full will be sent on request.

The reservations are limited to five hundred.

Speaking from his experience on the bench in Chicago, where in one year more than 5,500 boys, between the ages of 17 and 21, were brought before him charged with crimes ranging from disorderly conduct to murder, Judge Allegretti placed the blame for much of today's delinquency squarely at the doorstep of the Prohibition Amendment.

Seventy-five per cent of the crimes committed by the boys brought before me are directly traceable to bootleg liquor, he said. As a magistrate I have a sworn duty to perform in handling violations of the liquor laws and I carry out that obligation to the fullest measure. But it is the immediate duty of you men, fathers of families, to busy yourselves in remedying this situation, because we are responsible for the moral welfare of generations to come.

In Shabbytown

IN Shabbytown they do not care if things look seedy everywhere. They have no pep, they've lost their grip, they simply sit around and yip, in envy's tones, of Glossyville, the shining village on the hill. Oh, Shabbytown is punk and gray, and it shows symptoms of decay, and strangers passing through remark, "It surely dates back to the Ark." "Clean Up and Paint Up" makes men frown along the streets of Shabbytown. A can of paint makes no appeal to this bum village, down at heel; the people think there is no sense in going to so much expense; so things are always going down, and getting worse in Shabbytown. It always gives my soul a thrill when I arrive in Glossyville. The town looks like a blooming bride; the people take a hearty pride in making things look clean and bright, and in their labors take delight. They're lavish with the helpful paint, selecting colors chaste or quaint, and decorating every shack; thus warding off decay's attack, and making all the buildings look like buildings read of in a book. And strangers, when they see the town, say, "Here we'll come and settle down, and raise us nineteen kids apiece, and live and die as slick as grease." This happy burg goes right ahead, while Shabbytown is prone and dead.

REGISTRATION OF ABSENTEE BY OATH

Sec. 9. If any person whose name is not registered shall offer and claim the right to vote at any election or primary election, and shall, UNDER OATH state that he is a resident of such precinct and has resided in the TOWNSHIP TWENTY DAYS next preceeding such election or primary election, designating particularly the place of his or her residence and that he or she possesses the other qualifications of an elector under the constitution; and that owing to the sickness or bodily infirmity of himself or herself or some member of his or her family, or owing to his or her absence from the TOWNSHIP on public business or his or her own business, and without intent to avoid or delay his or her registration, he or she was unable to make application for registration on the last day provided by law for the registering of electors preceeding such election or primary election, then the name of such person shall be registered, and he or she shall then be permitted to vote at such election or primary election. If such applicant shall in said matter wilfully make any false statement, he or she shall be deemed guilty of perjury and upon conviction, be subject to the pains and penalties thereof.

Provision in Case of Removal To Another Precinct

Section 11. Any registered and qualified voter who has REMOVED from ONE ELECTION PRECINCT of a TOWNSHIP to another election precinct of the same TOWNSHIP shall have the right, on any day previous to election or primary election day, on application to Township Clerk to have his or her name transferred from the registration book of the precinct from which he or she HAS REMOVED to the registration book of the precinct in which he or she THEN RESIDES. Such elector shall have the right to have such transfer made on any ELECTION, or Primary election day by obtaining from the board of inspectors of such election or primary election of the precinct from which he or she HAS REMOVED a CERTIFICATE OF TRANSFER and pesenting the said certificate to the BOARD OF ELECTION INSPECTORS OF THE PRECINCT IN WHICH HE OR SHE THEN RESIDES

F. W. HOLCOMB,
Township Clerk.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage given by Hiram Livermore, widower, of the township of Wheatland, Hillsdale county, Michigan, to Corwin Cox, of the said township, which mortgage was dated January 30, 1908, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Hillsdale County, Michigan, January 16, 1908, in liber 133 of mortgages, on page 579:

And whereas, no proceeding either at law or in equity have been brought to foreclose said mortgage and whereas, there is due and unpaid on said mortgage at this date, in principal and interest, the sum of Nine Hundred Thirty three and 90—100 ($933.90) Dollars.

Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, Notice Is Hereby Given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of the premises therein described at public auction at the west front door of the court house in the city of Hillsdale, in said county, on Friday, the 3rd day of December, 1926, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that date, to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage and costs, including an attorney fee of $25 as provided for by statute.

The premises are described in said mortgage as follows: The north half of the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 16, excepting about one and one half acres out of the northwest corner now owned by J. M. Livermore, and this mortgage conveys about 18 acres of land in the above description, also five acres of land on the east end of the above described land, and being the same width north and south as above land, all situate in the township of Wheatland, County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan.

Dated September 1, 1926. Corwin Cox, Mortgagee.
Paul W. Chase, Attorney for Mortgagee.

The Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of Detroit, recently dedicated the new wing of St. Andrew's parochial school, in that city, in the presence of about 2,500 persons. The bishop was escorted to the building by more than 1,000 children. He was assisted in the ceremonies by the Rev. F. Orlik and the Rev. K. Jziuk. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Joseph Lempka, newly appointed pastor of St. Stanislaus parish. A reception followed the ceremonies of dedication, which were attended by about 30 priests of the diocese.

DAIRY FACTS

SOY BEAN MEAL IN DAIRY COW'S FEED

South Dakota farmers will be interested in an experiment conducted recently by the dairy department at South Dakota college which indicates that soy-bean meal is somewhat higher in feeding value than oil meal. Data obtained show that when oil meal is valued at $45 per ton soy-bean meal is worth $58 a ton.

"Live-stock farmers have been advised and urged for some time to feed a balanced ration," the report on the experiment states. "This means that they must either purchase or raise high-protein feeds. The college wanted to find out whether soy beans, which can be grown for both seed and forage in South Dakota, could be profitably substituted for such protein feeds as oil meal, frequently purchased at a relatively high price."

The results of the experiment indicate conclusively that farmers can make money growing their own protein feeds and in this way decrease the cost of milk production.

Does soy-bean meal fed to dairy cows injure the quality of the butter produced from these cows? Results of this experiment indicate that where moderate amounts of soy-bean meal are fed the quality of the butter is not lowered. When too great a quantity is fed it produces a soft, salvy butter. Judicious and economical feeding would eliminate this trouble, because it would not be advisable to feed excessive amounts of soy-bean meal if economy was kept in mind.

The experimental animals showed no ill effect from the soy-bean meal and gave every appearance of health. Their coats were glossy and the condition of flesh as good as when oil meal was fed.

Dairying as Side-Line Aid to General Farming

Dairying as a side line to general farming has often enabled the farmer who was farming at a loss to make a profit. The cows furnish a market for surplus feed grown on the farm. Instead of hauling feed to town, hunting buyers and often taking less than cost of production, counting labor, equipment, etc., the grain and hay may be fed at the barn and the fertility in the manure saved and applied to the soil. Then the farmer has work at home in bad weather, milking cows, feeding, hauling and applying manure, taking cream, milk or butter to market.

The best way to utilize dairy products, is separating milk, selling cream and feeding the skimmed milk to pigs. Should one be situated where there is no creamery near, the cream may be shipped and the cans returned.

Five or six good cows will produce their own living, provided the farmer raises most of the feed, and in addition, afford a living for the farmer's family, provided good cows are kept and markets are satisfactory.

Most families on farms may milk, feed and care for the cows in addition to producing a crop. Cotton, corn, grain, sorghum, oats, and other crops usually grown may be placed in the rotation, or at least several of them, so that the cows may be cared for as well as the other farm work done.

One may begin with two good cows, using the products of milk at home, and raise enough cows to begin dairying for the side line suggested. But pasture must be provided and feed must be raised, and barn-room must be furnished.

Flies Lower Milk Yield

Care should be taken to protect cows. In a large measure flies are responsible for low milk yields during the summer and thin cattle in the fall. Cows should be protected from them as much as possible. An Indiana dairyman keeps his cows stabled during the heat of the day in a cool, darkened barn, the windows of which are darkened by nailing gunny sacks over them. He also has gunny sacks hanging over the doors, through which the cows must pass, in such a manner that the flies are brushed from them as they enter.

Summer Fly Evil

Giving dairy cows access to cool, darkened barns during the heat of the day will go a long way toward taking the "sting" out of the summer fly evil, thereby preventing a drop both in milk yields and profits. Windows can be darkened by nailing building paper over them. Gunny sacks hung in the doorway will brush the flies from the cows' backs as they enter the barn. Fly repellants may be effective for a short time in lessening the annoyance.

Silage Taste and Odor

A silage taste and odor might even improve some milk by drowning out more offensive odors. However, the safe procedure is to take all safeguards if you would produce the best quality milk, and these include proper barn ventilation, preferably feeding after milking, feeding only moderate quantities of silage, and then prompt aeration and cooling of the milk. Green corn fed an hour before milking has a slight effect on the milk, according to these government tests.

A Word With the Old Folks

Elderly People Are Learning Importance of Good Elimination.

IN the later years of life there is apt to be a slowing up of the bodily functions. Good elimination, however, is just as essential to the old as to the young. Many old folks have learned the value of Doan's Pills when a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys is required. Scanty or burning passages of kidney secretions are often signs of improper kidney function. In most every community are scores of users and endorsers who acclaim the merit of Doan's. COATS WITH HATS TO MATCH; TIERED AND PLAITED SKIRTS

Pretty Outfit for a Schoolgirl.

FOR the children there is a treat in store, namely, chinchilla coats with hats to match. Of course the mothers are going to voice their approval of this fashion, for of all cloakings none is more dependable and good looking, than is chinchilla.

The new chinchilla coats are amusingly mannish in cut and detail, until it comes to the lining, which is as joyously gay as youth could possibly wish it.

What prettier or more practical for the schoolgirl than a matching chinchilla coat and hat like the one in the picture? This particular model happens to be lined with the new suede-finished woolen fabric, but bright flannel is just as suitable. One is making a fashionable selection in either navy, or French blue lined with vivid red, or cinnamon, jungle green, chanel red or garnet with a chosen contrasting lining.

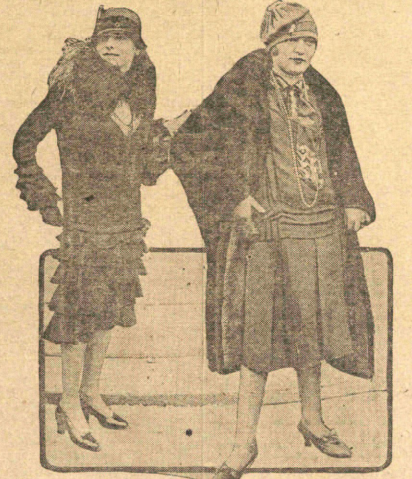
There isn't much trimming needed on the hat, possibly a suede strap-band and buckle or a wee cocarde of grosgrain ribbon. It, too, boasts a cheerful lining self-colored to that of the coat, but preferably of satin.

Some of the handsome chinchilla coats are enriched with nutria collars. The same is true of the plaid woolen coats for girls—they are mostly fur-collared. Likewise they have hats of same material, for the ensemble of coat and hat is being greatly emphasized in junior apparel.

Another charming outfit for the young girl for "dress up" occasions is the plaid plaited skirt either taffeta or woolen, with which is worn a velvet coatee topped with a soft beret hat to match. Some of these short coats are double breasted, others are styled with novelty belts of gold or silver kid or gay suede which is artfully detailed with metal decorations.

Children's suede-cloth coats acquire skirt fullness with godets or plaits, also below-the-elbow fullness is gathered into tiny fur wristbands, matching the collar.

Tiers are popular in Paris, at least in fashion's realm where they spell it with an "ie" and not an "ea." Looks as if French stylists are tiering skirts more enthusiastically than ever, and with an ingenuity which baffles description. In fact everything that will possibly admit of the tiering process in the fashioning of the new autumn and winter costumes is being tiered, even to sleeves, as this picture so interestingly portrays.



Two Modes From Paris.

For swagger style the much be-tiered frock as shown to the left has no compeer. It presents the ultra-smart idea for the coming season. Mark the clever circular treatment of the tiers which elaborate the skirt and take note of the fact that the sleeves are also tiered below the elbow. Both velvet and satin dresses are being interpreted in this tierful manner.

In fact, the velvet-tiered frock is a favorite theme among dress designers. Sometimes the tiers are placed row and row, overlapping in conventional line which simulates an appearance of wide tucks. Again, and this is a very popular idea, each tier is scalloped. Very modish is the velvet skirt formed of scalloped tiers, the same worn with a gorgeously gay plaid blouse, or perhaps one of exotic print or metal splendor. The texture and weight of the new velvets admit gracefully of the tiered manipulation, being exceedingly supple, and one might almost say sheer, so exquisitely delicate are they to the touch—and velvet is the rage!

As to plaits, they never grow weary in well doing, and if some of us expected them to be relegated to the past, present-day fashions prove conclusively the fallacy of such a thought. While all-around plaited skirts are worn, the really smart note is to mass the plaitings to the front. However the woman of fashion is given her choice and so mademoiselle who poses to the right in this picture shows her preference for an entirely box-plaited skirt with which she wears a blouse which shows a bit of shirring at the front.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Skirts Remain Very Brief

Rumors that skirts were to be dropped at least an inch or two apparently were without foundation. The dresses seen at the important resorts, and the models brought out for the fall seasons show skirts quite as brief as any that have been worn during the past three months.

Fur Scarfs

When a wrap is not worn a fur scarf becomes a necessity. The silver foxes again held the premiership. Aside from these, however, the number of red fox scarfs is chosen because of their nice blending with the warm tan and brown coloring.

Coat Dresses

Coat dresses of twill are shown for fall. These are slightly bloused in the back, but have a straight front line, broken only by a belt or girdle. The facings are soft-colored chiffons and crepe de chines.

NAME OF "GIRAFFE" TRACED TO ARABIA

Animal Mentioned in Book of Deuteronomy.

Where did the very first giraffe's name come from?

That's interesting in view of the fact that we want a name for Washington's new giraffe, but it's a hard one to answer. We can only go back as far as recorded history carries us, and we must suppose that up to that time they had no particular names, although it seems reasonable to believe that the cavemen of Africa called them something.

Anyhow, about the first record we find showing that men were interested in giraffes is in the Bible. In the Book of Deuteronomy there is repeated reference to a creature which the Jews called the "zemer." Literally translated into English, that means something like a chamois.

So, probably the first known name for a giraffe was "zemer." There is not much apparent similarity between the chamois of South America and the giraffe of Africa, is there? But that name probably developed from the fact that the giraffe's skin is very tough and very soft, something like that of the chamois.

The first time a giraffe was ever known to be in anything resembling a zoo was in the days of Caesar. Ancient history tells how strange, tall animals were exhibited in the same amphitheaters, where the Romans used to throw the defenseless Christians to the savage lions. But the Romans called them "camelopards."

In some parts of the world that name is still used to some extent. If you have ever seen a giraffe you can easily guess how the Romans got the name "camelopard." A giraffe has long legs and neck like a camel, yet it is spotted like a leopard. So it is a logical name after all. But such a name was only descriptive, it meant nothing at all.

Our word "giraffe" is really much better. It is not only descriptive of the animal's color, but it gives him a definite place in the animal kingdom. It was taken from the Arabic word, "Zarafah," which means "tallest of all animals." The Arabs still call giraffes "za-ra-fahs," and it is not at all unlikely that their name is even older than that used by the Jews, although we have no records to prove that.

We are told that giraffes were once plentiful over most of Africa. They were such inoffensive, friendly creatures, however, that they became easy prey for the natives and Arabs in the old days, and where they once roamed in great herds they have almost been exterminated, representing now one of the most valuable of all animals.

Their flesh provided the natives with ample quantities of delicious meat, and their tough hides, when cleaned and dried, served numerous purposes, from making good, tough ropes to offering an easy means of rainproofing the roof of a native home. It was not uncommon even a few years ago to see as many as 40 giraffes in a single herd. Six or seven is about the limit now.—Washington Star.

New Word to Her

"Choose your words carefully if you would be understood by your servants," is the recommendation of a housekeeper who recently had the following experience. She was especially fond of the small white peaches and had not yet seen any on the market. One evening when her cook started out, she remarked: "If you should by any chance see any of the small white peaches in passing through the market or any of the stores, buy them, and I'll reimburse you when get home." The reply came: "Sure, Miss Alice, I'll buy the peaches, all right, but what I want to know is, 'What is it that you is going to do to me when I get home?'"

Tit for Tat

A father was trying to make some confidential remarks to a visiting friend. His little son was playing near.

"If we could be alone," said the father to his visitor, "I would tell you something." The little boy did not move.

"No one must hear," continued the father. The boy sat still.

"Jimmy," said the father, "can't you take the hint that we want you to go away."

"Yes, daddy," replied the boy, "but can't you take the hint that I want to stay?"

Good Defensive Weapon

An antimashers' device, which looks like a wrist watch and can knock out an assailant by means of a low amperage electric shock of 1,000 volts, has been invented in Germany. Thin wires connect it with a tiny battery and induction coil carried in an inside pocket of a dress or the coat pocket of a man. When needed the wearer presses a button, swings at the bad man so as to touch his body and the fight is over.

Roman Farm Luxuries

A great Roman farm establishment, the rural villa of a colonial gentleman of the Third century, is being unearthed and explored near Cologne, Germany. The principal building had a length of more than fifty yards and contained thirty rooms. An outstanding feature is the bath establishment, patterned after the luxurious baths of Rome, with elaborate water supply and drainage systems.

Famous Harps

Some of the oldest harps are the so-called harps of Brian Boru, preserved at Trinity college, Dublin, having 30 strings; that of Robin Adair at Hollybrooke, having 37 strings, and the Dallway harp of 52 strings, dating from 1621.

Trees Live Long

The bureau of forestry says that the average age of trees is between 200 and 800 years. There are trees in existence over 2,000 years old.

Harvesting Soy Beans Now Easy

Harvester-Thresher Unit Is Found to Be Practical and Cheap.

Although the large combined harvester-threshers of the West have never been considered practical for use in Midwest grain fields, because of the heavier rainfall in this section, these combines this past year made a place for themselves with the Illinois soy-bean grower and also have shown to good advantage in the harvesting of small grains, according to I. P. Blauser of the farm mechanics department, college of agriculture, University of Illinois. It is estimated that the cost of harvesting has been reduced about a third through the substitution of the combine for the ordinary method.

The combine harvester was first used in Illinois in October, 1924, by Garwood brothers of Stonington to harvest soy beans. Credit must be given to these brothers for pioneering the combine in this state. After being turned down by two companies, they succeeded in getting the third company to sell them a combine so that they might give it a trial in harvesting soy beans. Incidentally, the harvesting of soy beans has been the most difficult problem in growing and handling this crop.

First Machine Used.

This first machine was used to harvest 212 acres of soy beans, 60 acres being so weedy that Garwood brothers said they could not have saved them by any other method. By June, 1925, there were seven combines of the same make in Illinois waiting to be given a trial in harvesting small grains. Just one year after the first machine was introduced, there were twelve combines in Illinois. This is truly a remarkable increase, and is due to the highly satisfactory manner in which the combine harvested the soy-bean crop.

It is quite commonly agreed by those who have used the combine, that it is here to stay if for no other crop than the soy bean. As one farmer said, "We cannot get along without the combine for harvesting soy beans."

This past season the combine has been used to harvest wheat, oats, sweet clover, red clover and timothy, in addition to soy beans. One combine in Champaign county harvested this past season, 530 acres, including: 230 acres of wheat, 40 acres of oats, 20 acres of red clover, 10 acres of timothy, 10 acres of sweet clover, and 220 acres of soy beans. This acreage was divided between two farms located 11 miles apart. Other machines in the state have similar records.

Determine Total Loss.

The farm mechanics' department of the agricultural college has made a number of tests to determine total loss in harvesting with the combine. These tests were made both in wheat and in soy beans. The total loss for 53 threshing machines tested was a little more than 8 per cent. The average total loss for 14 tests made with the combine in wheat was a little under 6 per cent.

In the case of soy beans, the saving in harvesting with the combine is much greater than by any other method of harvesting and threshing, even though the total loss is considerably higher than the loss in harvesting wheat. The same combine that had been used to harvest wheat, oats, sweet clover, red clover and timothy, gave an average total loss of 10.62 per cent for 14 tests in harvesting soy beans. For harvesting soy beans the cylinder speed was reduced, special shoes were put on the cutter bar permitting the machine to cut lower, and the small grain riddles were replaced with soy bean riddles.

Different Forage Crops and Grazing With Hogs

Growing forage crops and grazing them with hogs is a very desirable way to improve run-down land, according to numerous hog raisers and experiment-station workers. Practically all the fertilizing elements of the vegetation except that stored in animal bodies is returned to the soil in the manure and litter. The only danger of injury to the soil is in the trampling by the animals on heavy clays when they are wet, and this is easily avoided where a permanent sod pasture is available. Furthermore, hogs, when turned into a new field, frequently clean up a number of different kinds of weeds. They make good use of waste plants and tend to eliminate them from the fields grazed.

Lubrication for Wagon Wheels Quite Important

Wagon wheels need more than to have the axles well greased; they would last several times as long as they usually do if they were oiled. Frequent oiling of the wood also eliminates the necessity of having the tires set from time to time by a blacksmith. The best method of oiling the wheels is to make a trough-like box which is put under them and filled with linseed oil or other wood preservative. By turning the wheel slowly through the oil every part of the rim will be soaked with the oil. With a convenient jack the four wheels of a wagon can be thoroughly oiled in a short time. The trough can be kept from leaking by painting it.

What Americans Eat

The average American, according to recent statistics, eats 150 pounds of meat a year. In the same space, he consumes 200 pounds of potatoes and 150 eggs. He eats, however, less wheat than the Frenchman.

General Ambition

A gentleman of our days is one who has money enough to do what every fool would do if he could afford it; that is, consume without producing.—Bernard Shaw.

COYOTE ESCAPES WITH LEGS TIED

Emil Skoglund, state trapper, is gaining en enviable reputation in capturing wild animals alive. Early this season he succeeded in bringing a live wolf into Ishpeming, and E. W. Libby, district game warden, now tells the story of Skoglund's capture of a live coyote.

Warden Libby was accompanying Skoglund on an inspection tour of a line of traps in the wooded country seven miles south of Gwinn. A peculiar animal practically denuded of hair, was found in one of the traps. The warden thought it was probably a cross between a fox and a coyote.

Suffering had taken all the fight out of the animal, and without much difficulty, the two men succeeded in tying its legs and loading it on the rear of their truck.

The jolting ride which followed apparently revived the animal, for it succeeded in working its front legs free, leaped from the truck, and went hopping up the road in spite of the fact that its hind legs still were tied.

Warden Libby was hot in pursuit of the coyote, and would have overtaken it had not the animal turned into a dense growth of underbrush and ferns along the road.

Returning to Gwinn, Skoglund brought back his dog, "Mike," and quickly trailed the coyote to the shore of a small lake, where it had taken refuge in a hole undermined by beavers in the bank. Mike crawled in after the animal, but was unable to get out again. After the hole was enlarged by the men, the dog dragged himself out with his jaws clamped tight on the coyote's neck.

The animal's legs were tied again, and this time was brought into Gwinn successfully. Skoglund has sent the animal's scalp to the state conservation department for certification.

Standard Apples Urged on Growers; Show Nov. 30-Dec. 3

Plant standard varieties of apple trees, Michigan growers will be warned at the apple show to be held at Grand Rapids Nov. 30 to Dec. 3 in conjunction with the annual convention of the American Pomological and the Michigan State Horticultural Society.

George Friday, of Coloma, one of the leaders in apple growing in Michigan, announced that the meeting's keynote would be selection of varieties. Trees which may be expected to live and bear for many years are the sort which the grower must select if he would insure profit, Friday pointed out.

There is a tendency to run to fancy brands, whose trees are less resistant to untoward weather, Friday said. One 75-year-old orchard which he recently inspected is still producing such standard varieties as Greening, Northern Spy, and Snow Apples, Friday said, with indication that it will bear for many years to come.

Improving Silver Lake State Park Speeded

The 27-acre state park at Silver lake, eight miles southwest of Hart, is to be improved immediately.

The Silver lake park is little known, yet it is one of the prettiest in western Michigan. It is located on the south side of the lake directly across from the big 913-acre tract which congress voted last spring to deed to the state, provided the state would build a road leading to it.

Chicago Cheese Co. to Open Michigan Plants

The Kraft Cheese company of Chicago has bought a site and will erect a cheese factory at Scottville this fall. It has purchased the west half of the Eugene Slater farm, one mile east of Scottville, on M-20. The company have plans to erect other factories in western and northern Michigan.

Birds, Destroyers of Plant Parasites, Killed by Curious

A deplorable condition that exists in Michigan is the useless destruction of many different species of birds.

Birds are far more valuable alive than they are dead and mounted. There are too few people who realize that the time is near at hand when some of the beautiful creatures will be only a matter of history. The destruction of many species of wild life must stop or a number of species will be totally exterminated.

There scarcely is a single specie of bird in Michigan that is not more or less valuable, some, of course, a great deal more than others. The insectivorious birds are the most valuable, and when one stops to think that it takes about 2,00 tons of insects a day to feed the young robins alone, then some idea can be had of how valuable these feathered creatures are.

"Little Brown Jug" Grid Contest Is at Ypsi November 19

Roosevelt high school at Ypsilanti, faces an eight-game schedule this fall, which is probably the hardest in the history of the school.

Five Suburban League teams, of which it is a member, will be played—three at home and two away. Central high school will be met on Nov. 19, in the annual contest for the "little brown jug." The game is considered the hardest one of the schedule.

Earl Riskey has returned to the school as athletic director and will have as an assistant Frank Manley, of the physical education department of the normal college.

Matevia, Schaeffer, Spike, and Atwell are the veteran linemen returning to this year's squad, while Schlick Capt. Groom, Budd and House form a veteran backfield combination.

Progress' March To Level Trees On Ft. Wayne Site

The giant, spreading elm trees of Fort Wayne, last verdant vestige of the pristine past, are about to fall before the slow encroachment of Detroit downriver industry.

For many years the 80-acre government reservation at Detroit has resisted the infringement of neighboring industries, remaining the one green oasis along a waterfront of docks, factories and marshland. Meanwhile the value of the property has risen from the original cost of $250,000 for grounds and buildings to an estimated value of $6,000,000.

The recent announcement from Washington that the war department would sell Fort Wayne at public auction brought a flood of requests that the state or the city take measures to preserve the historic old fort. Following a resolution passed by the common council of Detroit on May 18, asking that the city be given first option on the sale, the house military affairs committee agreed to delay the sale in order to give the city or state opportunity to acquire the property.

However, impinging indutsry temporarily balked, has invaded the reservation in insidious fashion. War department delays have meant nothing to intruding smoke clouds and the long rows of old elms, once the pride of Fort Wayne, have been practically laid waste.

Charlevoix Couple Face Charge of Destroying Deed

An unusual case is being prosecuted by the officers of Charlevoix county.

It is alleged that, on Aug. 31, Mr. and Mrs. William Herbert Sears, of Boyne City, came to the office of the register of deeds and asked to see a certain deed which had been brought there for recording. Mrs. Frank Bird, deputy register, handed them the deed, which had not yet been recorded, and, while Mrs. Bird was attending to other duties, the pair, instead of returning the deed, took it and walked out of the office, it is charged.

Mrs. Bird immediately summoned Deputy Sheriff Charles Marshall, who stopped the offending pair, but not before, it is alleged, they had torn the deed into small bits and thrown it into some catch basins.

Deputy Sheriff Marshall later fished the pieces of paper out of the catch basins, and Mrs. Bird was able to piece them together and record the document.

MUD HOUSE TO CUT COSTS NEAR READY

The last touches are being put on a house that will lower the cost of building in this entire country, two University of Michigan professors who built it believe. The house is built of ordinary dirt, taken from the exacavation for the cellar, and packed solidly to form the walls.

Such construction was used in less scientific fashion, centuries ago, in Europe and by the Indians of the southwestern United States. It can be done at a fraction of the ordinary building cost, according to the two in charge, Professors F. N. Menefee and R. E. Franklin, of the faculty of the engineering college. The house represents the culmination of years of research for the most practical construction methods.

It is a solidly built, simple house that has resulted from the experiments of Professor Menefee. The inside dimensions are 20 by 30 feet. The house is one-story high. Its walls, 17½ inches thick, are expected to resist heat and cold so as to greatly simplify the temperature problem.

Construction of the novel house was started in the ordinary way, after a garage of the same material had been built. The cellar was dug. Dirt from the excavation was piled near the site, while wooden forms were constructed for the walls. The dirt was rammed into these with compressed air rams working under high pressure. The board frames were taken down after the earth had dried, and used in other parts of the building.

Gaudy Flivvers Fail to Heed College Ban Rumor

The campus flivver, a strange and wonderful affair which runs apparently without an engine and bears unique designs on its wobbly sides, is still rattling merrily along the roads at Michigan State college, undaunted by rumors of a regulation prohibiting of cars at other Michigan colleges.

Officials at State college have made no move to banish it from the campus.

The latest whim to seize the students is that of painting their cars in gaudy colors. Sky blue is a favorite, and one flivver which is often seen wheezing its way around the campus is brown with green wheels. Several freshmen, with an eye to the appropriate, have purchased jointly a runabout and turned it into a brilliant green car, loud enough to be noticed several blocks away.

Third Federal Judge Is Asked for Detroit

In a communication sent to Judge A. C. Denison, of the United States circuit court of Cincinnati, Judge Arthur J. Tuttle, circuit judge of the eastern Michigan district, recommended the addition of another federal judge for the Detroit district to alleviate the burden of work performed by Judge Tuttle and Judge Simons.

Judge Tuttle explained in his letter that the Detroit federal courts more than supported themselves and could easily support a third judge.

BLINDNESS FAILS TO CURB SUCCESS

Lowell is justly proud of one of its sons who, despite the loss of his sight at an early age and before he could complete the training that was to fit him for his chosen life-work, overcame this great handicap and won success and distinction.

The man is Charles A. Glass, evangelist and musician, known throughout the United States for his work in both these fields.

And although it may seem a trifle incongruous to his sightlessness, Rev. Glass takes a keen interest in various outdoor sports.

He loves to swim and frequently does so with his friends. He transacts his own business affairs in a manner that might be regarded as remarkable for a blind man. It is said of him that he seldom makes an error, even when in the midst of stubbord columns of figures.

He is a skilled typist and all his correspondence is done with typewriter. He seldom uses hand script.

Rev. Glass was born on Aug. 3, 1873. During childhood he lost the sight of one eye through an accident. He continued his work in school and proved himself a brilliant student. However, his studies multiplied the burden placed upon the other eye and, at the age of 17, he lost the use of this.

$5,665,000 To Be Spent On Wayne Roads in 1927

More than $5,665,000 will be spent by Wayne county during 1927 in the construction of new roads, widenings, grade separations and erection of highway bridges. This expenditure for improvements will be fully covered by the following estimated receipts: One mill county road tax, $3,405,500; automobile tax, $2,230,000, and rental from D. U. R. (Jefferson and Fort bridges), $30,006, a total of $5,665,500.

These figures comprise the 1927 budget of the board of Wayne county road commissioners.

The plan provides for the paving of 19 miles of new roads at a cost of $800,000, and the widening of 18 miles of roads at a cost of $962,500.

Six bridges are to be erected at a cost of $450,000 and seven grade separations constructed at a cost of $910,000. In addition the sum of $2,050,000 will be necessary for the securing of rights-of-way for widening.

Common Law Husband Seeks $50,000 Estate

..Probate Judge Edward Command has the task of deciding the legal status of a common law husband in a $50,000 estate case now being heard in Detroit.

Mrs. Betty Dinkin obtained a divorce from her husband, Isadore, in 1922, because her parents objected to the marriage. However, Isadore's attorneys contend the couple lived together until her death in March.

Now Dinkin, and two brothers, and sisters of Mrs. Dinkin, are contesting for the dead woman's $50,000 estate, as no will had been made.

COUZENS SELECTS TWO TO RUN FARM

Country estates, the dream of every clerk, street car conductor, or millionaire, vast stretches of land dotted with small lakes, long drives, bridle paths, private golf courses, vistas, deer parks, all possible only for the immensely rich: Is much of it merely a waste of good farm land? Is it right for a man of millions to exert his millions in order that good land may lie idle?

These questions were answered by Senator James Couzens, whose Wabeek Farms, near Detroit, virtually have been loaned to Mark and Frank H. Williamson. Mr. Couzens has turned over 500 acres of the 900-acre estate to the brothers for five years. He selected them from a flood of applicants who answered his announcement that, being unable to make the land pay its way, he would turn it over to a practical farmer to operate. He supplies the land with its $100,000 worth of buildings and equipment and pays the taxes; the new managers have a free rein in operation and will take the profits, if any, as their remuneration.

Work Starts Jan. 1 On Museum for Michigan University

Excavation work on University of Michigan's new $900,000 Museum of Natural History at Ann Arbor, will be undertaken Jan. 1, 1927. The museum will fill a need that has existed nearly a quarter of a century, as the present zoological exhibition buliding, formerly University Hall, is now in a dilapidated condition and ready to be torn down.

According to plans, the new museum will house exhibits which are now in the numerous display corridors and rooms throughout the campus.

Antrim Farmers See Big Future In Alfalfa Seeds

Visions of the day when Northern Michigan farmers will be producing the alfafa seed requirements of the entire state are taking shape in the minds of Antrim county farmers this season as a result of their success in producing a crop of seed in a wet season.

It was generally supposed that alfalfa seed could be produced only in dry seasons. But farmers have discovered this year that other factors than moisture govern seed production. It is now believed that the fertility of the soil, the kind and amount of seed sown and the texture of the soil have more bearing upon seed production than weather.

By sowing two pounds of Hardigan alfalfa seed an acre on the better grades of light soils in this section, Antrim county farmers have produced a good seed crop this year. Some fields will yield one to three bushels of Hardigan seed an acre and the market on this seed is $30 a bushel.

The Hardigan alfalfa is a hardy variety developed by the late Prof. Frank A. Spragg, plant breeder at Michigan State college. It is an ideal variety for Michigan and grows well in upper Michigan.

City Petting Grounds Is Urged for Detroit

Establishment of municipal petting grounds in Detroit, where young men and women could pursue their lovemaking under the protection of the authorities suggested by Robert M. Toms, prosecuting attorney. The suggestion was made when Mr. Toms was informed by police that a Detroit girl had been attacked by three men on the outskirts of the city after the men had overpowered her escort.

AIR LINES USE MICHIGAN PLANES

Four air transport lines connecting Chicago, St. Paul, Cleveland, Detroit and Grand Rapids and Atlanta, Ga., Jacksonville, Miami and Tampa, Fla., are using Detroit made airplanes, a survey of the aircraft industry disclosed. The airplanes are the Stout all-metal, built by the Ford Motor Co., the Stinson-Detroiter and the Buhl-Verville.

The Northwest Airways, recently formed, which will carry mail, passengers and freight between Chicago and St. Paul, will fly the Stinson ships. The two Ford lines—from Detroit to Cleveland and Detroit to Chicago—are using the Stout ship. The Florida Airways Corps., which flies from Atlanta to Jacksonville, Fla., and connects with Tampa and Miami, flies the Stout as well as the Stinson planes.

The National Air Transport which covers a route from Chicago to Texas has ordered several of the new three-motored all-metal Ford ships which will be placed in operation immediately. The Western Air Express, operating between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City, have ordered Ford ships and it was indcated the Colonial Air Transport, flying between Boston and New York, soon are to purchase a number of Ford ships.

The Ford Motor Co. has announced their airplane division is embarking on a production program that calls for the immediate construction of 100 of the three-motored airplanes.

In addition to the other air transport lines, the Ford company has plans to extend its present lines to other parts of the country where their branch factories are located. The first flight on a proposed extension will be made when R. W. Schroeder returns from Buffalo with a load of freight from the branch plant there to Detroit.

Sanitorium At Traverse City

Many of our citizens will remember Joseph Moreland and wife formerly of Jerome, but now of Traverse City. They have been in the chiropractic profession for some years and have established a sanitorium at the above city. From the Traverse City Record, we clip the following account of Moreland and Moreland 247 Washington street:

"Those who have not experienced the refreshing results of a chiropractic adjustment have a pleasure in store for them. Nothing can compare with the complete relaxation and rest which follows such an adjustment.

Moreland & Moreland who conduct a chiropractic sanitorium at 247 Washington street, are the veteran chiropractors of the region, having engaged in this profession for many years. Through these years they have acquired an experience and a technique which places them in the front ranks of their chosen profession.

The Moreland & Moreland Sanitorium is fully equipped for the benefit of their patients. The appointments are such that the patient is not only cared for after the adjustment but before, as years of experience have taught these practicioners how necessary is the mental condition of the patient."

In regions of extreme winters it is advisable to winter bees in cellars rather than outdoors. In such climates the bees are compelled to generate sufficient heat to overcome the severe cold. This calls for the expenditure of much more food and vitality than are required when they are kept in a good cellar during the months of extreme cold.

Legumes as a rule take large quantities of lime from the soil, In fact, many such crops do not grow well or not at all where acid conditions exist. This is particularly true of alfalfa and red clover and perhaps to a less degree of sweet clover and vetch. Cowpeas and soy beans. on the other hand, usually do not respond to liming, and white clover grows well on acid soils. Corn is ordinarily considered to be tolerant of acid conditions, and such grasses as redtop, Bermuda grass, and lespedeza grow well on acid soils. Bog plants, such as blueberries and cranberries, require an acid soil, and such fruits as strawberries and raspberries apparently are not benefited by applications of lime. The great majority of garden and truck crops and cereals usually are improved by liming.

Aims To Improve Home Conditions

The Twentieth Annual National Dairy Exposition points towards a better home life on the farm, according to Mrs. Edith M. Wagar, noted womens' leader in charge of the Farm Womens' Division, who has announced the program to be held in the womens' building at the Michigan State Fair grounds during the Dairy Show, October 6 to 13.

Farm women must participate in an agricultural gathering, says Mrs. Wagar, if it is to be a success The National Dairy Exposition gives them an opportunity to make their wants known, and offers a solution for their fulfillment.

Especially arranged exhibits portray vividly the part played by profitable dairy herds in solving the purchase of modern appliances and conveniences. One display shows the time required for the average cow, which produces 3,800 lbs of milk, to make enough profit to purchase an appliance, while another depicts the period necessary for a cow producing 10,000 lbs to make the same purchase

Trained women are in charge of a home appliance exhibit, and will demonstrate these conveniences. A health food show, under the personal supervision of Dr. E. V. McCollum, John Hopkins University, stressing the importance of dairy products in the national diet is also held in connection with the Womens' Division.

Each day during the Exposition a program consisting of lecture demonstrations and entertainments will be given. Especial arrangements have been made to care for young folks so that the women will be free to visit all parts of the Exposition.

is furnished by the ABBOTT LYCEUM BUREAU For the past two years the people have enjoyed the attractions coming from this company. and we are looking forward to a series of very enjoyable numbers.

The Course is sponsored as usual by the Senior Class of the High School and the attractions and dates are as follows:

The Banta Duo Nov. 17. This number is composed of Harold E. Banta and Edythe M. Banta, both vocally talented while he is also a good cartoonist.

The Little Theatre Party, Dec. 22. The members of the cast are ladies and gentlemen of refinement and culture and artists of the front rank. Their play is entitled "The Cure All"

The Shaw Trio, Feb. 7. Each one of these artists is the master of more than one instrument and all are capable of rendering the best music.

The Ithaceans, March 12. This number is composed of four men, all returned soldiers Their program includes solos and duets from the most difficult to the simplest.

This Course is costing us more than ever before. and it is assured that the course will be satisfactory,

I.—SAFETY : Building and Loan societies put 100 per cent of their investments in Real Estate. It is estimated that there are 9,000,000 share holders in Building and Loan Societies, having $5,000,000 in assets. Wayne county Savings Bank has $74,204,528 in savings :$41,140.576 is invested in Real Estate. The Central Savings and Trust Company has $28,961,093 in Savings, $27,294,298 are invested in Real Estate. The New York Life Insurance Company has $151,000,000 in assets invested in Illinois.
$94,000,000 Real Estate
$21,000,000 Railroad Bonds
$35,000,000 Public Utilities
$1,000,000 Municipal

Surely these facts are conclusive evidence of the safety of Real Estate.

II.—YIELD : In yield one cannot find so generous a return anywhere. In ten (10) years the following yields have been realized : Detroit 630 per cent; New York 217 per cent; Chicago 195 per cent; Atlanta 162 per cent; San Francisco, 159 per cent; Boston 137 per cent; Minneapolis 131 per cent; Kansas City 129 per cent; St. Louis 124 per cent; Cleveland 119 per cent; Philadelphia 116 per cent. Detroit yields three times as much as its next ranking city.

BANK ROBBERY

About eleven o'clock a. m on Wednesday, October 13th, (that unlucky date) four dapper looking bandits entered the front door of Cook's Savings Bank at Hillsdale and displaying ugly looking guns ordered the officials and a couple of patrons who happened to be in, to "stick em up" The order was pre-emptorily obeyed and the robbers placed their guns against the men's stomachs and forced them to lie flat on the floor with faces down, except the cashier, whom they ordered to unlock the vault. This done, the robbers went through the place securing approximately $20,000 in cash and securities, departing as quickly as they came. It is stated they drove a big gray Buick car. Patrons of the bank will be happy to know that the loss is fully protected by insurance.

HAMTRAMCK LIES IN OBSCURE GRAVE

In an obscure corner of Mt. Elliott Cemetery, unmarked by pretentious memorial, lies the grave of Col. John Francis Hamtramck, Revolutionary War officer and pioneer citizen of Detroit.

Since 1866, when the body was moved from the old Ste. Anne's Cemetery in Detroit, the Hamtramck grave has lain, half-hidden, in the Richard Elliott plot of the cemetery, named from the same family. Neither ostentation nor ceremony has greatly disturbed the peaceful aura over the grave of Detroit's first United States commandant.

In spite of the fact that a city of 80,000 inhabitants bears his name, little is known popularly of Col. Hamtramck. There is only the quiet nook hidden away in the heart of the city, its very existence unknown to most of the bustling thousands outside. A flat slab, slowly settling into its grassy bed, covers the final resting place of Detroit's soldier-commander, a recumbent stone placed there by officers who served under him.

The suns and rains of 123 years have partly obliterated the inscription.

A far cry from the conspicuous deeds of Hamtramck and the men of his company to the modest site of his burial. The Elliott plot is on a little lane in the southwest corner of the cemetery. At the north end of the plot is the recumbent stone of Hamtramck's grave.

Duck, Strategist, Uses Decoys for Shield From Guns

Edwin Turner of Trenton has discovered the military strategist of the feathered tribes. He says the bird's name is Hannibal, and that given half a chance he could perform feats that would put the Carthagenian general to shame.

Hannibal is a mallard that makes his headquarters in the swamps around the mouth of the Huron river, laying tribute on the surrounding country for sustenance. In the day time he comes to the more open waters where the stream makes connection with Lake Erie, or the near-by bayous.

Turner says Hannibal seldom takes the trouble to keep out of range of the gunner.

"He lights far out after spying our position on the wing. Then he dives into the middle of the flock of decoys and, selecting, one of them, uses it as a shield.

Fire and Dogs are Greatest Menace to Dwindling Deer

P. S. Lovejoy, State game refuge supervisor, claims his investigations of game covers throughout Michigan has convinced him that the four greatest obstacles confronting perpetuation of deer, in the order of their seriousness, are the forest fire, stray and unrestrained dogs, timber cutting and finally poaching.

For the last few months Mr. Lovejoy has been examining large tracts of wild land, much of it swamp growth, above Saginaw and Muskegon so that the conservation department can make suitable selections for refuges and winter yarding areas.

From observations Mr. Lovejoy states that in most of the extensive yarding places in Lower Michigan the deer number about 100 to every 80 acres during the winter months.

Burned Haystack Hides Murder, Police Suspect

That the burning of a stack of straw on land owned by William Feichtenbiner, a mile east of Ashley, was done to hide murder, is the opinion of Sheriff J. D. Helman, who has sent to Ann Arbor charred remains of what is thought to be a human skull and other bones in an effort to determine if they are those of a person or an animal.

The discovery was made by Nathaniel Russell, who works the land and who notified the sheriff. Tracks of an automobile from the road to the stack and retur nwere plainly visible in the field. An old stack close to the road had been fired, but officials are of the opinion it burned too slow to hide veidence of the crime, which, they think, accounts for the firing of the new straw stacked about 30 rods farther from the road.

Get Man After 6 Years

It took six years to find their man when Detroit police arrested Dan Ciubotari, 27 years old, in connection with the wounding of Patrolman Sereno Brader six years ago. Ciubotari was arrested after, it is said, he was heard to boast that he once shot a policeman. Brader was wounded when he was called to quell a disturbance in June, 1920. He still is a member of the force.

All-American Grid Star Began Career, Sandow His Hero

Benny Friedman, All-American leader of the Michigan football team, entered athletics as an emulator of Sandow and the bulbous persons whose advertisements appear in the physical culture magazines.

Benny wanted to be a strong man. In a Cleveland grade school he practiced lifting a 49-pound weight. The janitor, a powerful Irishman, could lift the weight easily, and by watching him Benny found that the whole thing was a trick of the wrists.

At that time Friedman had no interest in football. He wanted to become a Samson and he worked with dumbells and weights exclusively. By the time he entered the gridiron sport he had so developed his fingers and wrists that he could snap off 35-yard passes with the same quick overhand gesture that a catcher uses in pegging to second.

Corporations Hit by Ruling of State Supreme Court

Aroused by the great confusion that may result from the supreme court opinion outlawing nearly every corporation in the state, attorneys representing these organizations flocked to Lansing seeking a means of making legal outstanding contracts and business agreements executed since 1921.

The opinion is construed to mean that more than 16,000 corporations are operating illegally. The railroads and a few especially organized companies are excepted. Clare Retan, deputy attorney-general, said today that a further study of the banking laws is necessary to decide whether banks are also suspended and outstanding notes cannot be enforced.

The high court ruled that the corporation acts passed by the 1921 legislature require each company to file two annual reports. One report is required to conform with the corporation law itself, and the other under the corporation tax law. The companies have been filing only one report, former Attorney-General Merlen Wiley having ruled that this was sufficient.

Throw on the Brakes When Wheels Spin in Mud

When trying to get a car out of a mudhole, put the engine in low, go slow, and drive straight ahead without turning the steering wheel. If the wheels start spinning, put on the emergency brakes just enough to stop the spin. That will frequently enable them to take hold. If it is possible to get any old rope, board, bushes, sacks or even a quantity of paper, and put it under the wheels to help give traction. It is also advised to apply chains before tackling wet or muddy roads.

Rattletrap Autos on Roads Called Menace

The automobile that is allowed to deteriorate into such a condition that its operation on the public street or highway is a distinct hazard to human life may soon be ruled off the road.

Society has been active in removing from the common thoroughfare those humans who are regarded as a menace and it most likely will do the same thing to the rundown automobile when it becomes full aware of the enormous proportion of accidents that are caused by cars in such condition.

Examination of Sick Moose Shows Plague

Examination of a cow moose caught and killed after its peculiar actions had been observed some time, indicated the nature of its ailment to be hemorrhagic septicemia, which, it is believed, may have been responsible for the death of other specimens under puzzling circumstances during the last few years.

The moose, acting strangely in its wild environment, was captured and corralled and several days' observation established the fact that it was not normal.

Michigan to Attempt Co-op. Egg Marketing

Co-operative marketing of eggs is going to be given a trial in southeastern Michigan in the near future.

The success of the procedure of northwestern Ohio in selling their eggs co-operatively, has stimulated interest among their neighbors in Michigan.

Pontiac Man Claims Champion Mushroom

E. J. Elkins, Jr., of Pontiac, claims the discovery of the champion mushroom of Michigan for 1926. The mushroom weighed two pounds and was found near Pontiac.

FURS AT PEAK IN LOVELY DESIGNS

Fur wraps were never lovelier than they are this season. The evolution of the fur coat from the bulky garments which kept our grandmothers warm to the present day slim and supple models is most interesting. And, time was when only a few kinds of our were used to fashion these enviable wraps—but now there are almost as many kinds of skins used as the proverbial leopard's spots.

Straight line coats remain one of the most popular styles of the mode. The newest coats, however, have dolman sleeves and notched shawl collars. Some of the new and good looking models have the small Crosby collar and tuxedo fronts of contrasting fur as the trimming. Then there are turn-back cuffs, pirate cuffs, pointed yokes and fancy pockets which add interest to the plainer types of coat.

Ermine is very good this season — the exquisite white ermine trimmed with white or red fox or darker ermine for evening and the lovely cocoa or blond ermine for general wear. Persian lamb as a coat material is again in the limelight and the younger set are buying these coats in black with black fox collar and cuffs. Krimmer, which is a youthful looking fur, is new and popular. The striking coats of leopard skin are still in the mode and are trimmed with brown seal, red fox or Hudson to give a softening effect.

White and black monkey fur is a new offering for the coming season, both as a trimming and for the entire coat. Otter is another fur which lends itself admirably to the new styles. Kid ermine is rich looking and at the same time not expensive. Antelope fashions a coat that is a bit "different." Panther is in the same category. Moleskin is evtremely popular, both in the lovely soft grey shade and in the dyed models for evening.

Muskrat is still be worn, but because of the scarcity of this fur is not so popular as last winter. Once upon a time millinery was the item elegante of the ensemble and entire costumes were planned about the luxuriousness of a twenty-inch willow plume or a jewelled head-dress. But now we have literally transferred the jewels and feathers to our feet and the shoes form the nucleus about which the costume is assembled.

The kid ensemble, consisting of hat, bag and shoes to match, is one of the most recent innovations. One particularly smart set is of black kid and grey snakeskin. The hat is of the small brimless type with a high crushed crown which is flattering to almost any type of face because the soft kid drapes in folds just like a piece of lustrous silk. A single band of snakeskin encircles it and a similar piece straps the bag which is of the flat envelope pattern. But the slippers are the really distinctive item of this ensemble—sabot strap pumps of black kid with a tiny perforated design running from front to back, a heel of startling height and a wide sabot strap of snakeskin.

All of which brings us to the unprecedented popularity of black this season—or ebony—a term we are borrowing from Paris.

Grass Lake Girl Among Captives of China Bandits

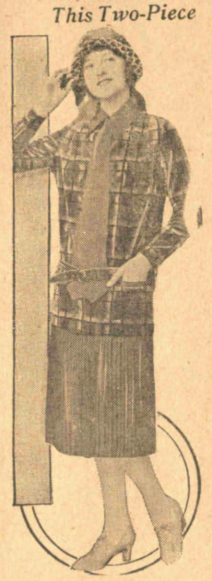
Miss Lydia Koebbe, one of three American missionaries kidnaped by Chinese bandits, is a native of Grass Lake, Mich. She had evidently feared some such fate in war-torn China, because recently she sent Christmas presents to her parents with a letter explaining that her life was so fraught with danger that she desired to give them a token of her affection at once.

Miss Koebbe and a party of nine other missionaries were attacked by the Chinese while sailing on the Yangtze river towards their station at Shenchowfu, in Honan province.

Instead of peeling potatoes for boiling, cut a narrow strip entirely around the center of each. When they are cooked it will be found that the skins will slip off without any trouble at all.

First thing we know, the traffic laws will have to be extended to the North pole.

Popular Red's Prominent in This Two-Piece



Red is the prevailing color in this smart two-piece frock. The overblouse is red and green plaid velvet with collar and tie of red crepe de chine and red leather belt.

Ford Control of D. T. & I. Attacked By Minority Group

Henry Ford attacked in a brief filed with the interstate commerce commission by minority stockholders of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad for alleged flagrant disregard of the rights of others in the management of his railroad interests.

The brief supports the decision of Examiner Molster of the commission who reported adversely on the application of the Detroit & Ironton railroad, entirely owned by the Ford interests, to acuire the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton by purchase of capital stock at a fixed price. This is another chapter in the four-year fight which has been waged by minority stockholders, owning only about 2 per cent of the stock in the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton to block the passage of outright ownership to Mr. Ford.

New Campus Rules Designed to Put Hazing in Discards

Hazing in its most violent forms will be taboo at Michigan State college from now on, if a new plan of enforcing campus traditions devised by the student council proves successful. Names of freshmen who refuse to obey the rules of behavior laid down by the college, will be posted in prominent places about the campus, and punishment will be of a public nature.

This method was adopted in order to avoid the constant petty squabbles which have occurred in the past when individuals or groups of second-year students have tried to force freshmen to follow traditions. As first-year students usually resent such persuasion, only a series of small skirmishes results, and the violated rules remain unobeyed.

Self-appointed ministers of vengeance among the second-year students will fare as badly as disobedient freshmen. If they are reported, they will be dealt with by the student council and a faculty committee on discipline, and their punishment may be as severe as expulsion from college.

To prevent soft material from puckering when sewing it on the machine, put strips of newspaper under it and sew through both material and paper. The paper is easily removed and a smooth seam results.

ACTIVE BUSINESS IN AUTUMN SEEN

Signs are not wanting of a continuance of active business during the remainder of the autumn. General economic conditions are sound, making for stability and wholesomeness in both industry and trade. Caution and conservatism still rule in business transactions despite the fact that good times have prevailed for two years. One of the healthy signs of the times is the way in which business men are applying corrective measures as soon as an unhealthy condition develops.

In some of the larger cities building contracts have been falling off, but the total volume of the country is holding up well. The building outlook in Michigan continues good. Attention is again being focused on credit installments, especially with regard to luvuries. The business world is doing some sober thinking about this very point right now. No objection is made, of course, to the purchase of luxuries on the installment plan providing the purchaser sets aside at the same time a reasonable portion of his income as savings.

But it is not difficult to be optimistic about the business outlook. Our national income is now $60,000,000,000 a year. We have 14,000,000 investors in this country and the number is increasing. There is practically no overproduction. Commodity prices are well stabilized. The employment situation is generally satisfactory. Prospects for a large Christmas trade were never better. Crops, although somewhat injured by excessive rains and cold weather, give promise of a good yield.

Good news still emanates from the automobile industry. Most plants are operating at capacity, although a few show a falling off in production. On the whole, output is being well maintained. August's production, which was 424,394 passenger cars and trucks, was only a few thousand under that of April when the high mark of the year was reached.

Sunshine Is Declared Need of State's Crops

D. A. Seeley, meteorologist at the Michigan State College, made the following report on the condition of Michigan crops:

"Much wheat and rye already have been sown and some are up, the grain having germinated rapidly. Corn cutting and silo filling are becoming general in the southern counties and bean harvest has progressed rapidly during the last few days.

"Much corn, potatoes, sugar beets and truck crops are yet immature, however, and two or three weeks of warm weather with sunshine are needed, especially in the northern part of the state. Fruit is abundant and the price is low, much rotting on the ground."

"The Wonder of It All"

Harry J. Malone Jr.

Hasn't the beauty and wonder ever marveled you?
The bird on wing in the heavens of blue,
The trickling waters dancing over the rocks,
While the heavens caress the mountain tops.
The swaying leaves in the glistening sun,
That shade the ant on its homeward run.
The distant warble of an unknown bird,
That isn't seen, but merely heard.
These are the wonders that prove to me,
That God on high directs and sees.

It is the mighty hand of Him,
Who sends the rain to temper the wind,
Who sees the blade of unsprouted grass,
Peep its head and humbly ask,
For all the sunshine, wind and rain,
For it doesn't want to peep in vain.
This blade of grass majestic and proud,
Demands its kingdom among the crowd,
And raises its head in thanks to Him,
And shouts a prayer of joyous rythm.

Death Marks the Passing of Last of Old Lumberjacks

With the recent death of Alex Horton in Aberdeen, Wash., it is believed the last of the upper peninsula's old-time lumbermen is gone. Horton conducted logging operations in the Keweenaw peninsula pine forests 45 years ago and supervised the cutting away of nearly all of that district's famous white pine.

Born in New Brunswick, Horton came to the Lake Superior district as a young man and was engaged as woods foreman along the Traverse river, where the timber was unusually large. Later he had charge of all the Hebbard-Thurber company's operations in the Keweenaw woods. The company operated the largest mill in the district at Pequaming, where a Ford mill now stands.

Only the strongest and most agile were able to hold down jobs with the Horton outfit. A few of the old "jacks" who worked for the well-known Alex Horton remained to relate the tales of his lumber operations. Horton supervised the last big drive on the Montreal river in Keweenaw and through a series of dams drove a river of pine logs down to the mouth of the Montreal on the east coast of the peninsula where rafters corraled the logs and towed them across to the mill saws where they were converted into pine planking.

One of the most powerful men in the lumber camps, Horton was master of his men and had with him as assistants his brothers, Charles, who now resides in Portland, Ore., and the late Joseph Horton. In stature they were giants and often found their strength useful in breaking up payday night brawls among the lumber jacks.

Men like to be called "different," while women crave to be called clever.

Educator Leaves for Africa to Get Location of Stars

Starting toward the completion of task of the years, Prof. William J. Hussey of the University of Michigan have sailed from New York for South Africa. With him are Mrs. Hussey and Prof. and Mrs. Richard A. Rossiter. The party expects to spent more than a year at the top of a lonely hill in the Orange Free State where Prof. Hussey will direct the Lamont telescope across and around the southern skies in search of the double stars of that part of the solar hemisphere.

Dr. Hussey has completed a map of the double stars of the north, has listed them by the thousand, and a quarter of a century ago he started planning for this trip. It became a possibility when Robert P. Lamont, Chicago, arranged to finance the building of the 27-inch telescope that already has been sent on to South Africa.

The making of the lens was delayed by the World war and then by the death of the workmen selected to do the polishing, and it was not until last year that the instrument was complete.

Youthful Rider in Luck

A pony ridden by Ray Shoaf, thirteen, was killed by electricity at New Castle, Pa., but the boy escaped injury. As he rode by a pole, the youngster says, his pony fell and he jumped off. He went to get help, thinking that the pony had tripped, but the men who went to assist found that the body of the pony was charged with electricity. It is believed that the saddle and the boy's rubber-soled shoes acted as insulators and saved him from death.

—19—

"You mean Mr. Baxter? Yes, I saw him. He has gone down to Coyote."

The repression of his tone drew Maria's attention. She turned and looked at him, the lamp, unshaded, in her hand, its light full on Caleb's face. She gasped and then a sort of baleful joy flitted over her swarthy face.

"Madre de Dios! You met heem. Seguro! An' you fought weeth heem. Bueno! I hope you spoiled for heem that han'some face. May he never return—that Baxter! Eef he does, eet is better for heem that he does not meet Padilla. Si, for Padilla weel not use his feests. An' now you mus' wash that blood from your face, senor. I weel breeng warm water to the room where you sleep before. After you eat, you weel find all ready."

Her speech, fierce at the start, had softened. She bestowed a nod of approval on Caleb, her eyes kindly, and swept out. It was plain that Baxter had lost favor at El Nido. It was equally plain that Maria had meant to convey that much to Caleb, together with her emphatic indorsement of the fight that he had not contradicted.

The coffee and sandwiches finished, Caleb went through the patio to the room, finding a lamp, warm water and towels. He made himself more presentable, though the bruises and abrasions where the steel wire had marked his flesh still persisted. Cleansed and refreshed, he lit his pipe and strolled through the patio to where the three cars were parked, Kennedy's, Baxter's roadster and Conklin's machine. Conklin had a chauffeur, his practice was evidently larger and more profitable than that of the physician from Coyote. The man spoke to him civilly. He was examining Baxter's car.

"Anything wrong with it?" asked Caleb.

"Nothing wrong with the car. Only with the bean of the guy that owns it. Let his battery run down. No juice. The Spanish dame says he cussed it up and down when he tried to start it. Nothin' doin' an' he has to hoof it way down the canyon."

It seemed to piece up now—the idea that Baxter had offended Betty Clinton and had been summarily dismissed. So summarily, that, finding his car batteries useless, he had decided to leave the car to be sent for and stalked off down canyon in a mood that Caleb had been ready to match.

"Mr. Warner?"

Doctor Conklin had come out of the house. Caleb joined him.

"There's nothing more that I can do. I must get back to Paloma. I've suggested that you go with me. There's a nurse needed. It would be a good idea to get Burton, though Kennedy will stay, and is doing all that can be done. The trouble culminates rapidly, but Miss Clinton naturally wants Burton.

"He may not be able to get here in time. It's touch and go. Clinton is not a strong man. He got caught in the hills in the storm. Drenched! Then his horse wrenched a fetlock in fording the swollen stream and Clinton led it home. D—d foolishness! I have suggested that you can get in touch with Burton as soon as you reach a phone. I can get you to Paloma in time for the ten o'clock train—last one tonight. And you may be able to arrange about a nurse. She'll have to come back with Burton in his car."

"Of course," Caleb replied, "I'll see that a nurse arrives. If you'll give me some addresses and names to round up if I can't get one through Burton."

"Good. I knew you'd tackle it, Warner. Told her so. Hop in. We haven't too much time."

They started without a chance for Caleb to see the girl again. But he was in her service and she would know that.

At Paloma station with a few minutes to spare, the doctor wrote down the address of a nurses' home and the names of the women he preferred on such a case.

"If you can't get any of these, try the second address," he said. "Mention Burton's name with the case. Carries more weight than mine. And get that nurse over here tonight. If you can't raise Burton here's a note that will get you oxygen—two tanks—that must come with the nurse. It may make all the difference. Here comes your train. Good luck to you."

Caleb got a working wire to Golden at the Oakville Ferry and he let the boat go, putting in the twenty minutes before the next one to making arrangements. He got a nurse and told her to hold herself in readiness. He also got the oxygen. Burton was on a case and could not leave.

Arrived across the bay he found car and nurse awaiting him. Fifteen minutes saw the oxygen loaded in the car and they caught the midnight ferry for the return. They slid off the boat to the apron at Oakville Estuary at the first moment and went rocketing through the night to Paloma and onto the sideroad, plowing up that with the full energy of the high-powered car, rushing across the valley and sounding the strident klaxon to let the ranch know that they were coming.

Kennedy stood waiting to meet them. "It's touch and go," he said. "Where's the oxygen? Did you get it? Thank God! It may save him. Come, nurse."

Maria came out for the nurse's grip. "She stay here tonight," she said.

"Of course. I am going back for Doctor Burton. How is Mr. Clinton?"

"Ah, he is seeck—seeck! I pray—but I do not know, senor. I am 'fraid." Her face worked with the emotion expressed in her voice, the car lamps showed her eyes red with weeping.

At four o'clock Caleb got in touch with Doctor Burton, sleepless from long vigil.

"A cup of coffee and I'm off," he said. "It's over one way or another by this but I'll go, of course. Clinton and his girl are old friends as well as patients. As for you, young man," he added suddenly bending his gaze on Caleb, "you're all in. What the devil have you been up to? A hot bath and bed for you. Instantly. You look as as if you had been taking part in a riot."

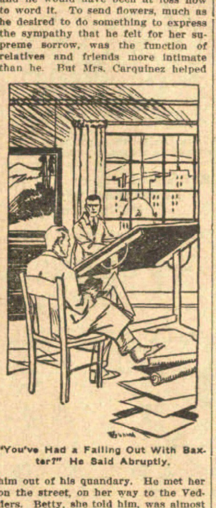
Caleb felt like it. Despite his anxiety, he succumbed to sleep in the cab. He dropped into unconsciousness the moment he stretched out between the sheets. The sun was flooding the room when he awakened. It was a glorious morning, vital, hopeful. Caleb went immediately to his telephone.

"Are there any messages for me?" he asked the operator. The girl gave him the office number of Doctor Burton, that had been left with her and, on his request, got him the connection. The doctor's office nurse spoke briefly. Caleb hung up the hook softly. Betty Clinton's father was dead.

CHAPTER XIII

Baxter Strikes

Caleb did not feel that his present relations admitted of his writing a letter of condolence to Betty Clinton and he would have been at loss how to word it. To send flowers, much as he desired to do something to express the sympathy that he felt for her supreme sorrow, was the function of relatives and friends more intimate than he. But Mrs. Carquinez helped him out of his quandary. He met her on the street, on her way to the Vedders. Betty, she told him, was almost prostrated, but was now bearing up bravely.



"You've Had a Falling Out With Baxter?" He Said Abruptly.

"She takes things standing up," said the artist's wife. "She told me of all you did for them the night her father was taken ill. She is very grateful. I shall tell her that I have seen you," she ended, as she shook hands. "Is there any message you would like me to give her?"

"My sympathy, my wish that I could do something. That is all."

Hinckley had a suite of offices in the building of the Crystal Springs Water company. He turned over to Caleb one of these rooms with its draughting equipment, and there Caleb worked hard over his plans while Hinckley, with the engineering staff, was making fuller investigation across the bay with a view to confirmation of the project. Options were already being carefully negotiated. A few days should see the deal assured and actual work commenced in the field.

Caleb caught only a glimpse or two of Mary Morgan. Cox's offices where she worked in her capacity of assistant to the president's secretary were on another floor from Caleb's room. He knew, through his bank, that she had received the money, he imagined that she had given notice to the company and was waiting for its expiration before going away.

Baxter had seemingly dropped out of sight. Caleb had changed his living quarters at the beginning of the month, which was a week after the meeting in the canyon, and he had not met him, though he had occasionally heard him leaving or entering his room, or moving about it. He knew that Baxter was "posted" on the delinquency board at the Altruists for dues and dining-room chits. It was plain that the sale of Hermanos valley had fallen through.

Cox came one morning into Caleb's office and discussed general progress for a few moments before he took a seat across from the high stool on which Caleb worked at his drawings.

"You've had a falling out with Baxter?" he said abruptly. "He's after your scalp and seems to be tolerably cocksure he's going to get it," he went on, not waiting for comment. "He came to me this morning with a proposition that involved, with our acceptance of it, your dismissal, or at least the relegation of you to a subordinate position, so far as your identification with the project is concerned. I was busy and I made an appointment for three o'clock. I should like you to be present."

"Thanks," said Caleb. "I'll be very glad of the opportunity."

He did not offer and Cox did not seem to expect any explanations. He could not tell exactly what Baxter had for weapons but he rather fancied he knew the principal one that would be employed—and he was ready with a parry that would prove a bit disconcerting. This weapon was a boomerang he had long known the existence of and looked forward to seeing it launched only to return, and strike the thrower. It was only since his talk with Mary Morgan at Haight's that he had considered Baxter as likely to use it.

Baxter was the type of man who would never blame himself under any conditions. To the score against Caleb he would undoubtedly set the denial of the loan, the loss of the Hermanos valley sale, his dismissal by Betty Clinton on the night of her father's sickness and death, and the fight on the bridge in which he had been first worsted and then rescued by Caleb. The rescue would be an ignominy. It was doubtful whether Baxter had been normal since his mother's marriage. His brain had been under stimulation or depression of alcohol—practically continually. He had brooded over his reverses and now Caleb was placed as sole author of all his troubles, the target of his vindictiveness against conditions.

Prepared as he was in a measure for the interview, it struck him that here was a test to see how far he could depend upon Cox where the company's best interests were at stake. Cox knew about the boomerang. It was the decent thing for Cox to do to ask him to be present. Mighty decent.

Caleb's face was grim when he entered Cox's office at three o'clock, his eyes were narrowed and his lean jaw jutted, bossed with tense muscles. Cox pushed over cigars with a greeting genially modulated as usual. There was a difference, though; Cox's eyes were cold as shadow ice. As Caleb lit his cigar in his chair the buzzer sounded and Cox took up his desk phone with a little nod at Caleb. The nod was confidential—warning, despite the frosty eyes.

"All right, show him in," he said.

Baxter entered, jaunty, well-dressed, his head held confidently. But he looked the worse for wear, for all his mien. He smelled of the barber shop, but massage had not changed the flabbiness of his putty-colored flesh nor taken the rings from beneath slightly bloodshot eyes. He stared hard at Caleb and then sneered.

Again Caleb recollected Field's prediction. It looked as if it was swiftly coming to pass. Baxter's eyes had lost humanity; there was no more soul in them than there would have been in artificial orbs of transparent glass back of which crimson light was burning. The sneer was more of a snarl, that of a beast. His whole face was animal.

"I understood this was to be a confidential interview," he said.

Some Facts About Washington Shaft

Now that the Washington monument is temporarily closed to the public, for the installation of a new elevator, it is but natural, perhaps, that some of the facts that are associated with it and which have been taken for granted should interestingly be recalled. For instance, not everyone knows that the number going up the monument in a single day has often exceeded 10,000, or that there is not an officially inscribed line anywhere on the monument indicative even of the fact that the structure is in honor of George Washington. The shaft, by the way, was started in 1848, but after 150 feet or so of the total 555 were completed, there was a long period of suspension, due largely to the fact that the movement to finance it by popular subscription collapsed. The present simplicity of the structure was not originally contemplated, for around the base of the obelisk there was to have been a circular colonnaded building, while a decorated shaft with cornices and up-and-down indentures, etc, was part of the design.—Christian Science Monitor.

Accepting Apology

A lively discussion between two men led to a row when one told the other he lied. The offended one rushed forward and they clinched. The other man exclaimed: "I reiterate that you're a liar!"

To the astonishment of those around, the aggrieved man let go his hold. "Oh, well," he said, "I accept the apology. If a man says he reiterates that's all a gentleman can ask."

He did not understand why the bystanders laughed, but the fight was off.—Boston Transcript.

Initiative Wins

When initiative is absent, we become mechanical beings with no keenness for advancement; and if all were afflicted that way the world would cease to progress; for we are here today just because men of initiative have acted in the past. So it is well to be buoyant and brisk to take an other step which will bring a benefit both to ourselves and others.

There are thousands of things in life that are ours if we will but claim them; but we have failed because we have never heard their call, or thought the call was to someone else and not to us. We need to arouse ourselves and go in and possess, otherwise we shall be left behind.—Exchange.

Figures on Future World Population

Sir George H. Knibbs gives different estimates of the possible population of the world, ranging from 2,942,000,000—if the world's existing population increased in ratio of O. R. Baker's estimate of possible increase in the United States agricultural area—to 9,792,000,000—if all existing arable land in the world could support three persons per acre—and a final maximum of 13,440,000,000 if an average of a person per two and one-half acres applied to the whole land surface of the world.

Assuming that the present standard of living is retained, together with the present national prejudices and egoisms, Sir George considers it doubtful whether the population will ever reach the 5,000,000,000 limit. If man better co-ordinates his effort so as to involve less expense in nonproductive effort, then possibly the advance of science may enable the 7,000,000,000 limit to be reached.

Grand Rapids Man Again Well and Strong
Victim of Chest Pains, Nervous Indigestion, and Run-Down Condition, Finds Relief. Strength Restored. Praises Tanlac

Grant B. Sculley, 1423 Turner Avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich., foreman of the U. S. Gypsum Co., says: "When I was about ready to give up after losing 28 lbs. and live the rest of my days in pain I began taking Tanlac.

"My strength had weakened. Sharp pains that spread across my chest kept me in constant misery. And my stomach was so upset that I couldn't eat. The very sight of food sickened me. At noon would take a look at my lunch and lay it aside.

"Soon after beginning the Tanlac treatment pain vanished. My old strength returned. I began to have a great appetite and ate everything without a sign of trouble. Tanlac certainly put me on my feet, purified my blood and gave me a general overhauling and building up. I'll go the limit in endorsing Tanlac."

Tanlac does relieve the causes of pain. It conquers ailments and helps build up strength and free the system of poison caused by constipation and sluggish liver. It is Nature's remedy made from roots, barks and herbs.

Banish sickness from your life and enjoy the benefits of strength and golden health. Begin taking Tanlac. The first bottle usually brings results that will surprise you. Ask your druggist for Tanlac—today. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Clean Up Holds Corn Borer Check Hopse

That final hope for checking the rapid advances of the European corn borer rests largely with the "cleanup" in infested areas, is the opinion of Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the entomology department at the M. S. C.

Professor Pettit summarized the state corn borer situation last week during a talk delivered over the college radio station, WKAR. Calling attention to the seriousness of the imported crop pest and the fact that it has continued to spread "on schedule", Pettit outlined informally the most recent developments in connection with corn borer control work and experimentation.

That parasites, important, as they are as a control measure, can be counted on to destroy only a small percentage of the borers was brought out by the M. S. C. specialist. No other natural agency or "mysterious source" was seen as likely to control the pest.

Our only hope lies in getting very busy and simply killing the pest by main strength, said Pettit. Aside from the adoption of practices unfavorable to the borer, and insistance on early cutting, low cutting, shredding or ensiling, or the cutting of stalks into sections a half inch or less in size, the control of the pest is going to be accomplished by the cleanup. By this I mean a real cleanup of all crop remnants, stubble, weeds, rubbish and trash.

In other words, follow out literally the program of the United States Bureau of Entomology and the Michigan State Department of Agriculture, whose directions are identical.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

The Brighter side of Prohibition

The darker side of prohibition enforcement has been stressed so much in the daily press, that it is good to read a graphic presentation of the brighter side. Irving Fisher, Professor of Economics at Yale and a recognized authority, has given to the public a new book "Prohibition at its Worst," in which he shows that the statistics presented by the Moderation League and wet propagandists are misleading. Liquor consumption today he assures us, is probably not over one-tenth of what it was in pre-Prohibition times. He says further that enforcement must be regarded as "worth while purely as an economic investment, even if it cost a billion dollars," and that New York's referendum is "not only futile but insincere."

Conceding the fact that constitutional Prohibition came upon the country when large sections, especially in the Eastern states were unprepared for it, he contends that its results have been such as to justify its continued enforcement. The Dry Law, he tells us, has cut drinking ninety per cent.; arrests for drunkenness have substantially decreased, and the drop in the number of first offenders since the act went into effect has been a substantial one.

Professor Fisher's book is timely. In these turbulent days, many good people are apt to take the gloomy view; but the facts as they are now presented from a reliable source, are so encouraging that we should no longer be misled by exaggerated presentations of the situation, but should find reason for courage and confidence in the ultimate triumph of right.

Let the good work go on! Don't worry about the boasts of the "wets," and their loud-sounding tom-toms. We shall yet see the day when our prayers that we may become "a Sober Nation," have been abundantly answered.

THE LORD'S DAY AND THE LAW

That the effort to bring about court action against the desecration of the Lord's Day by the opening of the Philadelphia Sesqui Centennial Exhibition buildings to "worldly employments" on Sunday has not fallen through, is made clear in a decision handed down by the Dauphin County Court a few days ago. From a press dispatch we learn that in the decision which is based upon a law passed in 1794, the Court finds that the operation of the exposition on Sunday is not a work of "necessity or charity," and that the recreations and amusements carried on within the Exposition grounds are maintained in violation of the old law, which specifically prohibits worldly amusements on the Lord's Day. Counsel for the Exposition states that an appeal will be taken.

We will now have an opportunity to observe whether the spirit of the founders, who had a wholesome reverence for the day of worship and rest, still prevails, or if it has given way to the modern view which, instead of singing: "O Day of Rest and Gladness! O Day of joy and light!" would transform the Lord's Day into one of pleasure-seeking and sordid money making.—The Christian Herald.

Farm Tax Figures Sought By M. S. C.

The ratio between the earning capacity of Michigan farms and their assessed valuation for the past seven years will be sought through questionnaires which are being mailed out over the state by the department of agricultural economics at the M. S. C.

Figures received in answer to these question forms, and the ratios determined upon, will then be available to any individual or organization interested in the problem of farm land taxation, according to R. Wayne Newton, research associate in the M. S. C. economics department, who is conducting the tax survey.

A total of 30,000 of the questionnaires will be distributed to Michigan farm owners, in order to get information from every section of the state. The divisions of Finance and of Land Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture are said to be cooperating in the work.

Colonel E. H. Kerr

Of Somerset Township

Candidate for Sheriff, spoke on the streets of the village Saturday evening in front of J. M. Williams' store to a good sized audience. His story was well received. He says "If you don't think I am the best man for the job don't elect me." His talk in full is as follows:

This summer, before the time to file nominating petitions had expired, and I had just about decided to run for Sheriff, AGAIN, some intimate friends said,- "You're crazy,- Don't you know that this County is normally 75 percent Republican, and you almost a stranger and a Democrat, How can you figure to even come close?"

My reply to these well meant criticisms was invariably the same: "I am going into this thing solely on my record and I shall do my best to get that record before the voters prior to election; if I can do that I am not afraid that Party politics will be allowed to defeat me."

Seriously now, my friends, what difference can it possibly make, whether your town and County Officers are Democrats or Republicans? Do you honestly think that a man's party affiliations can make him a tiny bit better Supervisor, or a better Coroner or a more efficient Sheriff? Is it a fact that simply because I am a Democrat, And For No Other Reason some of you have decided that I could not possibly be your next Sheriff? And is it also true that simply because my opposing candidate is a Republican, AND FOR NO OTHER REASON A FEW OF YOU HAVE DECIDED to support me? My fellow citizens, in my humble opinion, such reasoning is unsound, you are trying to register a hit on the far distant bulls-eye of Official efficiency, with your rifle pointed only in the general direction of the mark, your sights unset, your wind gauge forgotten and no attention paid to the velocity of the ammunition. No, my friends, Official efficiency cannot be reached by any such indirect methods, Therefore I am more than certain that every thinking man and woman in this County will agree with me, when I say to you that mere "party" cannot possibly show a difference favorable or otherwise, providing of course that each opposing Candidate has equal education, ability and good sense, and the same training, the same fitness for the particular position and the same decent past record, if these things were within the realm of reason, within the scope of human possibilities.

Now couple to all these things the stubborn fact that Township and County Officers are in no sense ADMINISTRATORS,—that they cannot prescribe policies nor change existing ones,—That all their official acts, are and very rightly so, dictated solelyand controlled fully by existing law; and you have the full force of my convention in a nut shell. In Town and County elections more attention should be paid to personality than to "Party,"—More weight given to proven ability and past record than to personal politics.

Let us consider this question from another angle. You, Mr. Banker when you require help in your bank and an applicant for the position stands before you;- You carefully examine his references and credentials and you question him thoroughly; What are you trying to find out? Whether he is scrupuously honest, a first class mathematician and bookkeeper,- Whether he has the personality which will win new friends for your bank,- Whether he is morally clean and Trustworthy?, Or whether he is a Democrat or a Republican or maybe a Socialist!

You, Mr. Merchant, need help in your store. Do you enquire diligently into the applicants "Party" record and how many votes he controls? Or do you interest yourself with his ability to sell your goods and wait on your trade as courteously and efficiently as you your self could do? No, Ten thousand No's Business is never so conducted, the merchant who asked the former and ignored the later question, would soon be bankrupt.

You Mr. Farmer need a hired man,- We will have to suppose that one could be found, for I know from personal experience, that like Angel's visits, they are scarce; Anyhow just SUPPOSE you could find one, and that he was a stranger to you. You would begin to find out all you could about him before you even considered making conclusive arrangements with him. You would be interested to know whether he could milk a cow and how quickly he could do it; you would want to know if he understood the care of horses, and whether he could run a Tractor. You would be glad to find out all about his Loyality, his ability to stick to a job until it was through;- his experience in general farm work, and his moral character as well. And Mrs. Farmer would no doubt want to know about his wife and family,- How many children go to school, Do they go to Sunday School? What Church do they belong to, and are the children allowed to play with matches? All these things and maybe more would be of vital interest and would certainly be considered before you finally made the deal with him. Let us further suppose that all of the above could be answered satisfactorily, then the next thing you would do would be tell him how many dollars and how much wood, and how much pork, and how many potatoes, etc, you can afford to pay him per year.

But Wait! Haven't you forgotten something?

"No Sir" you will say, " I know all I care to know about this man."

"Well" I ask, "How about his politics?"

"Not a bit interested," you will reply, "he appears to be a first class farm hand, intelligent, honest, and of good character I am not interested at all in his politics." And my friends, that is just exactly how it is done, every day, in all kinds of business, One hundred cents worth of farm labor for a dollar bill, and a dollar's worth of clerical work for one hundred cents. The employer expects to get no more, and the employee expects to give no less. A STIPULATED job, by a SPECIALIZED man, at a SPECIFIC price and politics, or "Party" absolutely ignored. Of course why not? You have the man you want for the place you want him, at a price you can afford to pay. Just good, common, every day business, that's all.

Every one of you registered voters, man or woman within the sound of my voice, is a partner, a stockholder, as it were, in a business, a big business, an important business, the business of running the County of Hillsdale. You have advertised for help, your long brown notices are posted conspiciously in every precinct, you need help, persons to fill your County offices for the next two years. You are going to have a "Stockholders" meeting, let us call it, on Tuesday, November 2nd. an all day Session, and then and there you are going to choose men or women for these places Men or women to represent you, to act for you, in all the affairs pertaining to the County. On that important day, Mr. Stockholder, what are YOU going to say to the various applicants for different positions? Are you going to ask 'What are your politics?", and if they happen to agree with your own, "swallow them all" jointly and collectively, hook line and sinker, without regard to efficiency, to fitness, or to training? Or, are you going to take the trouble to determine in advance each applicants fitness for the particular job he wants, and after due consideration, cast you vote for the best man, irrespective of PARTY or POLITICS.

Hillsdale County deserves, and should have the best, anything or anybody, short of BEST, should not be acceptable. WE can have men of that high standard, even in our County affairs, if we will but apply the simple rules adopted by Business everywhere, in selecting the men to fill our County and Township offices. These men, after they have taken the oath of office, are but PUBLIC SERVANTS, so why not apply the same standard of requirements to them, that you certainly would to those you employ privately. A STIPULATED job, a SPECIALIZED man, a SPECIFIC price, is just simply good business method, and should apply equally to farming, storekeeping, banking, or the business of running the Town or the County.

In local affairs, town and county elections, Party politics should be used only to bring the pick, the choice of the different parties, to the attention of the voters, the Citizens. At the conventions, and especially at the Primaries, we are all either Republicans, or Democrats, or something else. But at the General Elections, such as we are facing on Nov. 2nd., that's different, we are all first, Citizens, who pay the bills, Stockholders if you prefer that term, who share in the profits, if any, and dig up for the losses, and afterwards we are all just the same party men we were at the primaries. Efficiency, fitness, training education and experience, all should rank higher and take precedence over mere "party" relationship. It must be that the Legislators who framed our present election laws, had some such similar ideas, otherwise why did they provide a bank square before each and every name that appears on the Official Ballot? Why did they not stop when they had provided the circle at the top? Because they in their understanding wisdom, realized that the thinking public could not be fooled into believeing, that not even their own party, could always have the best men for all the jobs. They realized that occasionally some one of the opposite parties, would be able to name a better man, So they went ahead and provided the circle at the top of the ballott so you could express your party relations there, and then they provided a blank square in front of each candidate, so that if it were proven that the opposing party DID HAVE THE BEST MAN, you as a Citizen, as a Stockholder, could give him your support, easily and intelligently. A little "x" in the blank square, does the trick, and without regard to party.

My friends, up to now, we have been trying to keep from personalities. We have tried to speak as one man to other men and women, one voter to other voters, one stockholder to others, but let's get right to the point. You are going to hire a Sheriff, and before you stands an applicant for the job, consequently, if I take this opportunity to tell you something about myself, that it is your right to know, I'm sume you will forgive me in advance.

1st. I am a farmer, Somerset Township. I have rented and we lived on the Smith Farms, for the past 5 years.

2nd. I am proud to "Tell the World" that I am a Mason since 1908, Corregidor number 286, Manila P. I. A Knight of Pythias, for 4 years, and at present the Chancellor Commander of my Lodge, Addison, number 232. A Granger for 6 years and a Past Master of the Tri County Grange number 1691 of Somerset. I belong to the American Legion here in Hillsdale, as every world war veteran of the County should, and THAT'S ALL. I have never joined any others.

3rd. I base my claim for your favor at the polls, almost entirely upon my Military Record. I enlisted during the Spanish American War, as a private, 29th. U. S. Infantry, I served almost continuously until March 1920, when I resigned as a Lieut. Colonel Quartermaster Corps. Almost 20 years as Officer and Soldier. Almost 20 years of unceasing obedience, of unending respect for recognized authority and Military Law. First, learning to myself obey, and then as that all important lesson became a part of my very being, teaching others respect and obedience to constituted authority, and Military law is no respecter of persons, it applies alike to all who enter the Service, Rich or Poor, Learned or Uulearned, large or small, fat or thin, ALL, ALL, are alike and ALL DO obey without fear or favor or suffer the consequences.

Now really, folks, is Civil Law, as applied to the County and particularly to the Sheriff's Office, any different? Is'nt that the way you desire to see things in Our County? Respect for and cheerful obedience to ALL the laws by ALL of the people, ALL of the time, or swift and certain punishment for the guilty? It is certain that if you were to choose me for your Sheriff, things would have to be just that way. I do not know of any other method. Remember the intensive of 20 years, is not forgotten easily and is pretty apt to remain steadfast and secure, under all manner of conditions. I also know this, and any man who ever exercised even a Corporal's command in the Service will tell you the same, the Officer who was personally indifferent and at times actually disobedient to the law and regulation, would in turn have a command that was unruly, undisciplined, and therefore poorly trained. It did not matter whether your command was a Squad of 8 men or a Division of 28 thousand, the same rule held good—The example, set personally by the Commanding Officer, is much the easier to learn and follow, than his spoken Command, or his written order, and this simple little rule, which is a cardinal principle of successful Military Service, can and should as well, be applied in Civil affairs in these piping times of Peace. For show me a Prosecutor, who is himself slack and indifferent to any part of our law, and I will show you a County which is not being properly served. Show me a Sheriff, or a law enforcement Officer of any kind, who does not practice what he preaches, every day, all of the time, consistently and whole heartedly, and I will show you a People, who are paying for some thing that they do not get. There is much truth in this, Think it out for yourselves, and then let your conscience be your guide, on Election day.

I think that this is all that is necessary for you to know about me, in order that you can determine for your selves, whether I am the man you want, or not; However I would like to add that I am my own man, No clique, No ring, No person or No group of persons, shall be allowed to dictate to me my policies should I be successful in selling my services to you. And now I would like to leave you with just one of my personal opinions, take it or leave it for what it is worth. I believe that a really good Sheriff, or Prosecuting Attorney, or any other County Officer, as far as that is concerned should have NO opinion as to the fitness, the legality, the merits or the demerits of any existing law. That IT IS THE LAW is all that should concern them, and IF IT IS LAW, as such it is to be enforced with justice and impartiality. So firmly do I believe in this practice of law enforcement, that should a bill be passed and approved, FORBIDDING the USE OF MILK, I would be around the day it became effective, looking for milk bottles for evidence. The only way to derive the benefits from a good law, is by its enforcement. The only way to thoroughly reveal the ill effects of a "Bad" law, if such a thing could exist, is by the same careful conscientious and RIGID ENFORCEMENT. Believeing as I do, what good does it do me to tell you I will favor this law and will enforce such law. Friends, even as a simple citizen, I have no opinion, THEY ARE LAW, and as such they are to be obeyed and respected. As a Sheriff, my opinion would not change.

And now, dear friends, as you go from here, no doubt many of you will say, "Well that's politics, and of course all he said was inspired from purely selfish motives. "Political Propaganda, in other words. However I think you will find when you really think over some of the things I have told you, that there are certain elements of truth running through it, just as the veins and arteries of our physical bodies permeate our beings, with their life giving fluid. However, if you find these truths, give them the thought to which they are entitled, and please do this for me. Take the worthy Gentleman, who is my opponent for your favor, and myself. Hold us both up side by side, as it were to the clear undimed light of the sun. Turn on the spot light, get out the microscopes, and the X-Rays and submit us each to a real, a thorough examination. Look into our records, make a good job of it and then decide between us; and in reaching your decision, be business like, keep efficiency before you and party politics, the lowest, the least, the most unimportant qualification of the all.

Incentive

"Cold an' hunger," said Uncle Eben, "was put in de world to remind people dat dey's expected to do sumpin' in dis life besides sit around an' argue."—Washington Star.

Made Friends by Cold

So severely cold was March weather at Saranac Lake, N. Y., that rats went to roost with hens. When Mrs. Charles Marshall, a North Elba farmer's wife, fearing that her poultry might be chilled, visited her hen house just after dark, the light of the lantern revealed seven rats cuddling closely to the hens.

Day Begins at 5

The day begins at 5 a. m. in the House of the Good Shepherd, the children rising at 5:30, and at 6 o'clock the entire community gathers in the chapel for mass and morning prayers. Then follows a busy routine of school, dressmaking classes, work in the laundry for the older girls, and recreation. Night prayers are said at 8:30 p. m. and by nine o'clock the entire household is asleep.

So successful have the Sisters been in the operation of their laundry, their main source of income, and in disposing of their needle-work, that the institution is largely self-supporting. Last year, with expenditures of over $95,000, they asked the Community Fund for only $16,012.48.

Catholic Fore-ordination Attacked

The Ku Klux Klan is now engaged throughout Michigan in combatting the Catholic practice of blessing an unborn babe and fore-ordaining it to the service of Popery, which is a laudable underfaking to be sure. Doctor Hiram Evens of Washington D. C. who is the Imperial Wizard of the Klan is sponsor for the movement and it is claimed with mighty good authority that no sect or religious faith on this earth has the right to declare what an unborn babe shall be either as to religion or any other characteristic. We had heard the report some years ago that it had become customary for Priests to perform this interesting ceremony but we never have investigated the facts. Under such domination as that our entire citizenry would in a short time become subservient to the dogmas of Rome. There is little doubt but the statement is absolutely true, and if so should be at once stopped. The fact that a child is born or to be born of a Catholic mother or a Protestant mother has no bearing on its future career, and until that child becomes a living figure and is old enough to decide for itself, no power on earth or in heaven has the right to say which way it shall go. If this dogma could be made to hold, every child born of Catholic parents would be a slave shanghaied and impressed into the service of the Pope of Pome. We want no slavery in our land, we abandoned the slavery of human beings in 1864 and with the help of an overruling power we shall never allow it again. So much for decency. Here's hoping the Klan wipes the Pope a good swipe on this practice.

When a Child Turns on its Parent

HOW TO PREVENT FIRES

1

Matches — Be sure your match is out. Break it in two before you throw it away.

2

Tobacco—Be sure that pipe ashes and cigar or cigarette stubs are dead before throwing them away. Never throw them into brush, leaves or needles.

3

Making Camp—Before building a fire scrape away all inflammable material from a spot 5 feet in diameter. Dig a hole in the center and in it build your camp fire. Keep your fire small. Never build it against trees or logs or near brush.

4

Breaking Camp — Never break camp until your fire is out—dead out.

5

Brush Burning—Never burn slash or brush in windy weather or while there is the slightest danger that the fire will get away.

One tree will make a million matches,—and one of the million matches can turn on its parent and destroy it, and a million more giants of the forest with it.

A three-fold loss results:

(1) Property loss.

(2) State expense for fighting fires, $366,193.33.

(3) An ideal vacation land denuded of its attractions; for timber fires take the beauty from the woodlands, and cause partial drying up of lakes and streams.

Care—vigilance!—on the part of every tourist and camper, both from Michigan and from without our state,—will stop this loss. Remember that northern forests burn easily. The pine needle floor picks up a spark like tinder. Practice the Prevention Rules shown here, which all trained woodsmen use. Additional copies will be sent free on request to this office. Your friends, and travelers, will be glad to have them.

REGISTRATION NOTICE

For General Election Tuesday, November 2, A. D. 1926

To the Qualified Electors of the Township of Adams, County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan.

Notice is hereby given that in comformity with the "Michigan Election Law," I, the undersigned Township Clerk, will, upon any day, except Sunday and a legal holiday, the day of any regular or special election or primary election, receive for registration the name of any legal voter in said Township not already registered who may apply to me personally for such registration. Provided however that I can receive no names for registration during the time intervening between the Second Saturday before any regular, special or official primary election and the day of such election.

The last day for General Registration does not apply to persons who vote under the Absent Voters' Law. (See Registration by Affidavit) October 23, 1926-Last day for General Registration by personal application for said election.

Notice is further hereby given that I will be at C. S. Wertz store the third and fourth Saturdays before said election to review the Registration Book and Register Electors on October 9 and October 16 A. D. 1926. From 8 o'clock a. m. until 8 o'clock p. m. on each said day for the purpose of reviewing the Registration and Registering such of the qualified electors in said Township as shall properly apply therefor.

The name of no person but an actual resident of the precinct at the time of registration, and entitled under the constitution, if remaining such resident, to vote at the next election, shall be entered in the registration book.

Egg Race Close As Hens Enter Stretch

With only 42 eggs separating the four highest pens in the annual International Egg Laying Contest at the M. S. C., and with less than a month to go before the end of the test, the closest and most thrilling finish in the famous "egg marathon" is being predicted by officials in charge.

All records for the Michigan contest are being broken by the birds entered this year. An average of 186 eggs per bird for the 1,000 hens in the contest was noted at the end of the 48th week, as compared with last year's record average of 168 eggs at the same period in the contest, which ends on November 1.

The high ranking pens, of ten birds each, on October second were as follows: Hanson's White Leghorn Farm, Corvallis, Oregon, 2,384 eggs; J. Pater and Son, Hudsonville, Michigan, 2,360; Marshall Farms, Mobile, Alabama, 2,359; Geo. S. Sutton, Aurora, Ind., 2,342; Geo. B. Ferris, Grand Rapids, Mich., 2,327.

Buckwheat, which does best where the climate is cool and moist is best adapted to the Northern States or to mountainous regions. With such conditions it is the most suitable grain crop for poor, thin land and succeeds well on acid soils. It is a good crop on new land and on old sod land being again brought under the plow. Buckwheat is valuable as a weed destroyer, as a soil renovator, as a summer cover and green manure crop, and as a source of honey for bees.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage given by Hiram Livermore, widower, of the township of Wheatland, Hillsdale county, Michigan, to Corwin Cox, of the said township, which mortgage was dated January 50, 1908, and was recorded in the affice of the Register of Deeds of Hillsdale County, Michigan, January 16, 1908, in liber 133 of mortgages, on page 579:

And whereas, no proceeding either at law or in equity have been brought to foreclose said mortgage and whereas, there is due and unpaid on said mortgage at this date, in principal and interest, the sum of Nine Hundred Thirty three and 90—100 ($933.90) Dollars.

Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, Notice Is Hereby Given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of the premises therein described at public auction at the west front door of the court house in the city of Hillsdale, in said county, on Friday, the 3rd day of December, 1926, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that date, to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage and costs, including an attorney fee of $25 as provided for by statute.

The premises are described in said mortgage as follows: The north half of the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 16, excepting about one and one half acres out of the northwest corner now owned by J. M. Livermore, and this mortgage conveys about 18 acres of land in the above description, also five acres of land on the east end of the above described land, and being the same width north and south as above land, all situate in the township of Wheatland, County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan.

NOTICE

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION

Notice is hereby given to The Qualified Elecors that at the time and places of holding the next GENERAL ELECTION in each of the several voting precincts of said County, on TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, A. D. 1926

There will be submitted at said election five proposed Amendments to the Constitution of Michigan as follows:

Compensation of members of the Legislature of Michigan.

Amendment to Section 9 of Article V of the Constitution relative to the compensation of members of the legislature.

Sec. 9. The compensation of the members of the Legislature shall be twelve hundred dollars for the regular session. When convened in extra session their compensation shall be ten dollars per day for the first twenty days and nothing thereafter. Members shall be entitled to ten cents per mile and no more for one round trip to each regular session of the Legislature by the usually traveled route. Each member shall be entitled to one copy of the laws, journals and documents of the Legislature of which he is a member, but shall not receive, at the expense of the State books or newspapers not expressly authorized by this Consititution.

Term of office of County Sheriffs.

Amendment to Section 5 of Article VIII of the Constitution relative to the term of office of county sheriffs.

Sec. 5. The sheriff shall hold no other office. He shall be elected at the general election for the term of two years. He may be required by law to renew his security from time to time and in default of giving such security, his office shall be deemed vacant. The county shall never be responsible for his acts.

Creation of Metropolitan Districts.

Amendment to Article VIII of the Constitution relative to the creation of metropolitan districts by cities, villages or townships.

Sec. 31. The Legislature shall by general law provide for the incorporation by any two or more cities, villages or townships, or any combination or parts of same, of metropolitan districts comprising territory, within their limits, for the purpose of acquiring, owning and operating either with or without their limits as may be prescribed by law parks or public utilities for supplying sewage disposal, drainage, water, light, power or transportation, or any combination thereof, any such district may sell or purchase, either within or without its limits as may be prescribed by law, sewage disposal or drainage rights, water, light, power or transportation facilities. Any such districts shall have power to acquire and succeed to any or all of the rights, obligations and property of such cities, villages and townships respecting or connected with such functions or public utilities: Provided, That no city, village or township shall surrender any such rights, obligations or property without the approval thereof by a majority vote of the electors thereof voting on such question. Such General law shall limit the rate of taxation of such districts for their municipal purposes and restrict their powers of borrowing money and contracting debts. Under such general law, the electors of each district shall have power and authority to frame, adopt and amend its charter upon the approval thereof by a majority vote of the electors of each city, village or township, voting on such question, and through, its regularly constituted authority, to pass all laws and ordinances relating to its municipal concerns, subject to the constitution and general laws of this State.

Condemnation of excess land and property for boulevards, streets, etc.

Amendment to Article XIII of the Constitution relative to the condemnation of excess land and property for boulevards, streets, etc.

Sec. 5. Subject to this Constitution the Legislature may authorize municipalities, subject to reasonable limitations, to condemn and to take the fee to more land and property than is needed in the acquiring, opening and widening of boulevards, streets and alleys, or for any public use, and after so much of the land and property has been appropriated for any such needed public purpose, the remainder may be sold or leased with or without such restrictions as may be appropriate to the improvement made. Bonds may be issued to supply the funds to pay in whole or in part for the excess property so appropriated but such bonds shall be a lien only on the property so acquired and they shall not be included in any limitation of the bonded indebtedness of such municipality.

Revision of the Constitution.

Shall the constitution of this state be revised and a convention called therefor?

NOTICE is Hereby Given, That the place of holding said election in the Township of Adams, (Precinct No.) Will be at North Adams, and the polls of said election will be open at 7:00 o'clock a. m., and will remain open until 5 o'clock p. m. of said day of election, unless the Board of Election Inspectors shall in their discretion adjourn the polls at 12 o'clock noon for one hour.

F. W. HOLCOMB,
Clerk of said Township.
Dated October 7, 1926.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Alleged Corrupt Political Ring in Indiana Is Facing Exposure.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHILE the rest of the country looks on with intense interest, Indiana is listening aghast to revelations exposing a great alleged political conspiracy spreading over the entire state and threatening to involve some of its most prominent citizens. Thomas H. Adams, publisher of Vincennes and chairman of an investigation committee named by the Republican Editorial association of Indiana, is responsible for the exposure, and the charges are based on the stories told by D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan and now serving a life sentence for murder. Stephenson, who says he was "framed," seeks vindication and revenge; and the editorial association's committee has made repeated demands on Gov. Ed Jackson for a complete investigation. Mr. Adams, asserting that the governor has dodged the issue, has been trying to persuade the Indianapolis city council to hear the charges before a mass meeting. He also has made repeated attempts to reach Stephenson in his prison, but the warden, backed by the prison board and the governor, will let no one in to interview the convict. The latter, however, managed to smuggle out a letter in which he said in part:

"I have in a place of security the following described documents:

"1. A written contract by the terms of which a certain prominent official of the state of Indiana agrees to pay me the sum of eight hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars ($825,000), or three times the amount I expended in his behalf for election.

"2. I have notes representing the above amount, signed by the official.

"3. I have a written memorandum signed by the same official acknowledging the amounts expended by me in his behalf to be two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars ($275,000, or one-third of the sum above mentioned. This memo recites an agreement where I lose all if he was beaten in the election, but receive three-for-one if he won.

"4. A written agreement with the mayors of three large cities in Indiana binding them to repay me on a ratio of three-for-one for all money I advanced in their behalf, and further agreements are in my possession where these same men agree to allow certain individuals to name all appointments.

"5. I hold two photographic copies (and the plate) of an agreement by and between the mayor of a large city and an organization politician in which the mayor agrees to allow that politician to name all of the city appointees of a certain class. I also have eight affidavits of reputable men who saw the photograph made from the original. I later delivered the original to the politician to whom it was addressed by the mayor.

"6. I have perhaps thirty or forty contracts with less important public officials who have agreed to repay me for funds advanced to them for campaign purposes."

Publication of this by Mr. Adams being of no apparent avail, he next made public a photostatic copy of the following amazing contract bearing the alleged signature of J. L. Duvall, mayor of Indianapolis and president of the Marion County State bank:

"In return for the political support of D. C. Stephenson, in the event I am elected mayor of Indianapolis, Ind., I promise not to appoint any person as member of the board of public works without they first have the indorsement of D. C. Stephenson," the contract reads.

"I also agree and promise to appoint Claude Worley as chief of police and Earl Klenck as captain.

"Signed by me, this 12th day of February, 1925."

With this he gave out a letter purporting to have been written and signed by Duvall. It is written on the letterhead of his bank, addresses Stephenson as "Dear Steve" and continues: "I was talking with your friend just now and in regard to Ramsey getting (off) the ticket, if this is done I will—if the candidate for treasurer—go down the line with you and the boys and do all I can for the success of our ticket this fall.

"With best regards, I am as ever yours truly, J. L. Duvall."

Mayor Duvall admitted that he wrote this letter but declared the alleged contract was a "fake." Mr. Adams said he could prove the signature on the contract was the mayor's, and he also asserted he had plenty of documents and evidence to prove the existence of the corrupt political ring which he seeks to get before the whole people of the state.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has let it be known that he will not take an active part in this fall's congressional election campaign in the way of speeches or letters in behalf of Republican candidates. He refuses to yield to the urgent requests of the campaign leaders, who have represented to him that participation in the campaign is his duty as the titular head of his party. To this the semi-official reply is that, while he is the leader of the party, it is not customary for the Chief Executive to assume such leadership in an "off year" election, the only precedent for such action being Woodrow Wilson's ill-fated appeal for the return of a Democratic congress in 1918.

Political wiseacres say the President's decision is dictated largely by caution, and call attention to the fact that it spares him and the Republican candidates embarrassment, since he and many of them cannot well stand on the same platform. For instance, of the 28 Republican candidates for the senate, 18 are basing their bid for election, chiefly or partly, on opposition to Mr. Coolidge's policies relating to the world court and to agricultural relief.

FLOODS in Illinois, Kansas and Oklahoma during the last week have done immense damage to the crops, and many towns and villages have been inundated. Broken levees of the Illinois river let the waters into Beardstown, Ill., rendering hundreds of people homeless and almost completely isolating the city. In Peoria large industrial plants were forced to close because of flooded fire pits and basements.

TRAPPED about three miles underground by an explosion in the Roane Iron company mine at Rockwood, Tenn., 28 miners met death. Rescue crews worked hard but in vain, being hampered by excessive heat and smoke and the danger from gas.

CHAOS reigns in central China and while the armies of the various factions are fighting desperately along the Yangtse river, it is the non-combatants that are suffering most. As an instance, the correspondent of the Chicago Tribune tells of witnessing the attempt of the Chinese Red Cross to get the civilians out of besieged Wuchang on launches and lighters. There was room for fewer than 6,000 on the boats, but 50,000 broke through the military cordon and surged out on the piers, from which they fell into the river by hundreds, about 300 of them being drowned. The refugees were emaciated with starvation and told pitiful stories of their sufferings.

Warfare between the Japanese and the Manchurians was imminent last week along the Corean border. Throughout Manchuria, adjoining Corea, are about 1,500,000 Coreans, mostly farmers, who are Japanese subjects. Recently the Manchurian government repudiated the agreement permitting Japanese subjects to lease agricultural lands, and sent troops to confiscate the crops. The Japanese rushed troops, machine guns and Red Cross detachments to the border and ordered all garrison troops in that region to be held in readiness for action.

BECAUSE he permitted one of the Hohenzollerns, the oldest son of the former crown prince, to march with the Prussian guards in the recent maneuvers, Gen. Hans von Seeckt, commander in chief in the German reichswehr, has lost his job. He was considered the complete militarist, and for six years the allies have been protesting against his rejuvenation of the German army. General von Seeckt created the present army, 100,000 strong, every man a perfect soldier, chosen from 5,000,000 available. Under his plan, it is figured that when the next war comes Germany will have 1,000,000 trained officers and sergeant-majors.

The Prussian state government and the Hohenzollerns have reached an agreement on how much Prussia shall pay the former royal family to relinquish its claims on everything it left behind. The former kaiser will get 20,000,000 gold marks ($5,000,000) in cash, 280,000 acres of land from his former estates, and three castles, at Schwes, Fuerrath, and Wildenbruch, and the former crown prince gets Oels castle in addition.

DICTATOR PILSUDSKI ended his dispute with the Polish parliament by accepting the resignation of the Bartel cabinet and himself taking the post of premier. His cabinet is declared to be the strongest and best that Poland has yet had. Besides the premiership, Pilsudski holds the war portfolio. August Zaloski is again minister of foreign affairs.

THE American Federation of Labor opened its annual convention in Detroit, and incidentally got into a wrangle with the churches of that city. President William Green had been invited to speak at a Y. M. C. A. meeting and other labor leaders had been asked to occupy ten Detroit pulpits, but these invitations were withdrawn at the instance of the board of commerce and the building trades association, which charged that the aims of the federation were not in harmony with ideals of American patriotism. This was vigorously protested by the federation. The federation voted to organize the automobile industry.

SO SERIOUS have become the depradations of the European corn borer in Ohio, Michigan and Indiana that the national corn borer committee was called to meet in Chicago for the purpose of devising some plan to check the advance of the pest toward Illinois and Iowa. The insects are advancing westward at the rate of twenty to twenty-five miles yearly. Dean Curtis of the Iowa State Agricultural college, who called the committee, says the borer is the most formidable pest that ever has threatened the Midwest and that its invasion of the great hog-raising states would be a dire calamity, since they cannot substitute other crops for corn, as Michigan and Ohio are doing.

WHILE Queen Marie of Rumania was buying beautiful gowns in Paris, our government was laying plans for her reception. The State department announced that she would be met at quarantine in New York on October 18 by Assistant Secretary of State J. Butler Wright and taken to Washington on a special train. The next day President and Mrs. Coolidge will give a dinner in her honor. The story that the queen had accepted any contract to appear in the movies in America was formally denied by a member of her party.

PERSONS who followed with avidity the tortuous course of the Stillman divorce litigation—and their name is legion—were interested to read that James "Bud" Stillman, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Stillman, is engaged to wed Miss Lena Wilson, an eighteen-year-old Scotch-Canadian girl who was a servant in the Stillman house in Canada, as were her two sisters and a brother. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson said they were highly pleased with their daughter's choice. The lad is a student in Princeton university, so the wedding will not take place until next June, after his graduation.

FOR the purpose of promoting commercial aviation the airplane in which Commander Byrd flew over the North pole is making a tour of the country in the course of which it will visit about 40 cities. On the first leg of the journey, from Washington to New York, Byrd was at the controls, but for the rest of the trip the pilot will be Floyd Bennett, who made the polar flight with Byrd. The expenses of the expedition are being defrayed by the Daniel Guggenheim fund, which is acting in co-operation with the Department of Commerce.

South Africans Wish to Remain in Empire

The doubts concerning General Hertzog's attitude toward South Africa's remaining within the British empire were set at rest when he announced that in attending the imperial conference he had no wish to be anything else than a "helpful associate in advancing the interests of the British community of nations."

General Hertzog continued: "We intend to apply ourselves to the task of the conference in a spirit of co-operation, seeking by united action to promote the common interests of us all. One of the main tasks, if not the main task, with which the conference will be confronted, will be, if I mistake not, to have the co-operation between the member states of the commonwealth placed on a more certain and satisfactory basis.

"If success in that respect is to result, questions of fundamental nature affecting empire relations, both domestic and foreign, will have to be grappled with and decided. . . . Given good will, courage and faith, we ought to be able to accomplish much that will ensure permanency and harmony in our relations in future."

General Hertzog's declaration is regarded as equivalent to a denial of the rumors that the Nationalist party, of which he is leader, is working for secession from the empire.

Another dominion premier to arrive was Walter Monroe of Newfoundland, who said he had no constitutional adjustments to propose.

Makes Movies Natural

A photo-chemist in Germany has developed a process for producing movies in natural colors without greater expense or more trouble than in black-and-white effects. With an ordinary camera and a monochromatic film specially treated by the secret process, a film showing every shade of tone from the top to the bottom of the spectrum is obtained, which can be projected with an ordinary projector.

Crop Rotation Most Valuable

Increases Productivity of Soils as Effectively as Fertilizers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Crop rotation is a farm practice which may be used by the farmer to increase the productivity of his soils as effectively as the use of manure or commercial fertilizers, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Furthermore, crop rotation as ordinarily practiced does not entail any extra cost. The extra yield due to this practice is therefore a profit that may be credited to the farmer's managerial ability.

Rotation Effective.

A study of the long-continued soil-fertility experiments of this country and of England, made by the department, has brought out some important facts about crop rotation in its relation to soil productivity. These are discussed in Farmers' Bulletin 1475-F, just issued. In general, crop rotation has been found to be practically 90 per cent as effective as farm manure or complete fertilizers in maintaining the yields of wheat, corn and oats, and about 90 per cent as effective as these fertilizers in increasing the yields of these three major crops. The beneficial effects of crop rotation do not impair the benefits derived from the use of fertilizers; so that when these two farm practices are combined the one practice adds to the benefits of the other.

For example, corn at the Missouri experiment station yielded 22.4 bushels per acre from cultivation alone. When corn was manured the yield was increased by 14.7 bushels, or to 37.1 bushels per acre; when it was grown in rotation with other crops the yield was increased by 15.1 bushels, or to 37.5 bushels per acre. However, when both manuring and rotation were practiced, the acre yield was increased by 25.3 or to a total of 47.7 bushels per acre.

Trials at Urbana.

Even more striking results than the above were recorded in trials at Urbana, Ill. In these experiments the use of fertilizers consisting of pulverized limestone, farm manure and phosphate, was compared with a rotation of corn, oats and clover. The average yield of corn obtained without the use of either rotation or fertilizers on this particular prairie soil in Illinois, was 23.4 bushels per acre. The gain effected by rotation alone was practically three times that obtained from the use of fertilizers and lime, or 27.8 bushels due to rotation, and only 9.2 due to the fertilizers. The total increase from the use of both fertilizers and rotation was 44.2 bushels per acre, or 7.2 bushels greater than the sum of their separate increases.

While rotations in different sections, in a given locality, or even on a single farm may differ, there are certain fundamental principles of crop rotation which have general application. These must be understood by the farmer if he is to put himself in a position to utilize the results that have been worked out by state experiment stations for his locality. The purpose of this bulletin is to acquaint the farmer with the basic principles of crop rotation and to stress the importance of the practice, in relation to farming. A copy of the bulletin may be obtained, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Barley Found Cheapest Feed for Beef Cattle

Once I visited a cattle feeder, who said: "I have found barley to be a better feed for beef cattle than corn." The statement caused questioning, as the average middle western feeder has concluded long ago that barley fed steers might gain as rapidly as corn fed steers, but with a higher cost of gain.

A comparison of corn and barley in a ration of corn silage, linseed oil cake and alfalfa hay for fattening baby beeves was made by the Colorado experiment station.

The two lots of calves gained practically the same, as the average gain per head for 208 days was only two pounds greater in the barley fed lot. It was found, however, that cheaper gains were put on by the calves in the barley fed lot. In the production of 100 pounds of gain, one ton of barley replaced 1,894.4 pounds of corn, 6.8 pounds of corn silage and 228.1 pounds of alfalfa hay. In this test corn was worth 95.2 per cent the value of barley.

The barley fed calves outsold the corn fed calves on the Denver market.—B. W. Fairbanks, Extension Live Stock Specialist, Colorado Agricultural College.

Kill Out Quack Grass

Small patches of quack grass can be killed by covering it with tar paper, building paper or other material which will exclude all light, according to A. A. Hansen, Purdue university. He states that Fred Dannes of Lake county, Ind., completely eradicated a patch of quack grass by covering it with tar paper for three months. Sweet clover used as pasture is most effective and has been used successfully in Du Page county, Ill., to kill quack.

Feed Young Stock Well

The young growing animal makes gain in weight cheaper than the mature animal. It usually pays to provide plenty of feed for the young stock even though it is necessary to feed grain when pasture is short. Much young stock is stunted, especially after weaning, because it doesn't get enough feed to maintain the normal growth. Rapid growth is possible only when young animals are supplied with plenty of feed to build bone and muscle.

THIS WOMAN'S BATTLE

Wins Against Ill Health

"At times I was hardly able to do my housework," writes Mrs. Margaret Wallace of 1547 Safford Ave., Columbus, Ohio. How many women have found themselves in this same condition! How many women have fought bravely on day after day, cooking, washing, ironing, doing the dishes, and keeping the house clean, when they were in a weakened condition and had not sufficient strength to perform these duties easily and properly!

When Mrs. Wallace was experiencing great difficulty in carrying on the daily tasks, a friend advised her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she gave it a fair trial. "I just can't give enough thanks to it," she writes. "Now I can eat anything at all and I am feeling better than I have for years. I shall never be without your medicine again."

A woman who is fighting for her health and her family's happiness is a valiant soldier. She wages her battle in her own kitchen. She has no thrilling bugles to cheer her on, no waving banners.

Many other women tell us, as Mrs. Wallace did, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was their faithful ally in the struggle for better health.

PROSPERITY SIGNS SEEN BY CHINESE

Detroit's Chinatown forecasts a new wave of prosperity for Michigan.

The spirit of Yee Mo-Kai, "father" of 400,000 Yees and founder of the Yee family in China 800 years ago, came to Detroit for the reunion of the Yees and left no uncertain message.

"Did not the food placed before the altar of Yee Mo-Kai turn moist the very same day?" ask the faithful Chinese. "Was not Tuesday, the day of Yee Mo-Kai's arrival, the brightest day this fall? Was not Sunday, the day of Yee Mo-Kai's departure, the first really cold day of the season? And did not the Florida hurricane completely miss Detroit?"

Such signs make the most skeptical pause and think. And the more the Chinese think the greater faith in the future.

Nectar and ambrosia may be the food of gods, but spirits, who are more closely related to earth, must have more substantial stuff to maintain their celestial existence.

So when Yee Mo-Kai, beloved ancestor of nearly one-third of the Chinese community in Detroit, deigned to attend the reunion of the American branch of the family, the finest food connoisseurs in the Chinese colony put their heads together to prepare the most tempting delicacies for him.

The food was no sooner set before the image of Yee Mo-Kai than there occurred the first of a series of signs that convinced some of the older Chinese at the gathering of their ancestor's presence, of his partaking of the food and of his favorable disposition toward Detroit, particularly to its Chinese colony.

"The food, instead of diminishing in quantity, as one naturally would expect, expanded and became covered with moisture," according to Yee Wah Hoon, of San Francisco, oldest descendant of the Yee family in the United States.

Tom Lee Yee, a boy of 16 educated in American schools, advanced the theory that the expansion of the food might have been caused by its absorption of moisture from the air. Tom no longer will question the judgment of the elder Yee-men.

Despite the fact that these Yee-men outnumber many of the world's minor states, they observe certain family traditions. They regard themselves as cousins and do not intermarry.

Michigan Native Becomes Power In China's New Era

If an era of peace and constructive enterprise for China ever does arrive the world may hear a great deal of Maj. Oliver J. Todd of Michigan, assuming, of course, that he isn't picked off in the meantime by a bandit's bullet by cholera or by some other of the dangers that beset the real workers in Asia.

Todd now is chief engineer of the International Famine Relief Commission, but he came from Michigan. He was born at Colon and spent his boyhood digging drains in the peppermint marshes of St. Joseph, Berrien and Kalamazoo counties. He graduated from the engineering department of the University of Michigan and worked on various prosaic American engineering problems until the World War came along to give vent to his natural idealism and love of adventure.

Todd's great work, according to his associates, has been in overcoming interferences from both foreign and Chinese sources which have operated to defeat most of the constructive enterprises in recent years and in getting effective work done by Chinese labor, on a large scale and at minimum cust.

Short Course at State College to Open October 25

Michigan State College short courses will start Oct. 25 with the opening of the course in general agriculture which will extend over 16 weeks for each of two years.

The number of courses has been increased this year with the addition of a market gardener's course, a hatchery-in home economics. The poultry men's school, and a six weeks' course school has been changed from a four to six weeks.

Courses in dairy production, dairy manufacturing, farm mechanics, poultry, and a general eight-week course in agriculture, will start Jan. 3. The commercial floricultural course will start Jan. 10 and the market gardners' course Jan. 24. The fruit growers and bee-keepers' courses will start Feb. 7 while the ice cream makers' course and a course in ornamental horticulture will be held in the spring, starting March 7. The home economics course will start June 21 and the mid-summer poultry school is scheduled for July 4.

Grid Star Remembers Old Promise to Boy

Harry Kipke, famous football star and now backfield coach at the University of Michigan, never forgets a promise to a boy. He proved this recently by the presentation of a football, autographed by himself, Tom Edwards, Benny Oosterbaan and Benny Friedman, all Michigan stars, to Jimmy Dingwall, 11 years old, of Owosso.

A year ago, Kipke spoke at a football banquet, and after the program ha dbeen concluded, the boy, a football enthusiast, expressed a desire to meet the former All-American halfback. His father presented him, and Kipke inquired if he would like a football. The boy said he would, and Kipke took his name and promised to send him one.

Sees Two-Year Teacher Certificate as Passing

The day is passing fast when teaching positions in Michigan high schools will be open to teachers with only the two-year life certificate and without the four-year A. B. or B. S. degree, according to Prof. F. E. Ellsworth, director of the Western Normal training schools and appointment office.

The opportunity for life certificate graduates in senior high schools is now negligible, said Ellsworth, who has charge of the placing of hundreds of teachers yearly, and the same is rapidly becoming true in junior high schools.

2 Manufacturers of Iceless Boxes In Consolidation

Announcement is made of the consolidation of the Belding-Hall Company and the Electrice Corporation. The factory is located at Belding, Mich. The consolidated concern is the American Electrice Corporation.

Some 20 years ago the automobile, just emerging from the experimental stage, stood on the threshold of a development that has been unparalleled in all industrial history. Electrical refrigeration having overcome fundamental and mechanical defects, has reached the stage where mass production has so reduced costs that the unit is now within reach of the average householder. The industry now stands where the automobile did about 1906, with a vista of tremendous development confronting it. Homes, packing houses, dairies, ice cream establishments, drug and candy stores, butcher shops, groceries, restaurants, etc., comprise its natural field of exploitation.

That the electrical refrigerator has innumerable advantages over the old-fashioned ice box is apparent to the most disinterested observer. It is certainly much more sanitary; it preserves contents over a longer period; it is self regulating; it maintains an even temperature many degrees colder than that maintained by the melting of ice in the old way; the air within the unit is less humid. And it creates a higher standard of living at considerably reduced cost.

This company is a consolidation of the Belding-Hall Company of Belding, Mich., the second largest manufacturers of refrigerating cabinets in the United States, and the Electrice Corporation, owners of the patent rights for the electrical refrigerating units. The Belding-Hall Company has enjoyed a commanding position in the industry for over 40 years, and in that time has built up a very strong and growing dealer organization through which its products have found ready distribution.

State Audubon Society Moves to Grand Rapids

Following the selection of Mrs. F. L. Miss Smith resigned after holding the position four years.

Five Coyotes Bagged In Keweenaw By Youth

Ernest Hepting, a Keweenaw young man, has set a record for state trappers to shoot at in bagging five coyotes in as many days in Keweenaw county.

Hepting has trapped 15 coyotes and a bobcat. Three other animals escaped by tearing themselves out of the traps and leaving a foot behind in the steel jaws.

REINDEER FEARED DEAD DISCOVERED

The recent discovery of a number of reindeer, including several calves, of the same species as those imported into the upper peninsula from Norway some time ago, revealed the fact that while the animals were kept in captivity they pined away and died, and that when they were abandoned to roam through the great wastes of Luce county they began to multiply.

Warden M. J. Polloch, of Newberry found the reindeer thriving in the swamplands around Betsy lake. It was believed generally that all of the herd except four which still are kept in an enclosure on the state preserve, had died, and that the experiment conducted by the Michigan state conservation department had been an absolute failure.

It was the belief, when the herd was imported, thta the deer would thrive on the mosses and winter grasses of the upper peninsula swamps and timberlands. When the herd began to diminish it was conceded that they could not thrive in this climate. Now, with the finding of the new herd, it is believed the animals will survive in the upper peninsula country if they are not molested by man and are left to forage their own food.

U. of M. Is Booked For 6 Non-Conference Games

Besides the 12 Conference basketball games which are required, Coach E. J. Mather's University of Michigan team will engage in six non-Conference games during the season.

Michigan's first game is scheduled for Dec. 11, against Michigan State College, at Ann Arbor. After a six-day rest the Wolverines will meet Cornell College, of Mt. Vernon, Ia., at the Yost Field house. Coach Barker, the former Maize and Blue wrestling coach, is in charge at the Iowa school.

The remainder of the games are sandwiched in with the Conference schedule. On Jan. 12, Michigan meets Syracuse at Ann Arbor, and threedays later Maryland will furnish the opposition. The remaining non-Conference game will be played on Feb. 12 at Pittsburgh.

A list of the Conference games follows: Jan. 8, Michigan at Minnesota; Jan. 15, Michigan at Iowa; Jan. 17, Illinois at Michigan; Jan. 23, Michigan at Indiana; Jan. 24, Minnesota at Michigan; Feb. 15, Michigan at Purdue; Feb. 19, Indiana at Michigan; Feb. 22, Chicago at Michigan; Feb. 25, Michigan at Illinois; Feb. 28, Purdue at Michigan; March 5, Michigan at Chicago; March 7, Iowa at Michigan.

A good spread for children's lunches is made from dried fruit. Soak the fruit over night, cook until soft, then press through a colander, add sugar and cook until thick.

Graduation to Cut Only Three From Ann Arbor Eleven

Only three of the regulars of this season's football team will be lost through graduation and only five men on the entire squad will be lost for football at Michigan due either to the three-year rule or to graduation.

Captain Benny Friedman, the Conference's best passer, will get his degree in June, and if his present plans mature he intends to enter business.

Jack Lovette, a three-year veteran at guard, will graduate from the engineering school and intends to enter that profession.

William Flora's loss to next year's team because of the three-year rule, will break up the combination of Flora and Oosterbaan as ends, one of the best of such combintaions ever seen in the Western Conference. Coach Yost considers them superior to his other famous combination of Gobel and Kirk. "Flop" Flora will continue as a student at Michigan in the medical school.

Victor Domhoff, who has been unable to show his true worth during his career at Ann Arbor because of an injured knee, will finish his third year of competition and continue his studies n the law school. "Bud" Heath is the other candidate who will be lost through graduation.

Conference Pear Held Best for State Farms

Recommendation to orchard owners of the "Conference" pear as one which has never failed to set a full crop of fruit year after year, and which is suitable for home-growing and for limited commercial trial, is made by Stanley Johnson, director of the experiment station. During the past two years the experiment station has propagated a few trees for distribution for trial purposes and now several nurseries are carrying on the work in a limited way.

The tree is a moderate grower and very productive, its fruit medium in size with shiny green skin, dotted and overlaid with varying amounts of russet. The appearance is somewhat against the pear, cacording to Johnson, for it has not that rich golden russet color which makes the Bosc, its nearest rival, so popular. The "Conference" does, however, surpass the other variety in earliness of bearing and productiveness.

450-Pound Safe Loot of Monroe Burglars

The shades of Sandow must have supervised the robbery of a Monroe oil station. Failing to jimmy the window, burglars with the aid of a skeleton key secured entrance through the front door of the gas station of the Monroe Co-operative Company and decamped with a 450-pound safe containing approximately $80 in cash and papers.

U. S. SHIPS BEING MADE IN FLIVVERS

Two hundred merchant ships, the foundation of a once dreamed of American merchant marine to rule the seas, are going into the open hearth furnaces of the Ford Motor Company's River Rouge plant to reappear as automobiles and tractors, in one of the most unusual salvage experiments in industrial history.

Rapidly and efficiently, a great organization of men and machinery are cutting the steel hulks into hundreds of pieces.

Today a fine, sea-going craft; tomorrow so much scrap steel. This is the story of each ship as it joins the line of systematic destruction along the Ford frontage on the River Rouge.

The fleet of ships aggregating 370,000 tons cost Uncle Sam in the war days almost an even hundred million dollars.

For salvage purposes, Henry Ford bought the fleet for $1,697,470.

The task of towing the ships from Gulf of Mexico and Atlantic seaboard ports is a story of marine achievement. Fifty of the ships were too large to pass the Welland canal, making it necessary for them to be cut up in the East and loaded into the smaller craft.

Several of the ships barely escaped destruction on the rocks near Halifax. Others have encountered trouble in the Welland canal. However, to date none has been lost.

Already 57 ships, loaded with 15 of the boats cut up in the East, have arrived at the Ford plant.

Girls' Stronghold In Barber Shop is Gradually Broken

The death knell of the flapper of this "Tin-Elizabethan" age has been sounded many times but the creature seems to have as many lives as a cat, and to keep constantly under foot. But now there is definite evidence that she has of her own free will given up at least one stronghold of power, the barber shop.

Signs on dormitory doors at Ann Arbor which used to inform the occupants that these were typed in the vicinity for 15 cents a page, have been changed to read, "Neck's clipped for a dime," and the girls report a larger business capital than ever.

Jut wshat caused the flappers to retreat from the barber shops is not yet known. Perhaps the dirty shirt sleeves and the much thumbed police gazettes rasped their dainty natures—perhaps they refused to put up longer with the "Airedale Shingles" that seem to content the men. At any rate, the fact remains that they have folded their hair nets and quietly stole away, leaving the men with full possession of the barber shop field — though they go tit by a close shave.

Jacksnipe Most Elusive of Hunter's Targets

The jacksnipe, who bears many euphonious nicknames, such as wizard of the wet lands and little brown dodger of the bog, is the gunner's most difficult target. Because of its swift, zigzagging flight, its darting and pitching, it usually makes a clean get-away from the average marksman. Not only is the twisting jacksnipe the hardest bird to hit, but—what brings more anguish to the bog tramper—it is the hardest to find after it has been dropped.

It is heart-rending work to stop the jacksnipe on raw, windy days when they are flushing wild. The gunner must work down wind, catch the snipe on quartering shots and then he must shoot quickly—snap his target before it zips out of range. But there is more to the game than this. He must retrieve his snipe and this demands an eye as keen as a hawk's, deep concentration and an infallible sense of direction, otherwise his good marksmanship is futile.

6½ Pounds Potatoes Taken From One Hill

CALL EMOTIONS BEAUTY SECRET

Now comes beauty scientists to confirm the fact that what we think is reflected in our faces. Therefore to retain your beauty the following rules have been compiled:

1. Acquire the habit of emotional self-control. Conscious repression is a source of strength.

2. Harden yourself to endure slights, criticism, prejudice, dislike and even abuse. Extreme sensitiveness is unhealthy.

3. Exercise the senses, learning to see, hear, touch, taste and smell more accurately every day.

4. Put aside unhealthy images and ideas. Don't fight them particularly, but turn your attention to something interesting and healthy.

5. Increase the accuracy of your thinking. Exercise the mind while working and playing.

6. Control your attention, never letting it dwell on the painful or the useless.

7. Learn to practice.

8. Learn to relax.

9. Imitate good models. Keep away from the other kind.

10. Increase your physical and mental lightness.

11. Be sure your ruling motives are good and not impelled by hatred and jealousy.

12. Establish normal relations with other people.

13. Establish a healthy philosophy of living. Have a good goal.

With the above commandments practiced diligently, you will be guaranteed not only a healthier body, but a facial expression that will be a joy to look upon.

U. S. Crop Estimate Forsees Big Money For Mchiigan Seed

Upon the price which the potato crop of western Michigan will bring this fall depends, largely, the prosperity of much of that area which exttends from Grand Rapids and Grand Haven to the Straits of Mackinaw. The growers are expecting good returns, and if the United States crop estimate is correct, they will reap handsome profits.

While the early crop, especially in that district between Greenville and Cadillac, was very light, it is expected the late yield will be heavy.

Farmers in the vicinity of Cedar Springs are taking care of their obligations readily, according to H. W. Wheeler, cashier of the Cedar Springs State bank.

At Cadillac it is reported the Michigan Potato Growers' exchange, a big co-operative organization, is prepared to handle heavy shipments.

NOTICE
PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION

Notice is hereby given to The Qualified Elecors that at the time and places of holding the next GENERAL ELECTION in each of the several voting precincts of said County, on TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, A. D. 1926

There will be submitted at said election five proposed Amendments to the Constitution of Michigan as follows:

Compensation of members of the Legislature of Michigan.

Amendment to Section 9 of Article V of the Constitution relative to the compensation of members of the legislature.

Sec. 9. The compensation of the members of the Legislature shall be twelve hundred dollars for the regular session. When convened in extra session their compensation shall be ten dollars per day for the first twenty days and nothing thereafter. Members shall be entitled to ten cents per mile and no more for one round trip to each regular session of the Legislature by the usually traveled route. Each member shall be entitled to one copy of the laws, journals and documents of the Legislature of which he is a member, but shall not receive, at the expense of the State books or newspapers not expressly authorized by this Consititution.

Term of office of County Sheriffs.

Amendment to Section 5 of Article VIII of the Constitution relative to the term of office of county sheriffs.

Sec. 5. The sheriff shall hold no other office. He shall be elected at the general election for the term of two years. He may be required by law to renew his security from time to time and in default of giving such security, his office shall be deemed vacant. The county shall never be responsible for his acts.

Creation of Metropolitan Districts.

Amendment to Article VIII of the Constitution relative to the creation of metropolitan districts by cities, villages or townships.

Sec. 31. The Legislature shall by general law provide for the incorporation by any two or more cities, villages or townships, or any combination or parts of same, of metropolitan districts comprising territory, within their limits, for the purpose of acquiring, owning and operating either with or without their limits as may be prescribed by law parks or public utilities for supplying sewage disposal, drainage, water, light, power or transportation, or any combination thereof, any such district may sell or purchase, either within or without its limits as may be prescribed by law, sewage disposal or drainage rights, water, light, power or transportation facilities. Any such districts shall have power to acquire and succeed to any or all of the rights, obligations and property of such cities, villages and townships respecting or connected with such functions or public utilities: Provided, That no city, village or township shall surrender any such rights, obligations or property without the approval thereof by a majority vote of the electors thereof voting on such question. Such General law shall limit the rate of taxation of such districts for their municipal purposes and restrict their powers of borrowing money and contracting debts. Under such general law, the electors of each district shall have power and authority to frame, adopt and amend its charter upon the approval thereof by a majority vote of the electors of each city, village or township, voting on such question, and through, its regularly constituted authority, to pass all laws and ordinances relating to its municipal concerns, subject to the constitution and general laws of this State.

Condemnation of excess land and property for boulevards, streets, etc.

Amendment to Article XIII of the Constitution relative to the condemnation of excess land and property for boulevards, streets, etc.

Sec. 5. Subject to this Constitution the Legislature may authorize municipalities, subject to reasonable limitations, to condemn and to take the fee to more land and property than is needed in the acquiring, opening and widening of boulevards, streets and alleys, or for any public use, and after so much of the land and property has been appropriated for any such needed public purpose, the remainder may be sold or leased with or without such restrictions as may be appropriate to the improvement made. Bonds may be issued to supply the funds to pay in whole or in part for the excess property so appropriated but such bonds shall be a lien only on the property so acquired and they shall not be included in any limitation of the bonded indebtedness of such municipality.

Revision of the Constitution.

Shall the constitution of this state be revised and a convention called therefor?

CORRESPONDENCE

Jerome

Mrs. Cora VanAllen, Mrs. Floyd Sawdey, Mrs. Lanie Walworth and Mrs. H. L. McGregor called upon Mrs. N. A. Linsday Tuesday morning at the Hillsdale Hospital while N. A. Linsday, son Wayne and daughter Dorothy, Mrs. Lee Kies and children and Mrs. Thomas Lane called on her Tuesday evening.

Rev. Johns delivered an interesting sermon at the M. E. church on Sunday evening. The Rev. took a wallop at church people who lived up to their professions on Sunday but forgot all about religion on Monday. The pastor also criticized some of the boys at Albion college for telling "smutty" stories. This sounds kind of bad for Albion but perhaps Albion is taking the example of Princeton, the most aristocratic U in America. Miss Vincent, a social worker at Princeton says that when the graduates return to Princeton for their reunions parents keep their children indoors so that they will be unable to hear the smutty jokes, songs etc which the grades take part in. Miss Vincent also expresses ideas on booze and women which make it appear that Princeton like many other bunk shooting educational institutions promotes lawlessness and bad citizenship.

Up at Minneapolis there has been one of the strangest freaks of human life which has been known since the first Siamese twins 50 years ago who were exhibited by P. T. Barnum. A couple of sisters born fastened together as one but having two sets of internal organs except the bladder died in a hospital at that city recently. They were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Medich of South Bend Indiana, and were five months of age. Up to the time of one of them contracting pneumonia both were well and strong apparently as any children. They were joined together by a band at the hips and the body was only 22 inches in length, having a head at each end while legs extended outward from the body on each side.

Free NEXT WEEK
Only
During Demonstrations of the GREAT MAJESTIC Range

October 18th to 23rd, 1926
J. M. WILLIAMS OFFERS
FREE KITCHEN-WARE SET

BY special arrangement with the Majestic Manufacturing Company we will give without cost to every purchaser of a Majestic Range, the handsome Kitchen Ware Set shown below. It is made of Extra Heavy. easy cleaning de-luxe nickel-plated Copper. Beautiful, bright and durable. We offer this unusual bargain only because these sets help to advertise the wonderful Majestic Range

The Great Majestic Range

Come Sure! Plan Now!

MRS. BROWN will be there, so will Mrs. Smith. In fact, you will probably meet most of your friends and neighbors at the Majestic demonstration all next week. Everybody is welcome. We are trying to make this the biggest and most instructive demonstration ever held in this community. That's why we are arranging to have an expert from the Majestic factory here to answer all questions. He will explain in detail why the Majestic costs less per year than any other range in the world; how it saves fuel and repairs and assures better cooking.

See This Demonstration. No Obligation

YOU owe it to yourself to investigate this range. If you can save time, trouble and money in your kitchen you want to do it—naturally. In fact, you ought to do it out of fairness to your family as well as yourself. Can the Majestic help you do this? It certainly can. Remember, Majestic is used in more homes than any other range to-day, Thats a fact backed by actual figures. Surely you want to know more about such a popular range. Come in! Look! Ask; questions! You don't have to buy, but if oou need a range you will lose money if you don't buy next week. Our free Kitchen ware offer is good for next week only.

The Range With A Reputation
IMPORTANT

THIS free offer is good on all models of the Majestic including the new model shown above. Experts have called this the finest range ever built, Uses less fuel, yet bakes perfectly, All copper reservoir gives abundant hot water all the time without extra fuel. Burnished blue polished top requires little work. Beautiful throughout with heavy nickel trimmings—doors and splasher back panelled in White, Grey or Blue enamel if desired. Has rustless floor rests: large warming closet; open-end ash pan, and oven door that will support any weight placed on it. The Majestic is made of malleable (unbreakable) iron— rivet tight, heat tight, ash tight construction.

Saves Money. Beautiful. Bakes Better

ANY Housewife ought to consider well the cooking and wearing qualities, the fuel economy and the appearance of the range she buys. Surely you know from experience with other things. that its false economy to buy a poor range that wears out quickly and often makes the best cook fail. The only true economy is economy in the long run. Therein lies the economy of the Majestic. It cuts down fuel and repair bills, and its long life of never failing efficiency makes it cost less per year of service than any other range in the world.

A SQuare Deal—Why?

THE Majestic Range demonstration is your best guarantee of complete satisfactian. Here you learn everything about the range in advance. You study it with other women who are just as anxious as you are to cook better and "buy right." There is no high pressure salesmanship. No knocking at your back door urging you to buy a bargain range you have never seen before. We are the local Majestic dealers. And we will be Right Here (long after your range is old) to guarantee its performance.

Free Demonstration. Free Kitchenware Offer Next Week Only.

OUR Free Kitchenware Offer is good for next week only during factory demonstration of the Great Majestic Range. Don't miss this opportunity.

I.—SAFETY : Building and Loan societies put 100 per cent of their investments in Real Estate. It is estimated that there are 9,000,000 share holders in Building and Loan Societies, having $5,000,000 in assets. Wayne county Savings Bank has $74,204,528 in savings :$41,140.576 is invested in Real Estate. The Gentral Savings and Trust Company has $28,961,093 in Savings, $27,294,298 are invested in Real Estate. The New York Life Insurance Company has $151,000,000 in assets invested in Illinois.

$94,000,000 Real Estate
$21,000,000 Railroad Bonds
$35,000,000 Public Utilities
$1,000,000 Municipal

Surely these facts are conclusive evidence of the safety of Real Estate.

II.—YIELD : In yield one cannot find so generous a return anywhere. In ten (10) years the following yields have been realized : Detroit 630 per cent; New York 217 per cent; Chicago 195 per cent; Atlanta 162 per cent; San Francisco, 159 per cent; Boston 137 per cent; Minneapolis 131 per cent; Kansas City 129 per cent; St. Louis 124 per cent; Cleveland 119 per cent; Philadelphia 116 per cent. Detroit yields three times as much as its next ranking city.

LETTER TO PARENTS

In conformity with the state system of uniform marking as a part of the state system of uniform child accounting, the marks indicating scholarship are as follows:

A means excellent; B is very good; C good or average: D is fair and E, failure.

Attention is called also, to the numbers 1, 2, 3 and 4, found on the report cards These numbers indicate school citizenship. In determining school citizenship, regularity in attendance and being on time, care of desks, books and papers, care of school property, attitude during class and study hours, studiousness, and behavior towards others are taken into consideration.

The number 1 indicates good citizenship; and 4 very low or failure In passing students, marks on citizenship will have considerable weight.

The report cards will be issued every six weeks.

Parents should examine these reports carefully and consult with teachers in regard to failures. We are seeking your co-operation in keeping up the standard of our school, and in behalf of the teachers we wish your children success.

Sincerely,
R. C. Young

GAME REFUGES IN UPPER PENINSULAR

The Michigan Conservation Commission is developing a system of game refuges in the Upper Peninsula which combine the refuge and public shooting ground idea, by which combination the general public receives full benefit from the refuges.

The commission's plan contemplates paying a rental for private lands equivalent to the taxes for a period of ten years, provided a lease can be secured for that period. The commission will provide a man for each tract to serve as game keeper, to keep it free from vermin and protect it against forest fires. The lease will not preclude the use of the land by the owner for timber or other purposes.

So far as practicable the refuges will comprise about 5,000 acres each and will have a shooting ground from half a mile to a mile in width around it. Each tract must be sufficiently wooded, contain live water and food and must otherwise be adapted to wild life. The upkeep and planting that is done in the refuge is to be financed from the funds derived from the 25 cents that was allotted from small game licenses to the conservation commission by the last legislature and is expected to yield about $80,000 a year.

Last Kerosene-lit Village Abandons Lamps for Power

After going to bed with the chickens for six months, Sherwood is preparing to shake off its nocturnal gloom.

The so-called progressive element of the community, consisting largely of the younger people apparently, has won its battle for the installation of a modern electric lighting system.

Sherwood was the last village in the state to discard the old-fashioned kerosene street light. Lamps were discontinued last spring. The oil oil flickerers were dismantled only because the yonger element, in control of the village council, ordered the step in the belief it would force the more conservative taxpayers to consent to electic lights.

But when the old posts were dismantled the conservatives blocked a plan to put in electricity, and the town remained dark for six months.

Another Ferry Ordered for Ann Arbor Railway

The Ann Arbor railread has let the contract for the construction of another ferry, to be operated across Lake Michigan. The ship is to be built by the Toledo Shipbuilding company and will cost approximately $850,000. It will be taken from Toledo around the Great Lakes, through the straits, and put into operation.

Anyhow, roller skates do save sole leather.

The chorus girl surely grins and bares it all right.

Ford Runs 43.8 Miles on Gallon of Gas

In a public test supervised by city and automobile club officials, a Ford Sedan equipped with Blancke Thermostatic Carburetor Control, ran 43.8 miles on one gallon of gasoline. This inexpensive control is entirely automatic and self-regulating. It makes Fords start instantly, even in zero weather, eliminates carbon formation, prevents dilution of crank case oil, avoids sputtering of motor and cuts repair bills 50 percent. Installed in two minutes. Cadillac now uses as standard equipment Thermostatic Carbureter Control under Blancke license. The Inventors, Blancke Auto Devicse Co., Dept. 4700-N, 157 E. Erie St., Chicago, want agents, who can make from $250 to $2,000 per month and are willing to send a sample at their own risk. Write today.

LAND TRUE BASIS OF ALL WEALTH

Property near Ford's Rouge plant ultimate home of 150,000 workers.

The first consideration of every wise investor is SAFETY.

Throughout history, the basis of all wealth has been real estate. No where in the world are values as stabilized and as sure to make continual and healthy increase as where growing industry is located. And no where is this more certain than in Detroit, especially on the west side near Ford's great River Rouge industries that now employs 75,000 workers.

Hundreds of other massive industries are also located on the west side—the Hub of the greatest industrial activity the world has ever known.

For the large or small investor, proportionate fortunes will be made in this section in the next few years.

As the advice of a man who has been specializing in this district and already serving a large and satisfied clientelle. Personal attention will be given each individual investor, no matter how small.

Adrian Is Barred At Present As Member of State Athletics

Two of the five members of the Michigan Inter-Collegiate Athletic association have turned down application of Adrian college for membership in the state conference, it was announced by Professor Henry Eubank of Albion college, secretary of the association.

It is probable, according to indications, that the Adrian school will be placed on probation for a year and then given equal rating with other members of the conference.

While the identity of the two dissenting colleges was not disclosed, they are known to be taking their stand because on more than one occasion, Adrian has cancelled almost summarily athletic engagements which had been scheduled for several months, on various grounds.

PERSONALITY IN BOBS IS MARKED

Personality haircuts are the newest vogue in the realm of shorn tresses.

The pocket edition blonde with fluffy hair and knowing ways, the brunette with striking features, and the in-between of classification, are due for haircuts as distinctly their own as their powder puffs. All heads will be bobbed, but the bob must be its owner's method of self-expression.

Every so often rumor insists that long hair is coming back. Mr. Klein says this is not true. In his opinion, the bobbed head is here to stay. The feminine head might just as well accept the ultimatum, and give up debating of whether to bob or not to bob, and start in on bobbing. But which kind? That isc the question. It is a day of commoners. Czars and emperors are no more, and women, queens of the universe, have cast from them their crowning glory, all in the name of liberty, comfort and youth.

There are two camps, the bobbed and the unbobbed, and a mere hairline divides them.

He-females are putting bobbed hair on the "blink!" We are either nearing the end of the bobed-hair era or we are beginning to slip a bit. Those who contend that women can stay "put" in styles believe that short hair will remain indifinitely. But those who are more or less in the "know" claim that women must vary the present way of dressing the hair since intricate hairdressing has been a feminine indoor sport throughout the ages.

The trend has turned from Siberia to South America so far as furs for formal evening wraps are concerned. The beautiful white and gray of chinchilla, which is a South American rodent, is supplanting ermine, a rodent of the north. One of the most charming evening wraps seen recently is of green velvet, lined with green and pink velvet and wis a deep collar and border of Chinchilla.

Hose are still light-colored. One window displays 25 different shades, ranging from gun-metal to white, and there is a name for each tint.

The street frock is still short, but gracefully so. It is said in New York that Floria Swanson appeared in a bouffant style street gown of brown crepe with angle-length skirt. When asked, "Why?" she replied, "Oh, just because I wanted a change, but certainly not because long skirts are the style."

The Beret tam is appearing in all colors. The Beret is a French creation that resembles the artist's tam, though slightly smaller. It fits the head snugly, with no hair showing. Merely the tips of the ears may peek out.

A striking Agnes turban of purple and lavender hues is worn with a dark blue georgette with bloused effect and overlapped skirt. Lizard skin oxfords with extremely high heels and purple hand-bag, complete the outfit. No hair is shown with the turban, but large pearl earrings are worn.

The earring is probably due for a combe-back with the turban. With no hair showing, it is almost a necessity, considering that the toque is much more severe than the soft felt and velours.

Henry Ford's Cellar Being Filled with Cider

Henry Ford, preserver of all things ancestral, shipped, emiled, smacked his lips, sipped again. He had discovered near Sudburg, Mass, a new "elixir" at a roadside farm stand on the Boston Post road—"peach cider."

And today the workers in the vineyard and ochards on Ford's Mt. Nobscot farm, near his historic Wayside inn, turned their attention to making a "cellar full" of the latest beverage.

Here's how: Each peach, usually a windfall, is split in two. The stone is removed. All bruised portions are placed in a press. The juice is peach cider.

Today will be yesterday tomorrow.

URGE REVISION IN SPORTSMEN CODE

The racial revisions suggested in the sportsmen's legal code by delegates who attended the legislative conference of the Michigan Conservation Congress at Saginaw will have far-reaching effect upon the future activities of the hunters and fishermen, if adopted.

Such recommendations as the establishment of a $1 fee for resident hunters and fishermen to provide funds for the purchase of 5,000,000 acres of delinquent tax lands held in trust by the state, which could be utilized as forest preserves, game refuge, public hunting and fishing grounds, together with a report favoring the closing of the partridge season during 1927 and 1928, will have a tremendous influence on the state legislature which convenes Jan. 1, 1927, especially if the sportsmen aligned with the conservation congress support the principles laid down at the conference.

At the same time the delegates went on record as favoring a ban on the hunting of grouse for two years. They declined to even consider a plank in their legislative platform that would recommend a "limited open season" on quail, even after the game sanctuaries of the state become an assured fact.

The delegates went on record in favor of keeping the act providing the conservation department with discretionary powers in administering to the needs of game, fish and forest conservation.

A sentimental note crept into the conference when it adpoted resolutions, recommending the passage of laws restraining the sale of Christmas trees except under the supervision of the state department of conservation. This exception was made to allow bona fide growers to market their trees, after having proved to the department of conservation ocials that the trees were actually grown for sale and not taken from lands owned by some other person or possibly state lands held in trust.

Roxburgh Nominated as Head of State Grange

Formal notification of his nomination for master of the Michigan State Grange to succeed A. B. Cook, of Owosso, has been received by State Representative George F. Roxburgh, of Reed City. The nomination is considered equivalent to election.

Owner of a fine 100-acre farm near Reed City, Mr. Roxburgh has been active in local grange work for 20 years. He is secretary of the Osceola County Pomona grange at present.

Quits After Serving as Organist for 57 Years

After serving 57 years as organist of the College Baptist Church, Hillsdale, Prof. Melville W. Chase has resigned and retired as a professional musician and instructor in music. His long service in the church is believed to be a record, as he started playing the organ when it was installed by the College Baptists.

Failing health caused the retirement of Prof. Chase as director of music at Hillsdale College some time ago.

HOT WINTER VIEW OF 'PETER RABBIT'

Pierre Rabideau, mayor of St Clair Flats by appointment of the governor of Michigan, is confident the coming winter is to be so warm that straw hats may come into style about Jan. 15. Mr. Rabideau is better known among folk who frequent the flats as Peter Rabbit, and has acquired much wisdom in the lore of Mother Nature during his 40 years' residence on the marshes. And that he has been attentive to his studies is testified to by the fact that he has never been on a raildoad train or trolley car, preferring to remain at home and tend to business.

Mayor Rabideau is convinced there are tropical months due between Nov. and March because the muskrats in the swamps are migrating north. He says it is a sure sign, that such a journey never is resorted to except when the rodents realize they must find a colder climate or perish of sunstroke.

Mr. Robideau says there is no wisdom to be gathered from goose bones when it comes to giving anything like an accurate forcast of the weather.

COLLEGE MEN FAIL TO KEEP UP BIRTHS

Much has been said, both scientifically and otherwise, of the fact htat college graduates are failing to contribute their share to the continuation f the race. In an effort to determine whether the inclination of the better educated parents to limit the family size has affected Michigan State college alumni, C. V. Green and Dr. H. R. Hunt, of the college zoology department, have conducted an investigation.

They found, as a matter of figures alone, that the birth rate has been unsatisfactory, and their observations are in general agreement with those made on graduates of other colleges and universities.

Dr. Hunt declares in a pamphlet issued covering this study, "It is interesting to note that, htough many of the alumni of Michigan State college came from rural districts, this has not been reflected in an elevated birth rate. This more than ordinarily capable section of the population has not increased much, while the population of the United States as a whole has grown rapidly. The birth rate, therefore, in the families of these alumni has been unsatisfactory."

It was found that a total group of 574 individuals has produced 716 children, but that the death rate, on the other hand, has been small.

An interesting fact disclosed by the investigation is that the number of children to the family has decreased from 3.6 in 1870-74 to 2.2 in the period, 1895-99.

Man Hit by Foul Ball Asks $50,000 in Suit

The Detroit Baseball company is named defendant in a suit for $50,000 by Malcolm G. Valade, salesman, for injuries he received when he was struck by a foul ball at Navin field two years ago. Valade charges he was seriously incapacitated by the ball when he was a spectator at a game.

BEAR CUB ROUTS DOG WITH HORNETS

Stevens Cook, with a farm home in Taylor township, south of Dearborn, claims to be the owner of the most intelligent bear cub outside of college. Not only is Teddy unusually sagacious, he says, but has a wonderfully developed sense of strategy and an amazing ability to turn circumstances to the undoing of his enemies.

His defeat of a hostile terrier in a battle of wits is cited by Cook to sustain Teddy's claims. Teddy was captured in the north woods last captured in the north woods last May when Cook was on a fishing expedition, and he was so small he could be carried in his pocket. He has not grown as he should and is still an unimpressive creature as to bulk, probably running more to brain than sinew.

One of his most notable foes is a small terrier.

He was on his usual beat and located Teddy gamboling around a good distancee from home. The terrier went after him with a yap and Teddy ran for dear life.

Teddy reached his city refuge well ahead of Towser, and ascednded into the branches of a friendly maple, where he sat quietly to see what would develop. The terrier circled the maple, barking truculently.

Teddy after a few minutes fidgeting espied a hornet's nest hanging from a limb. Edging out within striking distance he sent it whirling through the air with a well aimed blow.

The hornets were out in force long before it struck the ground, and made for Teddy with the purpose of taking vengeance. But the cub merely buried his nose between his paws, and presenting a body heavily furred, defiedshrd ahhede-bit shrd shrd shrd fied their attack. Waps and bees take little interestt in animals that do no flee, so they soon left Teddy and flee, so they soon left Teddy and fell upon the terrier.

Detroit Plans Park as Bird Sanctuary

The city of Detroit may set aside 40 acres in the River Rouge Park as a municipal bird sanctuary, according to R. E. Smith, city forester.

The 40-acre tract lies along the banks of the Rouge river and is thickly overgrown with alders, seedling maples, ash, dogwood and hazels, forming with the mature elms, oaks and basswoods, a natural arboretum that is ideal for the purpose, Smith says. During the spring and summer months the tract is literally alive with birds, unmolested by man because of the heavy underbrush.

FREEZES FISH TO PRORE HIS STORY

Here's a new wrinkle in proving fish stories. The trouble with mounting trophies has been that it usually takes a long while for the taxidermist to do his jb, and by the time the finished trophy is delivered the story of the kill is half forgotten. Jim Norris, in Grand Rapids, devised the new scheme by way of proving the truth of a good yarn and at the same time having his big fish for the Norris menu.

During the past summer Norris has caught a number of sizeable rainbow trout in the lower waters f the Pere Marquette river. He told friends in Chicago about getting eight and nine pound trout in Michigan, but they just winked at one another, told Jim to think up a better story next time, and that was that. When in the closing hours of the trout season Norris brought an eight-pounder to net below Walhalla bridge in Mason county his first thoughts were of the doubting Thomases. The weather was hot. He couldn't very well carry his prize trout to Chicago without risking spoliation. But he did rush back to Grand Rapids with the fish. There his first thought was to pack the trout on ice and drive to Chicago. But any fisherman knows that packing fish on ice for transport isn't wholly satisfactory. So Jim was stumped. Then somebody suggested freezing ice around it. Why not? And it worked.

Olivet Doctor Is Host to Kids for Watermelon Feast

In the life of a boy there comes times when the world is rosy with joy and his cup of happiness fairly runs over. The Fourth of July stands out in bold relief, and there are Christmas and Thanksgiving. But in the calender of Olivet boys, and girls as well, there is a day tha tis looked forward to just as keenly as these, a special dispensation granted by Dr. Phil H. Quick, of the village. In preparation for this event the doctor each year plants a bountiful supply of melon seeds, and when the big green ones respond with the right "plunk" to the doctor's practiced thump, the word goes out that the annual melon party is to be held, and children flock to the Quick's back yard where the orgy is staged.

Seldom does this event crowd into October, but the fruit was slow in developing this season.

Scholarship Awarded Music Educator's Son

Dudley Powers, son of Prof. J. Harold Powers, head of the music department at Central Normal, Mt. Pleasant, has won a music scholarship at the Jouillard Foundation in New York City. Dudley is 16 years of age, a celloist, who has won recognition in Michigan and in colleges of the west. The scholarship is the equivalent of $1,000 in tuition and private instruction at the Jouillard Foundation.

TWO FAMOUS WOMEN BORN IN SAME YEAR

Queen Victoria and Lydia E. Pinkham

MRS. ANNA McHENRY
1005 E. PLUM STREET, MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

In the year 1819, two babies were born whose lives were destined to have a far-reaching influence. One was born in a stern castle of Old England, the other in a humble farmhouse in New England.

Queen Victoria through her wisdom and kindliness during a long and prosperous reign has become enthroned in the hearts of the British people. Lydia E. Pinkham through the merit of her Vegetable Compound has made her name a household word in thousands of American homes.

Marshall, Illinois.—"After my second child was born, I never saw a well day for five years. My father was telling his druggist about my condition, and the druggist insisted that father take a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have me try it, as it had helped his wife. I had given up, but to please father and mother, I commenced taking your medicine and in a week I had begun to feel better. When I passed through the Change of Life, I was taking the Vegetable Compound and I had no trouble of any kind."—MRS. ANNA MCHENRY, 1005 E. Plum St., Marshall, Illinois.

Another Woman Helped

Philadelphia, Penna.—Mrs. Caroline Nagy, of 2717 Sears St., in a recent letter to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., says that after her child was born she was in a very weak condition. She could not seem to regain her health and went to her mother for advice. She told her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it had helped her when in like condition, and it has helped her mother also. So Mrs. Nagy started taking it. She felt better after taking the first bottle,—after taking six bottles her weakness and other troubles disappeared, and she is never done praising the Compound.

In some families the fourth generation is learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

WHY
General Motors Cars are sold on the GMAC Plan

1 BECAUSE many people prefer to purchase cars out of income and General Motors wants you to get value for your automobile dollar—whether you buy for cash or on credit.

2 BECAUSE, being operated by a member of the General Motors family, the GMAC Plan assures sound credit service designed to hold good will.

3 BECAUSE, under the GMAC Plan, the cost of a General Motors car purchased on credit is the standard cash delivered price, plus only the low GMAC financing charge.

The GMAC Plan is available only through General Motors dealers. It may be comfortably fitted to the individual requirements of buyers with assured income. Your nearest General Motors dealer will explain its advantages.

"Quite right, Baxter." Cox's manner was crisp. "Mr. Warner is entirely in our confidence. Sit down."

"Oh, very well. I take it that Mr. Warner knows all about my interest in my friend Thompson in connection with this matter. An excellent engineer, I believe?"

Neither Cox nor Caleb answered. Baxter drew a long envelope from his inside pocket with a bit of a flourish. Cox's eyes fixed upon it. He fancied that this was the boomerang.

"This company has got to have Hermanos valley for its reservoir, Hermanos canyon at its head for its dam site. Never mind where I got the information. There's a model in your directors' room that proves my assertion." For a moment he faltered. Cox and Caleb had exchanged glances. Baxter seemed suspicious of them.

"I've got the privilege of sale on that property," he went on. "For one year, and thereafter until revoked by the party of the first part. Now deceased. It is an option-contract. Binding on the heirs and assigns of the late Captain Clinton. I'm going to offer it to the company at a fair price—with the stipulation already stated to you concerning Mr. Thompson. Here's the agreement. The price to me, as you will see, is one hundred and twenty-five dollars an acre. My price to you, one hundred and fifty. A fair profit and a fair price. No chance for condemnation proceedings." He handed the document to Cox, who ran swiftly over the two pages, refolded it and passed the paper to Caleb.

Caleb's face hardened as he read. The essence of the contract, as it applied to the situation, was that in it Baxter was given permission to sell the land without reservation as to its uses, for any purposes, without mention of the ranch-house—or of the little cemetery where Clinton himself now lay buried.

"That's my hand," said Baxter. "Your play, Cox. But this thing has got to be settled immediately. Or—I go to Oakville."

Cox took the paper refolded by Caleb as the latter laid it on the desk. And he handed it back to Baxter.

"Doesn't interest us," he said.

Baxter's jaw sagged. He checked a "What?" by biting his underlip as Cox went on:

"So far as the Crystal Springs Water company is concerned, so far as any water company is concerned, that carbon is not worth the paper it is typed on."

Baxter had braced himself and managed a laugh as he leaned forward.

"I'm not here to bluff," he said. "Why isn't it?"

"I'll tell you, if you insist." Cox spoke as if he had already dismissed the matter and talked only out of bored politeness. "You got information about our project, Warner's preliminary prospectus and the model in the next room, through leaks in this office. There are leaks in every office. We guard against 'em. Warner found out long ago that the bed rock, as the side formations, in Hermanos canyon are not structurally able to support an impounding dam.

"He gave up the idea of that dam site, but we didn't bother to change the model. The details of Warner's amended plans were submitted to us and we approved of them. But those details, transcribed by a man whom I can absolutely trust—my own secretary—were not filed where anyone might get a look at them—as was the case with the original prospectus. They were filed back of you, Baxter, in that steel cabinet, here in my own room, under a key that I alone hold. No leaks from that, my son. I repeat, we are not in the least interested in your option."

The boomerang had struck its wielder.

Baxter looked from one to the other, a muscle twitching high up in one cheek. His glance lingered venomously on Caleb, who had outwitted him.

"So that's your joker card, is it? Well, I've got one to match it. Cut this out." He put the paper away, and stood up. "Don't forget I've got enough information to interest Oakville. I've got an idea they'll block your project. You won't be able to buy up your lands on the quiet. I'll attend to that even if Oakville doesn't take hold. Though I fancy they will and pay me for the information, too. I'll put the ranchers wise and I'll boost the price of Caliente Sink and all the watershed until the cost will swamp your scheme at the outset." He whirled on Caleb with a snarl. "And you'll lose your big stake and your job at the same time, Warner, for all your cleverness. Good morning—and be d—d to both of you!"

Baxter, starting for the exit, stopped short as it opened abruptly. He stared and faltered as Mary Morgan came swiftly in and shut the door, leaning against it. Her face was white save for two spots of red, her blue eyes were menacing as she fixed them upon Baxter and her breast heaved tumultuously while she took some papers from inside her blouse and held them tight gripped.

Baxter made a sudden move toward the girl, his eyes fixed on the papers she held as if he had suddenly become suspicious of them. She held out one hand against him.

"Mr. Warner," she said, her breath coming short, "please give these papers to Mr. Cox."

Caleb took them wonderingly, though he sensed the culmination of an act in the drama between Baxter and this girl, a scene in which he was on for a purpose, together with Cox. She stood fast in front of the door, her arms spread, her fingers clutching the outside of the frame on either side. Baxter strode toward her.

"This doesn't interest me," he said. "Get out of my road."

"No!" The monosyllable was an explosion of loathing and contempt. Baxter recoiled a little before the girl. The blonde stenographer was an embodiment of hatred and of determination.

"Not until Mr. Cox has read those papers and heard what I am going to say."

Caleb looked at Cox and the latter nodded slightly in understanding.

"All right, Miss Morgan," said Caleb. "You needn't stand by the door. Mr. Baxter will stay."

She looked at him and read his face, then moved away a little while Caleb lounged against the door panels and Baxter retreated before the fury that the girl manifested. Cox looked at his transformed stenographer through half-closed lids. He had not yet read the papers.

"I don't imagine you hear office gossip, Mr. Cox," she began, "but almost everyone in your office knows that I am going to have a baby. This—Baxter—is its father. He has promised a score of times to marry me or to give me money enough to go away. He preferred the latter. And his promises were like himself, worthless!"

Baxter looked away from her scorn, first at Cox, sphinxlike in his chair, then at Caleb guarding the door with an air of willing readiness to oppose his exit. He had lost his poise. He cringed under the whip of her words and attitude. Then he tried to brave it out, with a sneer that lacked definition.

"This sort of stuff . . ." commenced Baxter.

"Keep quiet." The order from Cox was so brusque that the lesser spirit quailed. "Go on, Miss Morgan."

"Baxter came to me," continued the girl, "some time ago with a form of option that he wanted me to type. In it Captain Clinton agreed to sell for farming purposes only; he reserved the ranch-house and some few acres from all sale. It was to be typed in duplicate and I made an extra carbon, which I kept. You have it there. I kept it for reference. But when he brought me a blank form the day before yesterday, with the name of Captain Clinton and a witness already signed, when he asked me to type in the manuscript text that he supplied and to do it so carefully that it would look as if the signatures had been naturally made, in spaces coming at the right distance from the conclusion of the typing, it was not hard to know that something was wrong—that Baxter had practiced those signatures on blank sheets until he had got them perfect. This option had no reservations. He did not want a carbon of that—no copy of it will be found among Captain Clinton's papers. But I made a carbon, the second paper that you hold, Mr. Cox."

Cox had glanced over the documents as the girl made her points and now he laid them down.

"You suspected the signatures were forgeries? You knew Captain Clinton was dead?" he asked.

"Yes." She spoke half defiantly. "I knew that. I have done more than that. I gave Baxter information I got in the office here. I did it all because, up till then, I wanted him to marry me. He swore that he would if I typed this last contract. He said it would bring him in a lot of money, that the signatures were genuine. I didn't challenge that because . . ."

For a moment she wavered but caught herself up.

"But I didn't trust him. That is why I made the second carbon. When I asked him to go with me and get our license, he laughed at me. Then I did accuse him of forgery. He said that if it was, Clinton would not rise from the dead to dispute it, that no one could detect it, that the witness only signed with a cross and could not read what was in the option. And that I was just as deep in it as he was. I suppose it was criminal. I have resigned my position here. I have played false to the company. You can do whatever you want with me. I do not mind punishment as long as he has to share it."

Baxter winced. The girl was in deadly earnest.

"How about it, Baxter?" asked Cox.

"A mess of lies. She's cooked it up because I won't marry her. And I wouldn't because I am as doubtful of the paternity of the child as she affects to be of the authenticity of the option."

"Oh!" The girl stood rigid, her hands changed to talons. Baxter took a swift step back. Caleb came from the door, his fists doubled. Then Cox, coming out from behind his desk in rapid movement, caught her as she tottered and helped her to a chair, where she collapsed, sobbing hysterically.

"Both those options are genuine," blustered Baxter. "I defy you to prove them otherwise. I got the second one from Clinton after my land deal fell through. He was anxious to realize on his estate."

"You admit the two documents?" Cox's words were crisp.

"Certainly. And now we'll leave Miss Morgan and my personal affairs out of it. If you haven't anything more to say, our proposition stands as it did. You'll hear from Oakville, or from me through the press. You can't bully me, Cox."

Cox leveled his forefinger at Baxter, his eyes steely, his words driven home like the blows of a hammer.

"If you say anything to Oakville, to the press, to anyone, concerning the affairs of this company, if you annoy in any way this young lady, I'll start somethin', Baxter, that you will find it very hard to finish. You know me, and I know you. You're clever but you're not sound. The witness to these options, Padilla, may be illiterate, but I fancy he'll remember that he did not sign two papers in the same day. You forgot to change your date, Baxter, when you altered the text. We won't even need Miss Morgan's testimony. And, if I have to get after you, my son, I won't hesitate to bring any influence to bear that I possess. You're trailing to a smash fast enough on your own account, but you'll travel a lot more swiftly if I get busy. Now, you grasshopper, hop out of this office!"

He turned on his heel. Baxter slunk past Caleb to the door. His jauntiness had nothing left but a whisper. But that was virulent as the hiss of a snake to Caleb.

"I'm not through with you yet." And his face, his eyes, were not those of a sane man.

Mary Morgan had smothered her hysteria and stood by the desk, awaiting judgment.

"You spoke of going away, Miss Morgan," said Cox in a voice that surprised Caleb by its gentleness, as it did the girl. She looked at him hesitatingly, wiping her eyes.

"I meant to go east, until it was over," she said. "A friend," she did not glance at Caleb, "furnished me the money. But I will stay here where you can find me. I should rather not leave California—only . . ."

"You don't have to. Though we shan't need you in this affair. Baxter's through. After it is all over, come to me, or write me and I shall be glad to help you to a position. With the Capitol Land and Irrigation company at Sacramento, in all probability. They will always be glad of service as capable as yours. You have managed to render us a service that quite wipes out anything else you may have done foolishly."

Bewildered, she tried to express thanks.

"That will be quite all right, Miss Morgan. Don't forget to apply to me. And now you are excused for the day. You can go out through my door to the elevator. I'll have Harry get your things."

Caleb had imagined Cox just but not lightly turning to the side of mercy. Still the girl had effectively disposed of Baxter. And she had in all likelihood saved Caleb a hundred thousand dollars, besides his salaried position. After she had gone Cox turned from the window.

"Poor little devil," he said. "Baxter made a fool of her. I've got a girl at home, Warner, just about her age. She hasn't had to earn her living, lack for pretty things to wear or her full share of fun and good times. This girl may turn out all right, with a helping hand. She has spunk. As for Baxter, he hopped too far. She's cleverer than he is. He's got a chrome streak down his back; he's zebra-striped with yellow when it comes to a showdown. D—d shame the girl hasn't got a brother. He deserves a good licking."

Caleb, remembering the fight on the bridge, knowing Baxter's financial straits, fancied he had not been without punishment. That final threat he dismissed as idle.

"He nearly had us," wound up Cox. "Publicity—or Oakville—would have ruined our plans. But he's hopped for the last time in my meadow."

Belief in Mesmerism Once Was Widespread

Ever since prehistoric days there have been medical quacks. One of the strangest was Anton Mesmer. In Paris he found prodigious vogue, especially among women. To enter his house was an impressive experience. He had assistants who were claimed to be able to transfer magnetism from their finger tips to patients. If a female patient were in a hysterical state, Mesmer himself, in his robe of silk embroidered with gold, and with his ivory wand, would stroke her eyebrows or her spine and calm her. The queen of France commended Mesmerism and a pension of 20,000 francs was offered Mesmer if he could prove that he had made any discovery in medicine and would communicate it to the king's physicians.

Mesmer objected to the latter part of the offer and left Paris. Two royal commissions were then appointed, on one of which Benjamin Franklin was a member. After five months of experiment a report unfavorable to Mesmer was returned, after which Mesmer retired to the country, with a fortune amounting to 340,000 francs. He died in 1815, at the age of eighty-one.—Dearborn Independent.

Parent of Languages

Sanskrit is the ancient classical tongue of the Hindus, and the oldest preserved form of Aryan, or Indo-European, language in existence. It ceased to be spoken about the Fourth century B. C., and is preserved only in the Hindu sacred writings. Sanskrit is the parent of all the modern Aryan languages of India, and the language most closely related to the original tongue of the ancient Aryans, from which have descended the Celtic, Graeco-Latin, Teutonic, Slavonic and Persian languages. Sanskrit literature, which begins with the Vedas, extends back as far as 2000 or 1500 B. C. Sanskrit is still cultivated as a classical language by the Hindus, and remains the sacred language of the Brahmans.—Kansas City Star.

MORE POWER AND SUPERIOR QUALITY

New Wage Solution

Chinese coolies in tea godowns pulled a new stunt in the history of labor movements during their recent strike when they kidnaped three of their employers in China, and taking them to a vacant lot, forced them to sign a bond acceding to their demands for an increase of 10 cents silver a day. More than 1,000 employees benefited by the action.

He Remembered

Two children, a brother and sister, had a dispute which ended in a fight. The little boy was on a visit to his aunt's, and, wishing to relate the affair, said: "Me and sister had a fight."

And the aunt asked: "Who whipped?"

The little fellow honestly answered: "Dad did!"

South Converts Own Cotton

In 1860 the South used in its own industries 200,000 bales of cotton, but in 1925 the number of bales manufactured in sight of the cotton fields was 4,000,000, showing the tremendous increase in industrial activity in the South. Last year there were 17,000,000 active spindles in the southern mills against 16,000,000 active spindles in the North. In 1900 there were only 4,000,000 spindles in the South against 14,400,000 in the North.

Trio Of Famed Cows Headed For Detroit

"Brownie" and "Lucy", two famous grade dairy cows, meet for the first time when the National Dairy Exposition is held on the Michigan State Fair grounds, October 6 to 13.

Although they have never met, "Brownie" and "Lucy" are staunch friends for they are members of the economical and profitable milk producers' association. It is a rather elite organization as comparatively few cows belong.

"Brownie" is a grade Ayrshire cow and is owned by Robert Cripps Camden, Maine. She is the world's record grade cow for her breed, having produced 20,140 lbs. of milk and 891 lbs. of butterfat in one year.

Larson met Cripps and his famous cow at the Dairy Exposition at Indianapolis last year and promised "Brownie" that she would have an opportunity to meet "Lucy" at Detroit.

J. E. Burnett, superintendent of cattle exhibits, announces that he has a surprise for both "Brownie" and "Lucy". "Short Horns", a grade Jersey dairy cow from Antrim county, Michigan, recently completed a year's test with a record of over 20,000 lbs of milk and 800 lbs of butterfat, and is also coming to the Dairy Exposition.

Legislative Notes

There will be four proposed State Constitutional Amendments and one other question of much importance, to be voted on at the coming election November 2. The proposed amendments are:

An amendment relative to the term of office of county sheriffs.

An amendment for the purpose of creating metropolitan districts.

An amendment authorizing excess condemnation for municipalities.

An amendment proposing an increase in compensation of members of the State Legislature.

The question of importance, to which I wish to call the attention of the Michigan white ribboners, is "A question of general revision of the State Constitution, and the calling of a convention therefor."

If this question should be decided favorably by the voters of Michigan, each senatorial district in the state would be entitled to three delegates to the constitutional convention. The convention would have power to undertake a general revision of the state constitution.

The Constitution of Michigan at this time contains a provision prohibiting the manufacture and sale etc., of intoxicating liquors.

Should a Constitutional Convention be held at this time great effort would be made by those opposed to prohibition to elect "wet" delegates, and much influence would undoubtedly be brought to bear upon the delegates making up the convention to omit our present dry provision from the proposed new constitution.

The Constitution of Michigan is dry now and so all right as it is. Let us not risk changes at this time. Vote NO on the question of a constitutional convnetion to revise the state convention.

Start State Dairy And Alfalfa Drive

Dairy-alfalfa campaigns which have reached 56 counties in the state since 1920 will be continued in four counties of the state beginning November 5 and ending December 3. Michigan had 74,000 acres of alfalfa in 1919 and this year the acreage is reported as 500,000 by the Farm Crops Department of M. S. C.

College specialists, Larry Kurtz and Paul Miller from the Crops Department and George Girrbach, Robert Addy and James Hays from the Dairy Department of the college will work with the county agricultural agents of Muskegon, Missaukee, St. Clair, and Midland counties in the dairy-alfalfa campaign which begins in Muskegon county November 5.

Michigan farmers had 3,000,000 acres of hay the past year. Only 16 percent of the meadows of Michigan are producing alfalfa. The average production for mixed hay is one and one half tons an acre. Alfalfa produces two and one half tons of hay from two cuttings each year. The increase of a ton an acre from the 500,000 acres of alfalfa grown this year is worth 10,000,000 dollars to Michigan farmers.

Each farmer who has an alfalfa field on his farm is the owner of a minature Muscle Schoals nitrate plant. Each ton of alfalfa hay contains 47 pounds of nitrogen taken from the air. Nitrogen costs 18 cents a pound when purchased as a fertilizing material. The nitrogen also makes alfalfa hay the best forage for dairy cattle and reduces the amount of high priced concentrates which Michigan dairymen must buy each year.

Have liver and bacon for dinner rather than breakfast. For one thing, people are not demanding the heavy type of breakfast formerly eaten. Liver is one of the most important meats in regard to the protein and calories it furnishes the body, and it also contains all three vitamins. Recent experiments have shown it to be one of the most valuable sources of iron in cases of anemia. No distinction in food value is made between the various kinds of liver.

New Monorail Railway A Reality

The city of Mt Clemens has been asked to grant a franchise to a company who expects to put in a system of railroad that eclipses anything yet on record. The new system will be suspended in air above street traffic on one rail and will glide so noiseless and swiftly across the country that the amazing speed of 120 miles an hour is easily attained and the conditions will be much more pleasant than as now with the steam railroad.

Frank Potter who is consulting engineer for the Rapid Transportation Company will seek to establish this franchise and the company is planning to link Chicago Detroit and Flint, Port Huron and Toledo with this kind of conveyance. The sixty-five miles from Port Huron to Detroit will be covered in exactly forty minutes, comfortably and without noise. The Detroit Depot would be near the General Motors building and would follow Woodward Avenue north to Pontiac and Royal Oak.

Port Huron's city commission has been considering granting permission for the line to enter its limits during the past two weeks and sought to learn the financial status of the company by writing to the secretary of state of Delaware, in which state it is supposed to be incorporated. The secretary replied that the compaay was not listed in the records.

Mr. Potter said Thursday that the papers were sent to a branch office in Wilmington instead of Dover, Delaware and that the secretary didn't know they had reached the other office.

The Village of Halfway is now investigating the company which Mr. Potter claims is composed of a number of wealthy men. St Clair voted Monday night to allow the line to enter the city and to use a street between Second and Fifth streets in passing through the town Seventy five persons attended the meeting at which approval was granted.

He Says He Got Yhe Premiums

"Lew Barber wishes to say that he is the only exhibitor of U. K. C. pups who received a first premium at the Hillsdale Fair this season and he says it required boxing gloves to get that from an A. K. C. judge."

If Mr. Barber or anyone else that is interested, will go to the Secretary's Office at Hillsdale and look over his books, they will find there that the Wolverine Beagle Puppies won 1st premiums in their class and check was drawn for same.

As the Treasurer of the Hillsdale Agricultural Society, J. M. Williams lives in North Adams and this check has or will pass through his hands, I feel sure, if he is asked he will verify my statement.

The writer saw the Publisher of the Advocate at the Dog Tent on Saturday of the Fair and reported to him, then that the Wolverine Beagle Kennels had won two 1sts, and two 2nd premiums at the show and the Secretary's books and my four 1926 ribbons will prove my statement true, and no boxing gloves were needed to win them either.

In regard to Judge Dando of Battle Creek I consider him a very fair and impartial judge. If Mr. Barber will read up on the Dog show game he will be more careful what statements he makes.

I leave on October 24th for Warsaw, Indiana taking some of my U. K C. Beagles with me, to take part in the United National Field Trials where I expect to meet all comers from the north to the south from the east to the west, both U. K. C. and A. K. C. and no boxing gloves will be allowed there and may the best dogs win.

With malice toward none, and good will to all I remain

Yours for Registered Dogs

Amateur Judges Win Honors At National

Students of M. S. C. won many honors at the National Dairy Show held in Detroit. Harold J. Foster Rives Junction, won first place in the student Holstein judging contest and Theodore Knopf, Blissfield, placed second. The M. S. C. team won first over teams from 26 colleges competing in this event. Gordon Whitburn, Maronisco, was one of the Michigan State team.

The team was coached by John Burnett, associate professor of dairy husbandry. A scholarship of 400 dollars was one of the prizes won by Mr. Foster.

A great deal of competition developed in the farmers judging contests held at the same show. Delos Parrish, Fairgrove, won first on Jersey judging; C. S. Baldwin, Bennington, first for Holsteins and H. G. Tyrrell, Detroit, first for Guernseys. These men were all members of a cow testing association in their community.

A special inspection meeting is to be held at the Monroe County corn borer experiment station of October 21, with all people of the state who are interested in the borer invited to attend.

A general short course in agriculture, running for 16 weeks in each of two winters, will open at the M. S. C. on October 25, according to announcement made here. This will be the first of the more than a dozen special short courses in agriculture and home economics which will be offered at M. S. C. during the coming winter most of the others starting in January. Forty different subjects are offered in the "Sixteen Weeks" general course, according to R. H. Tenny, director of the short course work. This course is said to be very practical, taking up nearly all important phases of Michigan agriculture and giving the student a fund of everyday workable knowledge.

For serious scorch stains the the following procedure may be used: Moisten a piece of cotton cloth in hydrogen peroxide and place over the stain, cover with a dry cloth. Iron with a medium hot iron. If the hydrogen peroxide soaks through the dry cloth, replace with another cloth. Be very careful to see that the hydrogen peroxide does not come in contact with the iron as it will rust the iron very rapidly. Brown stains will then be left on any garment which the iron touches. For the same reason, do not iron the fabric from which the stain has been removed until the hydrogen peroxide has been well rinsed from it. This method must be used carefully on colored fabrics because the dyes may be bleached out. However, it can be used successfully on any kind of white fabric.

This investigation is an opportunity for farmers to submit their side of the land taxation question, says Mr. Newton. A high percentage of questionnaires filled out and returned will insure accuracy in the figure determined upon to represent the ratio between the earning power of farms and their assessed valuation. Mailing of the question forms was started on October 1.

Vote for Republican State Candidates on November 2

For GOVERNOR

Fred W.
GREEN

They Understand State Problems

A vote for Republican candidates is a vote for progress—Roads, Conservation, Sound Government.

Republican State officers can best serve Michigan because they are affiliated with the party that is in national power.

Fred W. Green typifies the ideals which the people of the State desire to find in a Governor—he is the man the people want.

The affairs of the State in all departments including administrative, legislative, and judicial are assured intelligent, conscientious, vigorous attention by the election of the Republican nominees of 1926.
